Hampton Park project – locals speak out about mental health pressures

By Lily Plass, ABC Western Plains

RURAL RESIDENTS between Wongarbon and Dubbo say a renewable energy proposal has driven a wedge through their tight-knit community, as developers roll out more mental health support for affected landholders.

The Hampton Park solar development, a part of Australia's first declared renewable energy zone (REZ), has triggered an emotional response from affected landholders.

"This development is driving a nail in our community out here," Michael Edwards, who has lived in the area for 35 years, said.

"The construction out here is going to turn our lives upside down."

The community's campaign against the project comes amid the release of an interim report from a parliamentary inquiry into the impacts of REZs on communities and industries in NSW.

The report found there has been "inadequate consultation between the NSW government, renewable energy developers and the Central-West Orana community".

It said that among the impacts of this were the mental health of community members and the "eroding of social cohesion".

The Director of the Institute for Infrastructure in Society at the Crawford School of Public Policy, Australian National University professor Sara Bice explained why the rollout of renewables projects had caused backlash in some communities.

"For many rural Australians, the energy transition will require major, likely irreversible, changes of scale and nature that could alter their local communities, land, livelihoods, or identities," Dr Bice said.

"Far fewer urban residents will be asked to make such trade-offs or sacrifices for the common good.

"Communities live in places, not projects."

The report recommended the state government "urgently conduct an independent cumulative impact study" on the Central-West Orana REZ and that EnergyCo provide mental health support to affected landowners.

Sleepless nights

Fourth-generation farmer Angus Kelly, whose property adjoins to the project, said the mental health impact was often underestimated.

"There's been a lot of sleepless nights, rolling over all the what-ifs," he said.

My dad is in his 80s. Other projects have affected him over time, but nothing to this extent."

In a statement, the developer of the Hampton Park project, Australian Renewable Energy Services (ARES), said it recognised the 360-hectare solar project and 180-megawatt battery project meant a great deal of change for the local community, and it was offering support.

Lack of crisis care on Wellington workshop agenda

Wellington Domestic & Family Violence accommodation workshop

Last Monday I was able to join the morning session in the WACHS building of the meeting of the Wellington Family &Domestic Violence Collective (WFDVC).

WFDVC is a voluntary group of Government and Non-Government Agencies, and community representatives, working together to support victims of domestic and family violence within the Wellington community.

The WFDVC has identified Wellington to have no crisis, temporary or transitional accommodation for women and children escaping domestic and family violence.

The geographic isolation of Wellington places additional challenges to women and children, often causing them to leave Wellington to source accommodation, losing access to critical support networks and travel off Country.

Recently, the WFDVC has collaborated with The Family Safety Collaboration (FSC) and Homes NSW to address the identified accommodation issues within Wellington.

The Accommodation Workshop was designed to bring together key government, non-government ,community representatives and local business to workshop ideas to address the identified accommodation issues.

Like most things, the lack of crisis care accommodation is a problem that can be solved with money being provided to build the accommodation.

Council CEO moving to Coffs Harbor City Council

Dubbo Regional Council CEO Murray Wood has been successful in gaining the position of General Manager of Coffs Harbour City Council, and has announced his resignation from DRC effective from early December 2025.

This is a major career (and lifestyle!) step for Mr Wood as he moves to a larger population centre on the coast.

I'm not sure that he'll miss the maintenance requirement of 1100+km of unsealed roads in the DRC LGA, but I understand the old surfboard will be getting a good workout after 21 years of gathering dust.

Mr Wood has served as CEO since 2021, leading the organisation through a period of significant growth and transformation.

Initially moving to Dubbo in 2003 for a role with Dubbo City Council, before a three-year stint starting in 2018 with the State Government in Economic Development and then returning to Dubbo Regional Council in 2021 as CEO, the wider community has benefitted greatly from Murray's commitment and expertise.

Everyone at Council wishes Murray and his family well in their move and I know he will be highly successful in his new, exciting role.

Over the coming months a transition plan will be put into place within the organisation until a new CEO is appointed.

Renewables

I moved a Notice of Motion at the Council meeting last Tuesday that seeks to give Councillors the final say on what the Council response is to State Significant Development Renewable Energy Projects.

Council only has 28 days to respond to what can often be thousands of pages of application from the developers, and the current practice is for Council staff to prepare a response and submit that to the NSW Department of Planning.

My motion is that if two or more Councillors wish, then the submission is brought to a Council meeting where Councillors determine the final content.

Council CEO Murray Wood resigns

COUNCIL'S (DRC) CEO Murray Wood has announced his resignation from the position, effective from December 2025.

Mr Wood will move from Dubbo to the position of General Manager at Coffs Harbour City Council.

He has served as CEO since 2021, leading the organisation through a period of significant growth and transformation.

He said it was a tough decision to leave Dubbo, and his new job was a challenge for his career.

"It's a different challenge in a community that I will be learning about, and I am really thankful for the faith they have shown in me to award me that position."

Mr Wood has worked with three elected bodies during his time at Council, with three mayors in the role.

"I want to thank the mayors and the elected bodies for the initial opportunity in this role, but also the way we have worked together with them, senior staff and all staff, having a strong trust and focus on community outcomes," Mr Wood said.

Mayor Josh Black said the news has been a surprise, but it was a great career opportunity for Mr Wood.

"Murray will be a big loss to this organisation. It is under his leadership that Council has delivered for our community over the past four years," Cr Black said.

"We wish him all the best as he wraps things up here over the next five months and we will work on a transition plan over coming months."

Mr Wood moved to Dubbo in 2003 for a role with Dubbo City Council. In 2018 he started a position with the State Government in Economic Development and returned to DRC in 2021 as CEO.

"Dubbo has been incredibly rewarding for my professional career and the opportunities it has given to my family as well," Mr Wood said.

"We moved to Dubbo for the work-life balance. I wanted to expand my professional career but in a way that wasn't going to harm my family life, and as a Sydney boy I didn't realise how well you could get that work-life balance in a regional centre like Dubbo.

"I was able to develop my career, but not at the expense of time with my family. It's been very rewarding to be able to be involved in footy teams, help the swimming clubs and volunteer but not at the expense of my career and not at the expense of my family."

Mr Wood said he started with Council in the months before Dubbo became a Covid hotspot and the response from Council staff and the community was one of the highlights of his time as CEO.

"When you ask about the highlights the first thing that comes to mind is the images of how well we did as a community during that period," he said.

"The patient queues at the showgrounds, where even Council staff were assisting with testing, then that huge queue here where we had the Australian Defence Force doing vaccinations at the theatre.

"From Council to the community, we really showed the nation what we could do in that difficult time."

As he makes the move to Coffs Harbour City Council, Mr Wood said it was the culture and kindness of the people at Dubbo Regional Council that he would miss the most.

"We want to help other people; we want to do a great job. Within Council in our areas of expertise our people want to be the best and show the nation that Dubbo can lead the way in several different areas.

Murray Wood.

The Merino Project: Shining a spotlight on Australia's iconic fibre - 'Wool'

THE MERINO PROJECT will debut in Wellington on Tuesday, September 9, bringing together wool producers, industry leaders, and the local community for an evening celebrating the Merino industry, its fibre, and its future.

The event will be held at The Grand Hotel from 5:30pm to 8pm.

Importantly, The Merino Project evening will take place at the conclusion of the 12 Mile Stud Tour, offering a fitting finale that extends the conversation beyond the tour and creates a fresh forum for industry engagement.

The evening will feature keynote speaker Kelly McAvoy and a panel discussion with respected industry voices:

* Kelly McAvoy – Program Manager, Australian Wool Innovation
* Bonnie Skinner – Chief Executive Officer, Sheep Producers Australia
* Dr Paul Swan – Wool scientist, communicator, and industry leader
* Don McDonald – Director, Australian Wool Innovation

The aim of The Merino Project is to provide a platform for sharing knowledge, sparking discussion, and building stronger support for the Merino industry.

Organisers believe the event will not only highlight the unique qualities of Merino wool, but also foster engagement and collaboration across the supply chain and wider community.

"This is more than just an event – it's a chance to bring people together, to celebrate the Merino and the vital role it plays in Australian agriculture, and to look towards its future," Norm Smith of Glenwood Merinos, one of the event organisers said.

Attendees can expect an engaging discussion, opportunities to ask questions, and a relaxed setting to connect with others passionate about the Merino.

Everyone interested in wool and Merinos are invited.

Merino Studs onboard include * Bella Lana - Scott & Anna Brien; * Allandale - Tony & Penny Inder; * Keiran Poll - Nigel & Kate Keiran; * Gullengamble - Max & Dom Edwards; * Boxleigh Park - Hughie & Lyndsay Taylor;

'Life-changing inclusivity': PCYC Wheelchair Sports ensures no one misses out

By Amber Griffin

PCYC NSW is an inclusive youth charity dedicated to ensuring every young person can access our life-changing programs and has every opportunity to participate in sport and recreation activities regardless of where they come from or their ability.

Wheelchair basketball is currently run at several PCYC Clubs, including Wellington and Dubbo in the Central West, and it's taking the courts by storm.

PCYC Wellington Senior Activities Officer, Zoe Morgan said it's open to all abilities.

"And once players are in a wheelchair, everyone is on the same level, there's no advantages to not having a disability - there's something special about that inclusion, everybody leaves with a smile on their face," Ms Morgan said.

Zoe's nine-year-old son Jay lives with a disability that impacts the mobility of his lower body.

She recently brought the sport to Wellington in the hope that Jay would be able to participate again, and the positive impact has warmed hearts across the community.

Jay loves the sport.

"I love playing and crashing into people - I can sit down and use my arms instead, so I don't have to miss out on sport," Jay said.

Zoe noted that Jay would usually have to step aside and sit out at a certain point in regular sports.

"Since coming to PCYC, that's no longer an issue - it also helps other young people understand what using a wheelchair is like," she said.

As demand grows, what is currently 'Learn to Play' will soon be branched out into official competitions at PCYC's Dubbo Sports World – and an expansion to other sports too.

"The dream is to offer wheelchair rugby league, and wheelchair soccer," Zoe said.

"It's a work in progress sourcing the funding, but one that will benefit many people.

"It's life-changing inclusivity."

Wheelchair basketball is also offered at other PCYC Clubs in partnership with Wheelchair Sports NSW

CEO, Mick Garnett said the sport was at all-time record participation levels.

"PCYC Clubs are playing a big role in that growth.

"As we look to continue this record growth in wheelchair basketball leading up to the Brisbane 2032 Paralympic Games, our partnership with PCYC will be crucial, particularly across regional New South Wales."

PCYC NSW encourages people from all walks of life to get involved in the activities on offer at the Wellington Club - More Than A Club, A Place You Belong.

DUBBO Sports Hub item in Budget Estimates

IT'S BEEN more than eight months since Tara Moriarty cold-heartedly removed $33.3 million worth of funding from the Dubbo Sports Hub project, effectively leaving it dead in the water, according to Member for Dubbo and Nationals leader Dugald Saunders.

"At Budget Estimates in February, he committed to working with me in order to find a solution however he has not found the time to have a face-to-face discussion.

"Under questioning from my NSW Nationals colleague Sarah Mitchell, the Premier made a commitment to meet with me during the next Parliamentary sitting week, which will be held in early September.

"In a separate Budget Estimates hearing, Minister for Sport Steve Kamper was quizzed about the issue by my other Nationals colleague Wes Fang and confirmed he had undertaken positive discussions with PCYC in relation to their variation request to move the facility from Charles Sturt University to the Dubbo Sports World site.

"Given the move had the support of the Minister, as well as staff within the Office of Sport, it is obvious that the treacherous decision to withdraw the funding was purely political on behalf of the Minister for Regional NSW. The people of Dubbo and wider Western NSW deserve this facility, that the previous Coalition Government provided $48.6 million for prior to the last election.

"It will provide not only a wonderful facility for our local basketball, netball and indoor sports community, but would allow the PCYC to undertake greater diversionary programs for at-risk youths within the region.

Hampton Park project - locals speak out

"As part of our engagement program, best practice and listening to feedback from neighbours who say they are experiencing stress, we offer confidential wellbeing support," an ARES spokesperson said.

The solar and battery proposal was open for community feedback until July 25 to inform a scoping report that is being reviewed by the Department of Planning, Housing and Infrastructure.

Locals opposed to the Hampton Park project have formed a group, Stop Hampton Park, which now has about 40 members and more than 1000 followers on Facebook.

They said they were determined to halt the development and protect their community's wellbeing.

Stop Hampton Park member Peter Dwyer said he was aware ARES was offering wellbeing support to residents near the proposal, but that did not make the process less daunting.

"People in the areas around these projects feel totally powerless," he said.
"That has a major impact."

Many residents feared the proposal could negatively impact their property values, others had concerns about their safety in the event of a fire.

Dr Bice said opposition to specific projects did not mean communities were against renewable energy entirely.

"They are often opposing how the transition is being implemented and rightly asking what trade-offs they are really being required to make and what the benefits for themselves, their families and neighbours will be."

Developers expand mental health support

In response to growing concern, the NSW government's EnergyCo has partnered with Grand Pacific Health to deliver mental health services to landholders living within 500 metres of proposed infrastructure.

EnergyCo is the delivery lead for renewable energy zones in NSW but is not the developer of Hampton Park.

GPH decides how many staff, including psychologists, social workers, mental health occupational therapists and Aboriginal health workers, are required to deliver the program.

The program complements existing support for landholders affected by property acquisition that has been in place since 2016.

The support includes 24/7 helplines, one-on-one counselling and reimbursement for private clinicians.

Locals rally together

Meanwhile, other states are watching closely.

Delivery bodies in Queensland and Victoria are considering similar mental health support programs as renewable energy zones expand nationwide.

In Queensland, where there are no declared REZs yet, delivery body Powerlink said it offered support to all landholders impacted by its project through free telehealth sessions from the counselling service Rural Health Connect.

And in Victoria, REZ-coordinator VicGrid said they were exploring partnerships to "provide mental health support for communities and landholders in proposed renewable energy zones in Victoria."

The Stop Hampton Park group is preparing submissions, attending community consultations and council meetings, and calling for greater transparency and engagement from government and developers.

Avoid the click trap - stay scam aware

CONSUMERS ARE being reminded to take a moment to stop, check, and protect themselves when transacting or interacting online as Scams Awareness Week returns from 25-29 August.

Australians have already lost more than?$147 million to scams in 2025, with?NSW residents alone reporting more than $48 million in losses,?and more than 25,000 scams to the Australian Competition & Consumer Commission's National Anti-Scam Centre – Scamwatch.

Phishing scams where people are tricked into clicking links or entering details on fake websites which impersonate trusted organisations like banks, governments, or other services, are still the most common scams in NSW with nearly?9000 reports, followed by?identity theft,?online shopping scams, and?false billing.

Those aged?65 and over continue to be disproportionately affected, with older Aussies lodging more than 6100 reports in the last year alone.

In the past year, more than?40 per cent?of scam reports received by NSW Fair Trading were related to?phishing attempts involving impersonation scams on platforms like Facebook Marketplace and WhatsApp.

Around 27pc involved tele fraud, false billing, or itinerant trader scams, while others concerned fake fundraising, trade promotions, and community gaming – reflecting the diverse ways scammers target consumers.

But it is not just online and digital scams which can cause harm, consumers are also being warned to be vigilant when shopping online.

Often based overseas, fake, or temporary online shops can seemingly pop-up overnight and employ 'bait' advertising like urgent calls to action which aim to rush shoppers into securing a purchase before authenticity is verified.

While Australian Consumer Law applies to online purchases made in Australia, purchases from overseas-based scammers are difficult to resolve.

Shoppers are urged to stay vigilant, research the seller, use secure payment methods like credit cards or PayPal for buyer protection, and always beware of deals which may look too good to be true.

People who have been scammed from bogus shops should keep receipts and screenshots of correspondence to assist with lodging a complaint with NSW Fair Trading.

To help people shop safely online, ID Support NSW offers a free online shopping module which explains how to spot fake websites, avoid scams, and know what to do if something goes wrong: https://www.nsw.gov.au/id-support-nsw/learn/learning-modules/online-shopping

Clear advice on spotting scam messages, managing privacy settings, securing devices, and monitoring financial information, including how to request a temporary credit ban if needed, is available at?www.nsw.gov.au/id-support-nsw/be-prepared

NSW Fair Trading encourages consumers dissatisfied with a business's services to lodge a complaint online here: www.fairtrading.nsw.gov.au/help-centre/online-tools/make-a-complaint or phone 13 32 20.

Evie and Steph are champions in their own right

ST MARY'S students Evie Whiteley and Steph Frogley have been competing for Polding at the NSWPSSA Primary Touch Football Championships in Dubbo last week.

The Polding team were undefeated in their round matches finishing on top of the ladder.

However, they unfortunately went down to Sydney North 2-1 in the semi-final, which saw the girls finish the championships in third place.

A massive congratulations to Evie Whiteley who has been named on the NSW Girls Touch Football team to play in Ballarat in October.

I STILL vividly remember highschool afternoons spent watching Monkey - or rather Monkey Magic, as most of us called it.

It was a curious cultural concoction: a Japanese show about Tripitaka, a Buddhist monk (played by a woman), flanked by the Monkey King, Pigsy and Sandy, on a quest for sacred scriptures.

But the real draw wasn't the story - it was the hilariously offkilter English dubbing. We'd contort our lips, mimic those wildly mismatched mouth movements, and find more humour in the poor accents than in the story itself. Maybe it was part of the charm - or just bad dubbing that brought us back night after night.

Now, decades later, the same scenario often unfolds during family TV nights: we flick through streaming services, pause at a title that looks promising - and then groan as bad dubbing starts. We skip the show.

Imagine a system that doesn't just replace voices — but actually re-maps on-screen performances so they look and feel utterly natural in another language.

Enter AI systems like the one used in the Swedish sci-fi film Watch the Skies. The film was dubbed into English using a tool called DeepEditor. It finely analyses an actor's face - detecting landmarks, expressions and emotional cues - and then alters the visuals so that the lip movements and timing match the newly dubbed English audio.

The result: audiences watching in the US recently saw the film in 110 AMC theatres and many reportedly thought they were watching a film originally shot in English.

This isn't just about voice-over; it's about visual dubbing (can we call it vubbing?) making it look like the actor is genuinely speaking the new language. It's cinematic sleight of hand powered by face detection, 3D tracking and sophisticated generative AI. The emotional performance, the expression, the nuance - that stays intact.

The driving force behind this is a company called Flawless AI, founded by Scott Mann in 2020. His frustration with conventional dubbing - where actors' performances felt flattened or out of sync - sparked the development of DeepEditor.

Now, studios and streamers are beginning to embrace the tech, not to replace actors but to empower them with "power tools" that preserve the original acting while translating the dialogue.

With streaming platforms gobbling up international content, efficiency and accessibility are paramount - and AI dubbing offers both.

In more experimental domains, researchers are exploring novel approaches in AI dubbing too. One technique enables high-quality visual dubbing with just a few seconds of reference footage, making it scalable across diverse projects.

Another effort, called EmoDubber, emphasises emotional control: it lets creators specify not only what gets said, but how - adapting tone and emotional intensity while syncing speech tightly to lip movement. These innovations hint at a future where dubbed performances retain expressive depth, not just linguistic accuracy.

AI dubbing increasingly relies on key technologies like automatic speech recognition to convert original dialogue into text, machine translation to render that in the target language, and then text-to-speech engines to create the dubbed audio.

When combined with advanced lip-sync algorithms and neural rendering, the outcome is convincing dubbing that looks and feels natural.

So next time you hesitate at a subtitled drama - waiting for panels of text to interrupt the frame - picture this: a future where cinematic expressions cross language barriers invisibly, where the story speaks for itself, and cultural charm translates, literally, right before your eyes.

From the days of Monkey's charming missteps to sleek AI-mediated dubbing, technology is poised to bring a new kind of magic to how we experience global stories.

Fun times during Book Week

LAST WEEK was one of the most successful Book Weeks in Wellington and surrounds.

The Children's Book Council of Australia's annual Book Week is celebrated by young readers from across the country.

The 2025 theme was "Book an Adventure!", celebrating imagination, exploration and the spirit of adventure.

Wellington Library played host to a number of events to celebrate discovering adventure through books with local schools visiting to check out the best picture books of the year so far.

The Library also hosted a Book Week themed Storytime session last Wednesday for babies and children 0-5 years and their important people. These free sessions include songs, fun with musical instruments, stories and craft.

St Mary's Catholic School conducted a special book week performance as well, while Wellington Warriors Soccer Club held a Book Week Themed Saturday games. ...See Page 16.

National Youth Parliament

ON MONDAY the National Youth Parliament was officially launched at Parliament House in Canberra.

This is an exciting opportunity for young people aged between 16 to 17 who have a keen interest in civics and citizenship and are interested in learning more about how Parliament works.

The program aims to equip young people with the knowledge, confidence, and skills to actively participate in Australia's democratic and parliamentary system.

What's involved

The National Youth Parliament will bring together 150 senior school students, from all walks of life, each representing one of Australia's federal electorates, to engage directly with civics and the Parliament.

Through hands-on learning experiences, including simulated parliamentary debates, workshops with political leaders, and real-world policy challenges, students will gain a deeper understanding of how Parliament works and the process by which bills are drafted, debated and passed into law.

Youth Members will travel to Canberra for a five-day (four-night) program held across Australia's Parliament House and the Museum of Australian Democracy, Old Parliament House.

All costs associated with the program including travel and accommodation are covered by the program.

The Department of the House of Representatives is working with experienced Youth Parliament program provider, Y Australia to deliver the program.

The Y has been running Youth Parliament programs for more than four decades.

Why it matters

Research shows that young Australians are increasingly disengaged from traditional politics yet remain deeply passionate about social issues.

Civics education has been declining in curriculum focus, leaving many young people unaware of how laws are made or how Parliament functions.

This program helps close that gap by giving students real opportunities to see behind the scenes and learn how the system works.

Sports Hub update

LAST WEEK in Budget Estimates, under questioning from my NSW Nationals colleague Sarah Mitchell, Premier Chris Minns committed to meet with me to discuss the Dubbo Sports Hub.

It's now been more than eight months since the Minister for Regional NSW, Tara Moriarty, cold-heartedly removed $33.3 million worth of funding from the Dubbo Sports Hub project.

In that time, I have written to the Premier several times and have spoken with him on the phone on multiple occasions; however, the project has effectively remained dead in the water.

The previous Coalition Government committed the funding to this project before the last election, but I have said for many months that this isn't about who gets to cut the ribbon on the facility.

It's about providing a complex that the people of Dubbo and the region deserve.

I look forward to meeting with the Premier and will continue to work in good faith to ensure this project becomes a reality.

Rawsonville bridge delays

Tenders for the Rawsonville Bridge replacement are now set to open in early 2026, delaying the start of construction by more than a year.

In a media release dated 4 April 2024, Transport for NSW announced that the next stage of the project was to invite bridge construction tenders, which would commence at the end of 2024.

The timeline adjustment is being blamed on a diversion of resources to another priority project, the replacement of Spring Creek Bridge between Narrabri and Wee Waa.

While I don't doubt the replacement of the Spring Creek Bridge is also necessary, the delays to the Rawsonville project are disgraceful and come at a time when Transport officials are sacking regional staff.

There is no excuse for a year-long delay.

It's time to get on with the job.

New Cops on the beat

On Monday the Orana Mid-Western Police District welcomed seven new Probationary Constables to its ranks, after Class 366 graduated from the Goulburn Police Academy on August 22.

One Probationary Constable will be stationed at Wellington Police Station, while four will be positioned at Dubbo Police Station. Coonabarabran and Warren will take on one new officer each.

I welcome these new recruits to Western NSW and wish them all the best with their respective postings.

Renewables report released

The NSW Nationals have reignited calls for a pause and stocktake on renewables projects across the state, after the Legislative Council inquiry examining the regional impact of renewable energy zones (REZ) released its first report on August 21. In very simple terms, the recommendations of this report follow exactly what I and the Nationals have been saying.

That we need a moratorium and a proper stocktake carried out to find a proper way forward that supports community, rather than putting proponents first.

There needs to be a national rating scheme to make sure any proponents that are coming forward and trying to get into our planning system can prove they can build and run an operation successfully, but also take the social impacts into account.

Labor is bungling this rollout, which has resulted in the Orana REZ being four-times bigger than it was originally planned.

There is a sensible way forward but change needs to be made now.

MEET OUR BIOSECURITY DOGS PROTECTING REGIONAL AUSTRALIA

Australia's Biosecurity Detector Dog Program is one of the nation's most important (and cutest!) defence systems, protecting our agriculture, environment, and communities from pests and diseases.

KEY FIGURES

- ✓ 250+ biosecurity risk items detected – including fruit, meat, seeds, plants, and even live in-sects
- ✓ 45,000 high-risk items intercepted every year across airports, seaports, and mail centres.
- ✓ A single detector dog can identify up to 9,000 items in its working life
- ✓ In 2022 alone, dogs screened 6.2 million mail items and more than 850,000 travellers

Established in 1992 with beagles; labradors introduced in 2009 and are now the standard. Expanded training capabilities in 2015–2016 to include both dogs and handlers.

In 2025, the Federal Government committed $11.7 million to recruit 20 more detector dogs and handlers, expanding Australia's biosecurity shield even further.

Detector dogs operate at airports, seaports, and mail centres nationwide, including 23 teams in Sydney, 17 teams in Melbourne, 9 teams in Brisbane and smaller but vital teams in Cairns, Perth and Adelaide.

Behind every wagging tail is a serious mission: keeping Australia safe. Next time you see one of these hard-working labradors at the airport, remember—they're not just cute, they're critical to protecting our way of life.

Wellington Warriors shine at MiniRoos Gala Day in Dubbo

SEVEN ENTHUSIASTIC soccer teams from Wellington Warriors FC made their way to Dubbo to take part in the highly anticipated MiniRoos Gala Day last Saturday.

The event, designed to promote fun, teamwork, and grassroots football, brought together young players from across the region for a full day of spirited matches and sportsmanship.

The Warriors' teams, ranging from under-6s to under-11s, took energy, skill, and community pride with bright smiles and determined hearts.

Wellington Warriors FC Representative Jess Chown praised the players, saying it was fantastic to see all our teams out there giving it their best.

"Events like these really highlight the spirit of community football and the growth of the game among our younger players," she said.

Though the day wasn't about scores or trophies, the Warriors walked away with a sense of pride, camaraderie, and a shared love of the game.

The club extends its thanks to all who supported the day – including volunteer coaches, referees, and families – and looks forward to more opportunities for their MiniRoos to develop and thrive in the world of football.

Book Week Celebrated on the Field

Back in Wellington, the focus turned to community, creativity, and connection as local teams celebrated Book Week with a twist - on the soccer field.

Players, coaches, and even some parents got into the spirit by dressing up as their favourite book characters, bringing colour and laughter to the day's matches.

Instead of competition, last week was all about enjoyment. Families and friends were encouraged to join in, with many hopping on the field to kick the ball around alongside the kids. The relaxed and festive atmosphere saw superheroes, wizards, and storybook animals teaming up for an unforgettable morning of soccer.

"It was great to see everyone having a laugh and just enjoying the game," said one parent.

"The costumes were fantastic, and the kids had a ball - literally!"

Wellington Warriors FC continues to foster a strong sense of community and fun through sport, proving once again that soccer is more than just a game - it's a way to bring people together.

Seniors set for home semi-final this Sunday

ALL THREE Wellington Warriors senior teams have secured home semi-final matches this Sunday.

Pioneer Park will be the place to be as the Ladies team, 3rd Grade Men, and 1st Grade Men take to the field in what promises to be a day full of thrilling football action.

After a hard-fought season, each team has earned the right to play on home turf - and now they need the support of the community behind them.

"We're incredibly proud of all three teams for making it this far," said a club spokesperson.

"Now it's time for the town to rally together and help push them into the Grand Finals!"

The club is calling on locals, families, and football fans to pack the sidelines, bring their loudest cheer voices, and create an electric atmosphere at Pioneer Park.

With plenty of action, passion, and pride on the line, this is a perfect chance to support local talent and be part of something special.

Kick-off times and match details will be posted on the club's facebook page so stay tuned. Come down and help get our Warriors across the line!

A tale of Two Dogs

Another short-story by local artist and writer, Eris Fleming.

Chapter 1

A suspicious lot - Ding Dong's bar – Angel - the sign on the door - Angel's Law

OUT THERE they were a suspicious lot, especially of newcomers. Even the women were sceptical.

Now, though, the tourist dollar means they're happy to shake hands and talk.

Money can do that. And most visitors just want to ask the odd question, take a picture, then move on.

No trouble - none whatsoever.

This dog incident though, happened when visitors were still a rarity. At the outset just two people were in the bar - Angel, who was doing his crossword and Ding Dong who owned the place.

It was a Friday afternoon. Angel reckoned Mitchell Street was deserted - just the usual dogs sniffing about and Sid McDougal on his horse at the post office. The cicadas were making a real racket. Through the window Angel could see Mrs Flannery, just three doors up, watering her geraniums - something she did every afternoon whether they needed water or not.

Ding Dong was busy readying things for the rush hour which kicked off about five.

In the kitchen Charlie Wong was washing pans. Isobel, Ding Dong's old lady, was upstairs fixing some flowers.

Angel, at the time between jobs, was lounging back in his usual spot with his fourth or fifth schooner mulling over his crossword. Mulling, I should point out, was as far as it ever got. The man had never once finished a crossword, had never come close. He kept at it though because he'd heard all that thinking kept his frontal lobe in top condition. He was adamant he remembered everything that day.

It was a bit after four when a new Toyota swung around the corner from Dick Street and careered up to The Royal in a cloud of dust. Ding Dong, busy sweeping at the front door, with one quick look, spied the dead pigs, a common enough sight out there and so took no further notice as three men jumped out, all three laughing at something one of them said.

Ding Dong took a second look, a more careful one this time, and noted that all their gear was brand-new, premium stuff together with, at the back, three big dogs.

With their soft looking hands and sunburned faces it seemed to Ding Dong they were sure to be blow-ins from the suburbs.

Anyway, the three jumped out and without a word, no hellos or how goes it mate or anything like that, brushed straight past Ding Dong with his broom and straight off began making smart comments about the state of things.

It's quite possible back in the big smoke they may have been important people and their comments acceptable - but not out where this happened. It's fair to say, that Ding Dong's critics - uninvited ones especially - were a threatened species.

The biggest of the three, while looking at some grainy old black and white photos on the wall, pointed at one and uttered a critique in a low tone, all three exploding with laughter.

Angel reckoned the big man had to be the boss. He had quite a paunch, a flabby white face and a big white feather in his hat. There was something about him, probably his swagger and manner of speaking and the way the other two hung on every word he spoke that convinced Angel he was the boss, the man with the money.

He had this way of sneering at everything, seemed very sure of himself. From those first moments Angel didn't like the man.

He called him Mr. Important.

The sign at the door, a simple one, was the key to everything that happened that day.

In bold black letters it stated:

No dogs in the bar
Thank you for your cooperation.
Ding Dong, Licensee.

They ignored it though - walked past it as if it didn't exist, just swaggered up to the bar with this huge, crossbred mongrel in tow.

It was a big hairy thing - looked a real brute, and to add insult to injury, a slobberer. Ding Dong, having tossed the broom, was now back behind the bar and after taking a good look at the dog, pointed to the sign and explained the rule as if maybe they hadn't noticed or were blind or perhaps were visitors from Afghanistan and didn't understand.

Angel, who'd ceased mulling for the moment, was taking everything in. At this point Ding Dong, he insisted, was being as agreeable as he could have been as, with a smile, he pointed to the door and said, "Sorry boys - no dogs in the bar. It's on the sign at the door. It's simple enough boys, dogs make a mess, and then, sooner or later, after they've pissed on everything, there's a fight. That's what dogs do - especially pig dogs. My aim is to keep things peaceful - so no dogs. Just common-sense boys."

Ding Dong, in Angel's opinion, tried too hard to be friendly and that was his one big mistake. Angel, I should point out, was always prattling on about people trying too hard, was forever warning people about the dangers of excessive effort, insisting people trying too hard were ruining the country and politicians should do something about it with some sort of law reform.

There's a limit to effort, was how he put it and too much of it caused all sorts of problems like nervous breakdowns, illegitimate children, alcoholism, tax evasion - even road accidents. And, very often, poor football results. People called it Angel's Law.

Anyway, Angel was certain Ding Dong had overstepped the mark so that he was being more agreeable than he should have been. Later, when it was all over Ding Dong admitted he'd been a bit flummoxed and should have heeded Angel's words, Ding Dong, though it should be noted, rarely listened to Angel. Who would when Angel reckoned his mother had been pen pals with Eva Braun and Hitler had been terribly misjudged and was one of history's truly great men and the war was all Churchill's fault.

And one other thing, he knew the exact location of Lasseter's Reef but, for the time being, was keeping it to himself.

Truth is, nobody believed much Angel said. Ding Dong, though, admitted Angel, this once, had been spot on, that he had tried too hard, and next time he'd be more assertive.

Anyway, the three men just laughed the whole thing off.

Ding Dong, still trying too hard, kept wiping down the bar and hoping they'd see sense. But they refused to listen.

Mr. Important, the big bossy one, who thought he knew everything, said, "Nah - sorry mate, he's my best dog, worth thousands, he is too valuable to leave out there. He's a Wolfhound Pitbull cross - a dash of Greyhound too - good in any conditions - weighs a bit over 40k's.

He's staying right here with us, pal.

He won't bother anyone. He's a top dog."

Angel called them recalcitrants, an adverb he'd picked up mulling.

There's one further matter worth noting.

It was common knowledge Isobel, Harold's old lady, had been badgering Harold to dress up and look a bit decent.

Harold had complied so that he was decked out in a nice white shirt, a polka dot tie and some new red braces when through the door walk the three wise men and their dog. After the initial exchange about the rules the big man with this shocked expression laughed out loud and said, "That tie's a bit much, mate. And those braces! Jesus! That's some get up you've got there - looks a little bit queer. This joint's a straight one I hope?"

All three thought the joke hilarious.

But the refusal to follow a simple rule and then the obnoxious comments about Ding Dong's dress sense set the stage for the next few hours.

Ding Dong unsure what to do, took a deep breath, squeezed out a smile and let the matter of the dog slide.

So, that was it, how this big, hairy thing got to stay. Ding Dong, at that point, seemed resigned. Isobel, who'd been mopping up behind the bar saw things were tense and fled upstairs.

Chapter 2

The Three Wise Men

ALL THREE were in their late 30s, maybe early 40s and right from the outset were a bit drunk. The stout one, the one with the feather in his hat was the king pin, definitely Mr Important.

He was wearing a very expensive watch and using a lot of big words, and had, if you believed Angel, a rather uppity manner of speaking.

Angel discovered his name was Callan.

He wasn't drunk yet but was getting there as he tossed down one after the other, at the same time making a lot of snide comments. When sober he was maybe a nice man - but not that day, that's for sure.

The second man was as skinny as a rake with a long, thin face - a bit like the face of a starving horse. He was definitely the comedian of the trio. Angel said his name started with K, that it was a long one and almost impossible to pronounce so everyone, by the end of the day, was calling him Horseface.

The third man was a small, bald-headed chap with a moon face, tiny eyes you could hardly make out (he wore glasses) and a squeaky, high-pitched voice.

He thought everything funny, couldn't stop giggling. And that round face of his was red raw from the sun.

Angel discovered he was a lawyer.

Everyone called him The Giggler.

Anyway, the three of them, having bagged three pigs, couldn't wait to celebrate.

It was as if they'd won gold at the Olympics.

Slim Flanagan and Ali

Slim Flanagan was Ding Dong's offsider who, most days, strolled in around five to help with the rush hour.

He was a quiet man of 30 or more and, if you believed Angel, a jack of all trades.

When Ding Dong first offered him a job he included, as part of the deal, an old tin shed out the back as living quarters.

Flanagan jumped at it and in just weeks had turned it into a liveable space.

At the time Slim's possessions amounted to a swag and a dog, a little terrier thing with only three legs he insisted was his best mate. A few weeks on, when he had settled in, Slim somehow got hold of some goldfish and a fish tank. He was hooked on goldfish and was very attentive to their needs so that they didn't die, float to the surface and stink the place out as others had predicted.

When the fish not only survived but flourished, people ceased offering the new man in town advice. Word got about the scars around his eyes were from his time with Sharman's Boxing Troupe.

Why he walked away from boxing is anyone's guess, but Angel, who had an opinion about most things, reckoned it had to be a woman.

No one, including Angel, had any idea.

Slim refused to comment. Incidentally, the little dog, the one Slim reckoned his best mate, was called Ali after the heavyweight champ at the time.

That bit's important to remember.

There is one further matter, a rather peculiar one too, people should be aware of. For some odd reason, Slim had given God a lot of thought. He had, over the years, tried out most religions.

After almost a decade asking questions and receiving nothing but guff for answers he was convinced most churchmen were nothing more than snake charmers in funny hats. Tired of all the drivel he'd turned to astrology and for the first time in years, was a happy man, at peace with the world.

From that moment on the planets etcetera governed his every thought.

Angel discovered Slim had lied about his date of birth simply to ensure he was a Pisces! Some Pisces! Anyway, whatever the man's thinking, he was determined to be a Pisces.

(For the record Angel insisted Pisces was Mongolian slang for horse thief.)

Anyway, as things turned out that day it wasn't the man himself, his goldfish or his peculiar beliefs that took centre stage; it was his little dog, Ali.

Just a few minutes after five Slim, accompanied by his little dog, an obvious exception to the no dog rule, strolled through the back door whistling some odd tune and straight off the three wise ones, on spying the dog with three legs and one eye, couldn't help themselves.

Horse Face, when somewhat recovered said, "What is that thing? And at that face!

Mate, is it really a dog? Surely, it's not legal."

Even The Giggler managed a few words.

Slim wasn't impressed.

His face took on this dark cloudy look and his back went up. He said, "Take it from me my little mate here, though he's short one eye, can see very well. And losing his leg was just bad luck. It was an accident - there was no option. But he's smart, and a damned quick mover - can match it with them cats he plays with out the back.

"He plays with them cats most days and take it from me, some of them cats are damned fast - but my little boy can match them. He aint no slowcoach if that's what you're thinking."

The city boys were in stitches.

Mr Important stopped laughing to say, "Mate, he's a cripple, a smelly bag of hair with three legs and one little eye!

... To be continued next week.

Crops and soil

For Australian farmers, soil is their most important and valuable asset creating farm productivity and profitability. We must make it sustainable to gain the advantage by doing soil tests which help improve the health of our soils for generations to come.

Establish a baseline and benchmark your soil health to develop long-term farm resilience. Maybe you may need to change some management practices. One of the best companies to do this is "Nutrient Advantage".

Now is the ideal time to top-dress your crops with UAN to help them reach their full potential.

New consumers, new opportunities

1..Emerging consumer groups, especially from Asian background households are spending more on fresh meat. 2..A marketing focus on culturally diverse and younger households will help boost the relevance and safeguard long-term red meat demand. 3..Population and lifestyle shifts are reshaping how Australians shop, cook and connect with red meat.

Migration is a key driver of population growth with India, China and Nepal among the fastest-growing source countries. As of June2024, 31.5% of Australians were born overseas and almost half have at least one parent born overseas.

By 2030 people of Asian ethnicities are projected to represent 20% of the Australian population.
***

Grains

Firmer on overseas markets. Local grain values easier in northern feeding zones but firm across the south. Reports of the odd spot trading. Canola being north of $800 saw growers selling forward as a huge crop is predicted.

Wool. Sales resumed last Tuesday after annual three-week recess with market delivering a relatively strong overall performance. Prices were dearer upon opening and gained momentum with the NRI climbing 13 cents for the day. The market consolidated and largely held onto the previous day's gains by Wednesdays close. When looked at in US dollars the EMI lost 10 cents for the week. Importantly it remained above 800 cents, a level at which it only managed to trade above twice in the past two selling seasons. 41,303 bales were offered with 38,453 sold. Major buyers included Tianyu, PJ Morris and Techwool with good support from the rest of the trade.

This week's expected national offering reduces in size to just over 30,000 bales with a similar figure estimated for the follow week. In a further positive sign, several contracts traded on the forward market for the Spring period at levels equivalent to this week's auction close. AWTA test data for July was released during the recess showing a 9.5% reduction in the weight of wool tested nationally.

Promising opening to new wool sales

BROKERS AND buyers returned to the auction rooms after three weeks recess, where the sentiment prior to the break continuing to be positive in last week's market. Just over 41,000 bales were offered at the three selling centres, which all sold on both days, making it the largest sale since April. Tuesday opened with gains in almost all micron indicators, particularly in the West, playing catchup with the Eastern indicators after only one day of selling in the last sale. Day two was a little erratic in the North, but Melbourne and Fremantle added single digit rises. Currency played a role in the outcome with our dollar 1.24 cents lower compared with the US heading into the recess, which halted the upward graph movement of the EMI by 10 US cents. Skirtings mirrored the fleece price improvement, cardings were a mixed result, and crossbreds continued to rise. Exporters tell us the recess was quite good for them, with reasonable quantities of business being written in the first two weeks at encouraging levels. It is still not all that clear if the green shoots that we are seeing is through demand or a lack of supply, but the positive signs are starting to show. Chinese mills are still running hand to mouth, demand at the retail end should start to move forward with winter in the Northern hemisphere not far away, and the stockpile of early stage processed wool in Europe has now been cleared. Trade discussions between China and the US continue to be constructive, further strengthening economic cooperation and implementation to work towards fair and balanced trade, meaning that the fear of the unknown trading conditions is now not influencing purchasing like it was. Over the past few weeks we have attended presentations on nutrition, joining ewe lambs, picking performer ewes, and breeding Merinos for flystrike resistance. AWI in particular run both face to face workshops and webinars that are quite timely regarding the topic, such as weaning. These resources use current information and certainly can offer a different perspective to what might have been considered normal.

Macwool and Carmichael wool offered some 1200 bales yesterday of a 30,500 bales sale.

Racing at Bathurst

DUBBO TRAINER Garry Lunn and Tamworth based apprentice Siena Grima continued their successful association when Sweet As A Kiss scored an outstanding win on Monday, August 18 at Bathurst.

Following successive wins at Dubbo (2200 metres) and Bathurst (1800 metres) the four-year-old chestnut mare Sweet As A Kiss completed the hattrick in the 2000 metres Thanks Janian McMillan Benchmark 66 Handicap.

Displaying the attributes of a potentially very good stayer, the small in stature Sweet As A Kiss again came from well back in the field.

Skilfully ridden by Siena Grima, Sweet As A Kiss ($4 favourite) was near last turning for home before powering along the inside rail to win by almost a length from Devils Daughter (Grant Buckley, $7.50) and Lucky Bay (Holly Durnan, $9).

Since the beginning of June, Garry Lunn has trained 10 winners with the most recent seven being ridden by Siena Grima.

During the meeting on Sunday, the premiership winners for the recently concluded racing season at Bathurst were presented with Siena Grima receiving the trophy for the leading apprentice.

Geostorm from the Greg Stephens stable at Canberra was awarded the Bathurst "Horse Of The Year" and maintained the consistent form with a creditable third when ridden by Brock Ryan and starting at $10 in the 1400m Benchmark 58 Handicap won by the Tara and Phillipe Vigouroux, Hawkesbury trained Just Shane (Chad Lever, $15) from Vis I Do (Ryan Bradley, $9).

A last-start runaway winner at Bathurst, the Cheryl Crockett, Mudgee trained Marvel Man (Winona Costin, $1.95 to $1.80 fav) shared the lead in the 1100m Gayna Williams "Local Trainer Of The Year" Benchmark 58 Handicap on Monday before scoring by a half-length from Man From Brussells (Ken Dunbar, $6) and Keadool (Zoe Hunt, $7.50).

Well ridden by Mikayla Weir, the Toby Pracey, Mudgee trained Kobold ($12 to $17) with an inside run arrived in time to win the 1200m "Clayton Gallagher Senior Jockey Of The Year" Class 1 Handicap from Bulla Vinaka (Donovan Dillon, $7) and Brutal Eyes (Coriah Keatings, $4.40).

Deanne Panya rode a winning double, Whiskey George ($4.20 to $5.50) for Bruce Cross and Shezasiren ($2.60 to $2.15 fav) for Marc Conners, both winning trainers being from Warwick Farm.

The other winner Caravanserai (James Innes Jnr, $2.25) is trained at Canberra by Natalie Jarvis.

The next Bathurst meeting on Sunday, September 14, features the Panorama and the Bathurst Cup.

Wellington Public School

Wellington PS implements new curriculum

*Personal Development, Health and Physical Education

Wellington Public School Staff have been engaging in professional learning and workshops on the new syllabus for Personal Development, Health and Physical Education. Staff have been focusing on understanding curriculum content, paying particular attention to anything that has not previously been covered in this key learning area.

The PDHPE syllabus covers four focus areas of learning

- Movement skills and physical activity
- Respectful relationships and safety
- Identity, health and wellbeing Self-management

Staff enjoyed a Kahoot challenge to test their knowledge.

Staff investigated how the lessons from Life Skills Go (a wellbeing initiative) match syllabus content. Teachers then mapped these lessons to the PDHPE Scope and Sequence of teaching. In line with Dept of Education NSW guidelines Wellington PS will fully adopt this syllabus by 2027.

Redbacks Roundup - Carmen Gain photos

Redbacks show determination across all grades

WELLINGTON REDBACKS Under 14s faced a strong Dubbo Red outfit, who came out firing early.

The Redbacks regrouped and managed to contain their opponents with strong defence, sharp ball movement, and hard tackling.

Tries were scored by Riley, Gab, Lachlan, and Tobias, with Riley and Patrick adding the conversions.

Their strong performance has secured the Under 14s a place in the finals this weekend against Mudgee Wombats Blue.

Under 12s

Redbacks Under 12s took on Dubbo Blue in a tough contest, but despite going down overall, the team fought hard and lifted their intensity to win the second half.

Coaches Norm and Dugald have done an outstanding job guiding the young side, with their defence standing strong in the latter stages.

Geordie and Braxton crossed for tries, while Will Smith did an excellent job refereeing the match.

Seniors – Geurie too strong

For the Seniors, it was their last opportunity to secure a Grand Final berth, facing Geurie in an elimination match played at Geurie. Playing away from home was always going to be a challenge, and the hosts came out strong. The Redbacks started with determination and fought to stay in the game throughout, producing some excellent attacking moments. Will, Brad, and Cooper each crossed for tries, with Jack slotting a conversion. Despite their effort and phases of strong ball movement, Geurie proved too strong, running out 39–17 winners. The Redbacks can be proud of their resilience and commitment, which was matched by the terrific support from the Wellington community who travelled in numbers to Geurie to cheer them on.

Wallas

Meanwhile, the Wallas travelled to Canowindra for the final Gala Day of the season, which also doubled as a Mega Gala Day.

Wellington has proudly fielded teams at every Gala Day this year, a true credit to the families and players who have shown commitment week after week.

It has been a great season for rugby in Wellington, and the committee is grateful for everyone's contribution to making it such a success.
