Saving children's hearing one dollar at a time

WELLINGTON'S JANELLE Frappell from Before and After School Care organised a fun activity for kids in the school Holidays.

She set a challenge for the children and families to raise money for the Hear our Heart Ear Bus by participating in a walkathon.

A combined total of $1172 was raised and people are still able to donate via the Hear our Heart Ear Bus website www.hear our Heart.org

They raised $577.50. The ladies at the Chemist and the Jewellers were so proud of Harmony and helped to raise funds.

The Hear our Heart Ear Bus is in danger of folding due to the lack of financial assistance.

Liz McEwen said our community can't lose this valuable service.

"I can't believe it's going to close by next Easter if we don't get sponsors," she said.

"It's so important for kids to be able to hear and learn. I can't believe the government doesn't support Hear our Heart.

"Without their service, kids would have nowhere to have a hearing test. We will have to travel to Mudgee. There is nowhere in Dubbo that provides a free hearing test apart from the Hear our Heart Ear bus."

Ms McEwen said the best thing about The Ear Bus is that it visits the kids at schools during the term and also provides testing in the community in school holidays.

"We don't have to travel at all," she said.

"I'm so proud of my Harmony for raising this money and would like to see as many community members speak up to save Hear our Heart.

"I'm happy for people in our community to contact me to be a spokesperson."

Janelle Frappell invited the Hear our Heart staff and volunteers to attend on the day.

After the walkathon they walked over the bridge to Cameron Park to the Ear Bus and staff Shar and Donna gave the kids some goodies and volunteer Rachel did some nose blowing education with the kids and educators.

The children presented Hear our Heart with the money they raised and the day finished with a photo with little Harmony McEwen sitting in the driver's seat of the bus for an interview.

Community safety awareness month

October is Community Safety Awareness Month, and this week we are sharing some information to support senior safety.

Being safe from crime and violence is a fundamental right for everyone in our community and as we grow older, several factors can impact our confidence and quality of life.

* Be careful when sharing personal or financial information over the telephone or online.
* Never give anyone remote access to your devices
* Don't let anyone inside your house that you don't know
* Always secure doors and windows
* Never carry large sums of cash in public

Routine Drinking Water Reservoir cleaning underway

RESeservoir cleaning and inspections will be undertaken as part of Council's water maintenance program at all reservoirs in our Local Government Area.

Reservoir cleaning will take place from 12 October to 30 October at 32 sites in Wellington, Mumbil, Geurie, Dubbo, Eumungerie, Mogriguy, Ballimore, and Wongarbon.

During this time residents may notice water on the roads near some of the reservoirs, which is part of the flushing and cleaning process. The maintenance work will not impact the supply of drinking water to the Dubbo Region.

Free Compost Month is on Now

Council is offering residents the opportunity to access compost at no charge from the Wellington Waste Transfer Station and Dubbo's Whylandra Waste and Recycling Facility from Friday 9 October to Sunday 8 November.

Residents can collect up to one cubic metre of compost for domestic use and must load the material themselves. This year, residents are asked to bring their own shovel, wear enclosed footwear, follow safe lifting practices as well as ensure loads are securely covered before transporting the compost home.

The annual giveaway continued to be a popular initiative. Last year's free compost month showed there's a real appetite for compost, so we're inviting residents to dig in and make the most of this free resource.

More than 480 tonnes of compost collected last year, the giveaway continues to provide residents with a practical way to improve their gardens and landscapes.

The compost is made from food and garden organics (FOGO) - collected through household green bins across the Council region, allowing residents to see the positive outcomes of separating organic waste from general rubbish.

Residents are encouraged to continue using their FOGO bins correctly by placing food scraps, grass clippings and garden prunings in the green bin and keeping contaminants out.

Good quality compost starts at home.

By keeping unwanted items out of FOGO bins, residents help us produce a high-quality compost product that benefits the whole community.

For more information about the compost giveaway or Council's FOGO service, visit Council's website or call 6801 4000.

Declutter and/or Grab A Bargain with the garage Sale Trail

The Garage Sale Trail is back in November, and Council encourages residents to get in on the action.

The garage sales will run over two big weekends on 7-8 and 14-15 November 2026.

The annual sustainability event aims to reduce the volume of usable items ending up in landfill while also providing a fun and social way for residents to make and/or save some money. It's a great opportunity for anyone to take part.

Registration is free for residents in the Dubbo Region Local Government Area, and open to households, schools and community groups. Registered households taking part receive free advice, tools and promotional materials to help assist them with their garage sale.

Council encourages residents to get together with their friends and neighbours to host a sale or join in with a school group to fundraise.

Save the date and sign up to host your own Garage Sale during the event, on either weekend. A full list of registered locations to be available on the website closer to the date.

Letters to Editor

LAST WEEK the Scabbing Flat Bridge Action Group – Geurie Incorporated met with Transport for NSW regarding the current Timber Truss Review.

Transport for NSW is currently reviewing the Timber Truss Strategy again, and this is our best opportunity to get Scabbing Flat Bridge off this strategy.

We are the only community group that Transport for NSW are meeting with, as we have been the most vocal in having the Scabbing Flat Bridge removed from this strategy.

Once removed off the strategy the door is then open for the process to begin for a replacement bridge.

We have been advised the key action that needs to be taken to assist in the removal of the bridge from the strategy is to have submissions lodged on the Have Your Say Web site.

Website is below. I cannot emphasise the importance in your participation in this.

If you want help with a submission, contact me. We will help. Lodge away.

IS YOUR quarterly electricity bill preceded by an email from the supplier advising "your direct debit will be processed on (date) please ensure the funds are available and your card has not expired" and "if you are having financial difficulty paying please contact us"?

This is an awakening sign of the times!

My immediate reaction is to check the card details are current and then to look at what I am paying for and this raises annoyance.

Every day we are charged $2.88 as a "supply charge" (increased from $2.20 in July 2026) and with the Solar/Battery system we installed we offset this charge by exporting excess energy to the grid @ meagre 3 cents/ kWh and as a result our total daily cost has never exceeded $1.96 year-round.

If every consumer was like this the Supply Charge would have to increase substantially.

When you tour around our "Orana Renewable Energy Zone" and take in the Transmission Infrastructure, independent of the Solar, Wind and Battery Installations, it's easy to see why a 37 per cent increase in the supply charge in July was required and no doubt further increases will be required as the "Poles and Wires" installation and maintenance requirement grows.

Anxiety about Solar and Wind infrastructure replacement, after the 30-year projected window of operation, is rightfully growing and development in "Component Recycling" will only marginally offset the replacement cost and future consumers will pay.

Sustainable Reality and Ideology are in conflict in so many things today and unfortunately misinformation, unachievable promises, unwarranted ill-informed caution, ideological pursuits, and disinterest have led us there.

Roger Everett

To Wellington Leader,

On behalf of the residents Maranatha House, I would like you in your paper, to express our Congratulations to the wonderful cast and all members of the WATS for the recent production of "Mirror, Mirror in Nottingham".

Who needs to travel to other places to see shows when we have such wonderful local talent?

We would like to acknowledge the kindness and respect given to our residents by the WATS Team.

New free legal service supporting victim-survivors of sexual violence

THE FEDERAL and State governments are working to better support victim-survivors of sexual violence, with the launch of a new Sexual Assault Survivors' Legal Service (SASLS).

The $1.74 million initiative will expand Legal Aid NSW's capacity to provide free legal advice and assist victim-survivors of sexual violence navigate the justice system.

SASLS will provide support across a range of legal matters, including reporting to police, the criminal justice process, subpoenas and other issues related to sexual assault.

According to the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare, about 1 in 9 women in Australia have experienced sexual violence since the age of 15.

The SASLS also includes the Sexual Assault Communications Privilege Service, which helps health organisations and professionals understand how to respond to subpoenas for counselling or medical records that may be protected under NSW law.

Heritage bridge chokepoint affects 450,000 hectares - nearly twice the size of the ACT

REGIONAL PRIMARY producers and community leaders are issuing an urgent call to action regarding the severe economic and operational fallout caused by outdated asset management and rigid heritage preservation policies gripping critical rural infrastructure.

The restrictions and closures of 2023–2026 on vital regional lifelines as the Scabbing Flat Bridge over the Macquarie River at Geurie were not just a localised inconvenience.

Transport for NSW has advised the Scabbing Flat Bridge Association that the area served by this bridge covers 450,000 hectares.

"Given the current poor state of the bridge, that is one heck of a chokepoint," according to Scabbing Flat Bridge Action Group president, Michelle Tomkins.

"An out-of-touch heritage layer is imposing a stranglehold on an area spanning 450,000 hectares, directly threatening the agricultural supply chains that feed Australia and support regional economies," she said.

To put this footprint into perspective, 450,000 hectares is 4500 km. It is an enormous area of land:

• ACT: nearly twice the size of the Australian Capital Territory (about 2360 km²).

• Dubbo Regional LGA: 60 per cent of the Dubbo Regional Council area (about 7500 km²).

• Blue Mountains National Park: about 1.7 times its size (about 268,000 ha).

The cost of "out-of-touch" heritage preservation on working infrastructure

Today's agricultural logistics rely on higher-productivity vehicles, heavy freight, and timely seasonal transport to move grain, livestock, and essential produce to domestic and international markets.

Long-time Ponto farmer and grazier Greg Wykes, alongside his wife Jennifer and son Matt, operates primary production businesses either side of the Scabbing Flat Bridge.

Mr Wykes said it had been really stressful and costly these past three years whilst the repairs have been happening on the Bridge.

"We must take our planting and harvesting plant and equipment via a detour through Wellington and over Mount Arthur, and anyone that has driven over that road knows it is a very narrow stretch of road. The impact has been incredibly frustrating and costly."

The food bowl district east of Dubbo (taking in the Geurie, Arthurville and Wellington catchments) covers around 450,000 hectares of mixed farming and grazing land.

The Association estimates that, across this part of the Central West wheat-sheep belt, between a fifth and a quarter of the land is typically sown to grain in any given year.

That is around 90,000 to 112,500 hectares of wheat, barley and canola.

In an average season, that cropping country can produce an estimated 180,000 to 280,000 tonnes of grain. In a good year, output can exceed 330,000 tonnes.

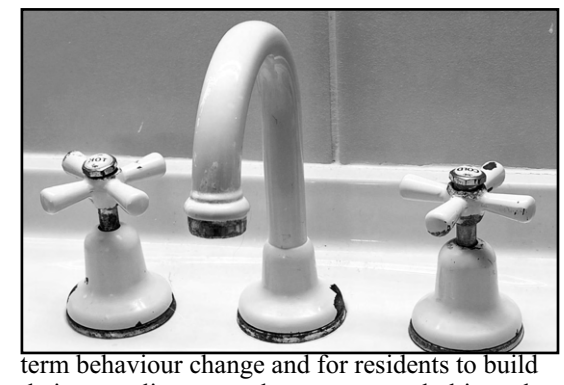

All of that grain has to be trucked out of the district on local roads and bridges, along with livestock, fertiliser and machinery.

Scabbing Flat Bridge sits on that freight network, and the Association says a modern replacement is essential to keep the region's farm economy moving.

When it comes to the hard-working drivers who truck the produce, Ross and Karen Paxton have their finger on the pulse.

Register for Water Night

TAP PAUSE and Level Up when you join this year's Water Night movement on Thursday, October 22 from 5pm to 10pm during National Water Week.

Council is encouraging residents to sign up for this year's event and start a conversation within their household about the importance of water as a resource and why being mindful and reducing water usage is vital.

Water Night is a nationwide event that aims to raise awareness of water use in Australia.

Residents simply sign up to the event and then turn off all taps and running water for the five hours between 5pm to 10pm on the night.

Mayor Josh Black said sometimes residents weren't aware of their water consumption on a daily basis.

"Water Night aims to encourage residents to understand their water usage better and look at ways they can change their behaviour at home to conserve water," he said.

"If everyone made one or two small changes at home it will make a big difference overall," Cr Black said.

Research by The Water Conservancy found that most Australians don't think about the many times they use water every day.

In fact, data shows they turn on taps at least 15 times a day, but most underestimate that.

"Water Night is designed to be the start of long-term behaviour change and for residents to build their water literacy and awareness and ultimately help Australians value water more as a vital resource.

"We would encourage residents to sign up to the Water Night challenge and consider their water usage and what changes they can make around the home to reduce their overall water consumption in the future."

This could be as simple as taking shorter showers, making sure your dishwasher is full when you turn it on, turning the tap off when you brush your teeth and watering your garden in the coolest part of the day, such as the early morning or evening.

"Water Night isn't focused on being restrictive or depriving people of water, so we encourage residents to pre-fill water bottles or containers in preparation for the event," Cr Black said.

Multi Service Centre in good hands - solid financial position

TWO LONG-SERVING members of Wellington Multi Service Centre (WMSC) retired at the Annual General Meeting on October 1.

Michael Brien and Lynne Beggs have each served on the committee for some three decades, Michael a past-president while Lynne commenced her role with Community Transport in 1998.

Centre manager Sharon Doherty reported that despite workforce changes and a reduction in committee membership, the Centre continued to deliver high-quality care, strengthen governance systems, maintain a sound financial position and progress the transition to more efficient digital reporting.

"Meals on Wheels celebrated 70 years of service this year, an important milestone for a highly valued community program," Mrs Doherty said.

The Commonwealth Home Support Programs has officially been extended to June 30, 2029.

The Centre currently provides services to 60 aged care clients, many with more than one service.

Mrs Doherty reported NDIS participant numbers increased slightly during the year and currently support to participants with individual support ranging from four to 16 hours per week – approximately 2400 hours delivered during the year.

Most aged care and NDIS support has been delivered by the Centre's five care workers, contributions from 15 volunteers contributing some hours.

Mrs Doherty said she hoped to attract new committee members who could contribute leadership and governance experience.

The election of executive and committee resulted in Lia Bennett returning as Chairperson while Stephen Hodge was elected vice-chair replacing Michael Brien.

Pip Smith replaces Jenny Palmer as Secretary while Mrs Palmer moved to the treasurer's position.

The committee gained one new member in Carla Taylor while Sharon Doherty was designated Public Officer.

Motorcycle Awareness Month puts rider safety in spotlight

MOTORCYCLISTS are being urged to continue to take every opportunity to protect themselves on the road this Motorcycle Awareness Month, while drivers are being reminded to stay alert and look out for riders to help prevent serious crashes.

Latest data shows motorcyclists account for around one in five road deaths and almost a quarter of all serious injuries in NSW, despite motorcycles making up only 3.7 per cent of registered vehicles.

Motorcycle Awareness Month is an annual initiative of the Motorcycle Council of NSW and is supported by Transport for NSW, encouraging riders and drivers to take extra care and help reduce motorcycle crashes on NSW roads.

This year, Transport for NSW is encouraging riders to think beyond minimum safety requirements and consider emerging technologies to provide every available layer of protection before they ride.

A recent report, commissioned by Transport for NSW, into wearable motorcycle airbag vests found the best-performing vest reduced the risk of serious chest injury by up to 76 per cent on impact.

Around one in four seriously injured motorcycle riders sustain chest injuries, making protection for the chest a critical area for improving rider safety.

This reminder comes off the back of new laws for learner and provisional motorcycle riders, which were introduced by the State Government earlier this year and include:

* NSW learner riders must wear an approved high-visibility vest or jacket when riding.
* NSW learner and provisional riders (P1 and P2) must wear approved protective gloves when riding.

Riders are also reminded to check the safety rating of their gear before they purchase it.

Through the MotoCAP website, riders can compare jackets, pants, gloves and helmets, with several products now achieving the maximum five-star safety rating.

Transport for NSW is encouraging riders to choose the highest level of protection possible every time they get on their bike.

For information on the safety of protective gear and helmets, visit motocap.com.au

First batch of illegal e-bikes crushed into scrap metal

ILLEGAL e-bike owners will get a graphic demonstration that the State Government is taking a tough approach on safety, with the first batch of illegal e-bikes seized under new laws getting crushed last week.

A total of 23 illegal e-bikes were turned into scrap metal at a wrecking yard in Blacktown, after NSW Police and Transport for NSW exercised new seizure powers in a joint operation on the Northern Beaches in mid-September.

Of the 36 illegal e-bikes seized in the operation, applications for the return of 13 bikes are still being assessed by NSW Police.

The e-bikes crushed include an e-bike capable of speeds of more than 90km/h seized from a 14-year-old, well-known brands that had been 'tampered with' to override speed restriction settings and a food delivery bike.

To be compliant and avoid the NSW Government's crusher, e-bikes should have:

* Max speed of 6 km/h while not pedalling
* Power assistance that cuts out when the bike reaches 25 km/h
* Maximum continuous power of 250 watts (500 watt will be tolerated until March 1 2029).

If purchasing an e-bike, check that it meets the EN 15194 e-bike standard.

These bikes are legal to use on-road now and into the future.

No vision on Great Western Highway debacle!

The Gee Report

Andrew Gee
Federal Member for Calare

THIS WEEK I put the spotlight on the state of the Great Western Highway.

Here's the speech I gave to Parliament:

"The Bathurst 1000 on the weekend was an outstanding success, but as we watched the long queues of cars struggling to get back over the sandstone curtain, we were once again reminded of the failure of successive governments to deliver a permanent high-speed connection to Sydney.

This is negligence on the part of government, pure and simple.

Businesses are going broke, lives and livelihoods upended, and there is no plan or vision for this vitally important national road corridor.

What really infuriates our communities is seeing billions upon billions poured into gold-plated tunnels and motorways in Sydney, yet our region is treated as an afterthought!

You cannot fix a major artery with a bandaid!

That's what's currently happening with the patch-up job on the broken 1832 convict bridge.

Maybe we should get the convicts back, because it seems they were the last ones with any vision for that road!

It's a disgraceful way to treat a region that contributes so much to the wealth and prosperity of our state and nation.

The Great Western Highway must urgently be designated a national infrastructure priority.

It must be backed by serious state and federal funding.

Our businesses must receive the support they need and deserve.

We've had enough of the cheap words and the empty promises.

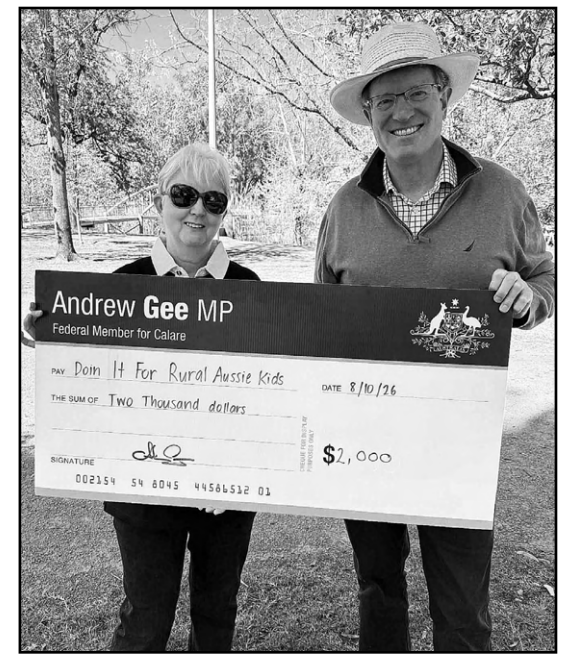

This debacle is an ongoing disgrace. "

Supporting the volunteers who make a difference in our community!

It was wonderful to present a $2000 Volunteer Grant to Julie from Doin It For Rural Aussie Kids at Cameron Park in Wellington, recently.

This incredible volunteer-led organisation supports rural families doing it tough through three fantastic programs:

Christmas Assistance – providing personalised Santa sacks to children aged 0–18 years.

KISS (Kids In-need Santa Sacks) – working alongside health professionals in hospitals to deliver Christmas gifts to children and families experiencing hardship.

YOWIE (Youth, Outback, Work-hard, Inspire, Encourage) – visiting rural schools to inspire and encourage young people through motivational talks and engagement.

With around 500 Santa sacks and 397 presents distributed to children, including those on Palm Island, the organisation brings joy and hope to families who may otherwise struggle to afford Christmas gifts.

This awesome charity was founded by Dubbo country music star Jason Owen!

Julie and the dedicated volunteers are making a real difference, bringing smiles to children's faces and reminding families that their community cares.

Thank you to Julie and everyone involved in Doin It For Rural Aussie Kids for the incredible work you do to support rural and regional communities.

tech talk with Mathew Dickerson, Axxis Comworld

ALONG WITH the dream of autonomous cars, we have long discussed the idea that cars will eventually talk to each other.

Imagine sitting in the back seat of your car playing backgammon against one of your children while your autonomous vehicle approaches a busy intersection.

Rather than relying on traffic lights or Give Way signs, your car simply announces its arrival to every other vehicle nearby. Each car shares its speed, direction and intended path, allowing them all to glide through the intersection with more precision than the RAAF Roulettes performing at an air show.

No stopping. No waiting. No impatient driver leaning on the horn because someone took half a second too long to move.

Admittedly, we still need to work out what happens when a pedestrian or cyclist enters the zone. But that is tomorrow's engineering challenge.

The first step is getting cars to communicate with each other.

Well… the future is here now.

Mercedes-Benz has introduced technology that allows its vehicles to share information about road conditions, effectively giving cars the ability to warn their four-wheeled friends about what lies ahead.

And the first application is surprisingly simple. It is all about making your ride more comfortable.

The technology is rather grandly named Cloud Sourced Damper Control.

(Personally, I would prefer a better acronym because CSDC does not exactly roll off the tongue.)

CSDC allows one vehicle to detect a bump in the road and share that information with other connected vehicles.

Imagine driving along a country road and encountering a particularly unpleasant bump. Your car's suspension registers the impact, records its location and sends that information to a cloud-based database.

When another suitably equipped Mercedes approaches the same location, it receives an advance warning and automatically adjusts its suspension before reaching the bump.

Think of it as one car politely holding the door open for the next.

The information remains available for two weeks and is stored anonymously, meaning the system does not need to know who you are or which particular vehicle discovered the offending lump of bitumen.

Unfortunately, there are limitations.

The technology cannot magically eliminate potholes or every unpleasant bump.

Engineers point out that even the cleverest computer cannot rewrite the laws of physics.

Anyone who has sacrificed an expensive tyre to a pothole on an Australian road will appreciate that distinction.

The system requires specialised adaptive suspension and a cloud connection, so it will initially be available only on suitably equipped vehicles.

But the real excitement is not about avoiding a slightly uncomfortable bump.

It is about what happens next.

The same connected-vehicle technology, commonly called Car-to-X, provides another building block for increasingly autonomous driving.

Mercedes is also developing more advanced supervised driving systems capable of handling complex situations, including turns and roundabouts.

But imagine extending this communication beyond luxury cars. A truck could warn following vehicles about slippery conditions.

A bus could announce an unexpected obstruction. Emergency vehicles could communicate their approach before drivers even hear their sirens.

Eventually, cars might negotiate intersections, coordinate merging and smooth traffic flows without requiring every driver to make split-second decisions.

Of course, that future requires competing manufacturers to communicate using common standards.

A Mercedes warning only another Mercedes is useful. A Mercedes warning every vehicle on the road is revolutionary.

For the moment, we are simply teaching cars to warn each other about road bumps.

But every great conversation has to start somewhere. And perhaps one day, while I am concentrating on beating my child at backgammon, my car will be busy having a far more important conversation with the traffic around us.

Good Luck Year 12

TERM FOUR has arrived and my thoughts and best wishes are with our Year 12 students as they start their written HSC exams this week.

To the hard-working, innovative, resilient Class of 2026: good luck, do your best, and look after each other. Take a break when you need it, make sure to have your favourite study snacks close by, and keep calm. They'll be over before you know it!

Remember that at the end of the day, the next four weeks are only a very short chapter in your entire life. There is much, much more to life than your HSC mark. There'll always be many paths you can take to get where you want to go, do what you want to do and be who you want to be.

To our hard-working teachers: thank you for another great year and to all the parents and carers out there: it's almost over! Our Year 12 students couldn't have done it without the support of the many caring teachers and family members who have been there right from the start.

Good luck Class of 2026. I know you will do us proud, because you already have.

On the Board

After eight months of consultation with community, council, and local businesses, Monopoly - Dubbo Edition was officially launched at the Dubbo Regional Theatre and Convention Centre last week.

Mr Monopoly (aka Milburn Pennybags) himself was joined by Lily from creator company Winning Moves to reveal the 22 properties featured on the board, which include iconic attractions like the Old Dubbo Gaol, and local favourites Dubbo RSL, Kings Hall Jewellers and Dubbo Escape Room.

But it wasn't just Dubbo that was featured. The Wellington Caves, Lake Burrendong and Burrendong Botanical Gardens all feature as properties on the board, while the front cover of the game was taken atop Mount Arthur Reserve.

This is such a fun way to share our region's history and hidden gems beyond our region. Have you had a chance to purchase your copy yet?

Grief doesn't count weeks

October is Pregnancy & Infant Loss Awareness Month, with Pregnancy & Infant Loss Remembrance Day taking place on 15 October.

Every day across Australia, 285 women and their partners experience the heartbreak of early pregnancy loss.

Yet, one of the most painful questions many face from society, healthcare professionals, and workplaces is: "How far along were you?" – a question that carries the unspoken assumption that the length of a pregnancy dictates the weight of a parent's grief or their permission to mourn.

This month The Pink Elephants Support Network is launching its national campaign 'Grief Doesn't Count Weeks' to change this narrative.

For more information, or to access free, tailored support, visit pinkelephants.org.au

NALAG will also host its annual Remembering the Babies Ceremony to support those in our community who have experienced pregnancy or infant loss.

The ceremony will start at 6.30pm, Thursday 15 October at NALAG's Welchman Street Centre in Dubbo. All are welcome. RSVP to NALAG on 02 6882 9222 or email info@nalag.org.au

Small Business Month

October is Small Business Month, so this month I want to shine a light on the backbone of our local economy – our local small businesses and the people who run them!

Throughout the month of October I want to try and get out to as many businesses as I can. I've already had a chance to catch up with a number of familiar faces around the electorate, in addition to meeting a lot of new ones too!

If you or someone you know operates a business in the Dubbo electorate, or if you have a favourite small business that doesn't get the attention you think it deserves, I'd love to hear from you.

Shoot an email to dubbo@parliament.nsw.gov.au or send in a contact submission at dugaldsaunders.com.au/contact-us/

A new short story from Eris Fleming

Scarecrow Hill

A drunk man.. an ambitious bet.. a loser.. unwelcome advice

IT WAS just after ten when Charlie Fielding almost fell out of The Shamrock and trudged home through the mud and the rain.

The rain was heavy now, so that at the back door, fiddling with the latch and losing balance, he collapsed onto the kitchen floor.

Lying there, the light hurting his eyes, he could barely make out Marie and her mother, both with long suffering faces, neither uttering a word.

After a protracted silence they asked him for his wages so they could buy something for dinner.

The man, still sprawled out on the floor explained he felt quite unwell, had a frightful headache, and so wasn't in the mood to talk money matters - and anyway, he wasn't all that hungry.

For a minute nothing more was said. It was then he mumbled that he was very sorry to tell them that, unfortunately, due to some really bad luck, his wages were gone - and it was all down to a stupid tip from Billy Smith, a fool of a man he now wished he'd never listened to - and so every dollar was gone.

The man began to cry. "I've blown the lot Marie, he mumbled, "it's all gone. Just gone. But next week Honey, it'll be different, I promise, I'll win it all back - today was just one of those days. I won't ever do that again - I promise. It was just bad bloody luck. Bad stuff happens to everyone now and then yu know."

Both women stood and stared then, after a long, painful silence, proceeded to rail against the drunken man, calling him a complete oaf, a drunken fool of a man, an absolute no-hoper and a useless father and soon now, thanks to his gambling and drinking, the entire family would be on the street.

For a further twenty minutes bitter words filled the room, before, sitting up now, he tried to defend himself.

"But Darl, Red Button looked to be a damned good thing - if he'd won we'd 'ave all been laughin' - you see, he was a 100 to 1 and everyone at the Shamrock - even Curley O'Brien, reckoned Red Button had a damned good chance."

The wife screamed, "Just like all your other good things - they're always such good things and always 100 to 1 and you always lose. You are nothing Charlie, but a stupid drunken oaf - a born loser!"

"But I did it for you and Tommy darl - you see, if Red Button had got up we'd all be laughin' - we coulda had a big, long holiday - headed off to the Gold Coast for a week or so - or Tasmania, whichever yu wanted. Maybe even both. You could have bought a rand-new dress - or a broach or something - maybe a coupla dresses. I do win sometimes yu know darl. Don't forget I won 200 dollars the Christmas before last on Jack Robinson? Remember? But he was only twenty to one. We had a good time though. We can never forget how good it was then."

"Listen to me Charles," Irene's mum chimed in, "You're a deadbeat, a hopeless, pathetic one too. The truth is you couldn't pick a winner in a month of Sundays. You're brainless - a hopeless judge of anything. I'm all but broke, so I can't loan you another cent. My advice to you is simple - you must cease this gambling madness - it's obvious you're no good at it and it's ruining everything.

"From now on you must bring your wages home and hand them over to Irene - like you did when you were first married. I suggest also you cut back on the drink - even join A.A. And stop listening to those idiots at the hotel.

That's your only chance."

"The truth is you're useless at everything, even in the sack you're a big, hopeless zero - a complete failure - about as good as those stupid bets of yours.

"With you it's about 100 to 1 if anything happens.

I'm better off without you. We're all better off without you - so, I've got news for you - I've made up my mind - I'm leaving and, unlike other times, I'm not coming back. I'm packing up my things, have almost finished - I'm going home with mother.

"You're a drunken idiot pure and simple and I can't take anymore. I'm leaving and Tommy's coming with me."

"But you can't just leave Darl. Who'll do the cooking and ironing and washing - get me breakfast - I gotta have a decent breakfast so I can work hard all day. And who'll do all the housework?"

"From now on Sweetie, that's your problem."

Scrambling to his feet, his face red with rage, the husband, issuing a volley of foul words, screamed, "What would you two know about any damned thing? I've had enough of your stupid lectures. Why can't I let my hair down once in a while? And what's more I've had a gutful of your stupid threats and blaming me for anything and everything. I've had it. It's not all my fault. And if you think like that - that I'm nothing but a dumb loser - then maybe I should finish things here and now - blot you lot out - permanently."

After a minute or so screaming obscenities, the man changed tack suddenly and, his voice softening, promised, if she changed her mind and stayed with him, there'd be no more disappointments, that he would turn over a new leaf and come straight home after work.

He'd guarantee there'd be no more drinking or stupid bets, in fact, there'd be no betting at all. He was finished with it - who needs it? Betting on horses was for idiots - he'd do whatever she said - anything. Desperate now, the man was begging. He was crying again.

Irene said, "I've heard it all before Charlie - heard it too many times. You promised all that and more last time - and guess what? This time I mean it - it's all over. This time I've really had it, I'm not giving in again - I'm going.

"I warned you this was your last chance - and I meant every single word. I'm no longer listening. I 'm leaving - it's over. Full stop."

Amid the screams a child was crying. Neighbours, hearing it all for the umpteenth time, shut their windows, pulled down the curtains and went to bed.

More uproar and screams. Squeals rang out.

In just minutes it all went quiet.

Chapter 2

The search.. an inexperienced bushman.. The Sawpit Ranges.. the search ends

THE NEXT morning the street was quiet - too quiet.

Concerned neighbours looked about and after a hurried discussion decided to take a peek and in minutes, discovered the bodies of the two women and a four-year-old boy in a blood splattered kitchen.

All three had been stabbed to death. The man of the house was nowhere to be found.

The police, when they'd marked out the crime scene, questioned the neighbours in the hope of establishing just how and why such a tragedy happened.

The very same day, having spoken to all those who knew the man or had had any business dealings with him, they appealed to the public for more information before releasing a bulletin asking everyone to be on the lookout for a man whom they claimed could help them with their enquiries regarding the violent death of two women and a four-year-old boy on that Saturday night.

The man in question was 34 years old, of fair complexion, with tattoos on both forearms, red curly hair, light blue eyes, was almost two metres tall, and weighed approximately 85 kilograms.

They warned the man, already known to the police, had a history of violence and should not, under any circumstances, be approached let alone challenged.

No sightings, though, were reported. The man was just gone. After six months the police scaled back their efforts, convinced the man had headed north into the Sawpit Ranges and being an inexperienced bushman, had almost certainly run into trouble and perished.

A reward of $25,000 was posted for any information leading to his arrest.

Of course, almost everyone had an opinion about which way he'd gone and how the cops, as usual, were a clueless lot and never listened to anyone who might know something. After another 12 months of extensive searches and with no further sightings, it was assumed Fielding had definitely perished somewhere in the mountains.

Chapter 3

A hot summer in Mosquito Valley.. Goodnight Lane.. the new neighbours

TWO YEARS had passed. It was late January.

A hundred miles further to the north along Goodnight Lane in The Mosquito Valley people were generally at peace with the world.

It had been an unusually hot summer though and so quite a few along the lane weren't thinking that well, just weren't focussed.

It must be said most along the lane were the neighbourly types, kept an eye out for any goings on along the lane.

But there were always a few who were more stickybeaks than good neighbours and they, of course, knew just about everything that did happen or might happen along the lane.

It goes without saying the stickybeaks were acutely embarrassed if, somehow or other, they missed knowing something that, heaven forbid, others did.

That year though, with the heat etcetera, quite a number, even some of the stickybeaks were missing things.

A good example was the smoke over Dick Austin's place up on Scarecrow Hill. Interestingly, it was Mary Delaney, who, at 87 and with just one good eye, was the first to notice the smoke.

Word got about quickly so that, within the hour, two or three of the menfolk, when they'd thought about it recalled a strange car in the lane just days before.

And at church that Sunday there'd been talk of some new people.

Obviously, someone, right under their noses, had moved in. Who the hell could it be? The old house had been deserted for years - was just one big, filthy mess, riddled with possums, rabbits and termites - plus the odd Joe Blake.

Whoever was up there must be desperate. With a sense of hurt, as if denied natural justice, they stood around, kicked the ground and talked until it was decided Peanut Simpson who lived just a mile from the Hill should go up there and discover just what was going on.

By lunch time Peanut, wide-eyed and a bit shaken was back, announcing the new neighbours to be Jakub and Zofia Kowalski, both, to look at, in their mid-fifties.

Peanut announced, "And with them odd names it's a sure thing they aint dinky-di Aussies - believe it or not they're a coupla of them wog types from overseas and, they can only talk a few words of proppa English so it aint always easy to make sense of their talk."

However, a determined Peanut had persevered and quickly discovered they'd come all the way from some weird place he'd never heard of called Poland.

"And if yu believe that Jakub character," Peanut advised, "there's boatloads of them wog types comin' our way - what them government people are referrin' to as new Australians. Some people, I've heard for some weird reason or other, are callin' 'em reffos'. Most of them come from them camps set up after that war with Hitler. Anyhow, somehow or other, Jacub and Zofia snagged a ticket to Australia to 'elp out with our population crisis everyone's talkin' about and because this Jakub chap had copped some injuries in them camps he was deemed (that's one of them weird Polish words them people used) unfit for that Snowy Mountain Scheme thing where they're buildin' all them big dams and tunnels and stuff to run water all over the bloody country so everyone can grow melons and rice an' stuff like that. Anyway, somehow or other, but don't ask me how, they've somehow ended up on Scarecrow Hill with nothin' more than some clothes, a waterbag, a shovel and a few books."

After a pause to catch his breath Peanut, further reported, "They seem to be nice enough people considerin' how they're a coupla wogs. It seems all they want to do is start all over and have no trouble with neighbours."

Jakub was a tall, slim, softly spoken man with white hair who walked with a marked limp. He never lost his temper or used a swear word. No one ever heard him raise his voice. He was pleased to meet people, had an easy, restrained grin and would speak in a quiet manner not just to people but to horses and dogs and goats but, if the conversation went to the war and Nazis and concentration camps, his body stiffened and his eyes clouded over and he'd turn and look at the sun on the hills and the creek winding down the valley and remain silent.

He loved watching the horses running free. Somehow it helped him forget those bad times. He walked with the aid of a stick but somehow could manage anything he set his mind to, like getting the old windmill working again.

In just weeks he had water pumping to both his garden and the house. Quite a number had tried to fix it - but the one to do it was the Polish wog with his mangled legs.

That's when others in the lane took notice, so that, in no time, Jakub was everyone's friend. He knew how to build sheds and train dogs and shoe horses and make mud bricks. He had seen a lot and knew a lot. And had suffered a lot.

Could this be the turning point?

A FAR more positive week for the wool market with a national offering of 26,235 bales, finishing strongly on the final sale on Thursday in Sydney which sold in isolation due to the long weekend. On Tuesday Melbourne and Fremantle opened the market with good increases from the start, mainly in the Merino fleece and skirtings. Wednesday's results were a little mixed, seeing the finer end in Sydney drift cheaper, and Melbourne reasonably solid. After writing a moderate amount of business overnight, buyers pushed the market along up to 39 cents, regaining the losses from the previous day. That left both the Australian and US indicators 1 cent dearer for the week, ending four consecutive weeks of losses. Skirtings followed the lead of the fleece pricing and were keenly sought after, cardings were relatively stable nationally, whilst crossbreds couldn't find the momentum of the rest of the market and continued to slowly weaken. Buyers that we spoke to had seen improved enquiry over the past couple of days but were hesitant to call it out as the beginning of the return of an improved market. In saying that some of the orders were to fulfil current top orders, as opposed to going into stock, which tends to make one think that the demand signals are now starting to flow through. One of the notable signals has been the widening price gap between finer and broader Merino types. The difference between 18 and 21-micron indicators has reached 651 cents, compared to 199 cents at the first sale of the new financial year. The improved season in Victoria and South Australia has seen the average Merino fibre diameter 0.42 micron broader than the same time last year in Eastern Australia. The wools are also longer than usual and reflecting the change of feed there is also a lot of tender wool coming through as well. The strength of the knitwear demand will help to push these wools through the auctions, however it may be a little more difficult to source traditional length and strength top maker types to go into the worsted process. The size of the weekly offering has been discussed around its impact on the market direction for the past few weeks, with anything over 30,000 bales seen as a tipping point for the market to fall. This week's 35,000 bales could be seen as that catalyst, however buyers don't think that will be the case. The Macwool/Carmichael/Beecher team offered 2025 bales on Tuesday.

Shorthorn PTIC cows $1475 to $2310. PTIC Angus $1900 to $2300, Hereford and Hereford-cross $1600 to $1810.

Weaner market very strong, Angus heifers $870 to $1710, balance $760 for Bos Indicus crosses to $1280 for Herefords. British crosses and Shorthorn heifer yearlings, forward condition, $1620 to $1940.

DUBBO SHEEP.. 24,240 lambs. Large numbers of exotic and large numbers of Merino lambs and hoggets. Compared to two weeks ago trade new season lambs were $10 dearer selling from $206 to $292, ave 1160c/kg cwt. Trade old lambs $8 to $12 dearer, 20kg to 24kg $210 to $298. Heavy lambs up to $12 dearer, old lambs over 24kg $272 to $369. Heavy new season $320. Merino lambs up to $16 dearer, trade $180 to $279, heavy Merino to $362. Lambs to restockers and feeders $9 dearer, young lambs $204 to $260. Feeders paid to $270 and hoggets sold to $308.

MUTTON.. 5750 head. Erratic market. Best heavy crossbreds dearer rates. Most of balance $2 to $8 cheaper. Merino ewes $146 to $302, crossbred ewes $195 to $354. Merino wethers $182 to $295. Restockers paid $154 and $158 for shorn Merino wethers to fatten.

WOOL.. Sales held Wednesday and Thursday in Northern region. Market struggled with direction upon opening with Superfine and Crossbred sectors going backwards and the rest of the market gaining a handful of cents. NRI fell 8 cents for the day. Sydney was the only national centre operating on Thursday and the mood shifted to a more positive tone that grew stronger as the day progressed. All types finished the day either dearer or unchanged with the NRI gaining 11 cents. This was enough to push the weekly result into positive territory for the first time in five weeks. EMI also gained the barest of margins, in US dollars it was a similar 1 cent gain. 24,428 bales were sold, passed-in rate 6.9%. Major buyers included PJ Morris, Techwool and Endeavour Wool. National AWTA testing figures for the September quarter were down 0.6% on previous season. State figures vary rather dramatically. South Australia on the back of a much-improved season has seen production rise 19.2%, whilst Queensland is down 21.8%. NSW and Tasmania are also showing smaller reductions whilst Victoria and WA recorded small increases. This week's offering is 9000 bales larger with 35,096 expected.

Racing at Orange

AFTER THE traditional winter recess, the new season at Orange kicked off last Thursday with a good crowd and a win for the locally owned and trained La Chaparron in the opening race.

Trained by Alison Smith and owned by the Orange club president Craig Buckley in partnership with family and friends, La Chapparon a noted strong finisher from back in the field had been placed several times but still winless after 18 starts before the 1400 metres Tamburlaine Organic Wine-Country Boosted Maiden Handicap.

With the talented apprentice Deon Le Roux in the saddle, La Chaparron ($4.60 to $3.80) came from midfield to reel in the leading pair and arrive in the last stride to win by a head from the favourite Inspiritu (Louise Day, $2.50) with Nutbush Dancer (Amy McLucas, $5.50) a length away third.

In a thrilling finish to the 1600m Orange Motor Group Benchmark 66 Handicap, the Claire Lever, Hawkesbury trained Yes Siree (Winona Costin, $3.10 to $2.80 fav) in the centre of a line of three, won by a half-head from the fast-finishing Naval Officer (Mathew Cahill, $5.50) on the outside while there was a short-half-head to Tavijewel (Izzy Neale, $18) on the rails which fought on gamely after leading.

Barry Wall trains the third placegetter Tavijewel and another of his small team at Cowra, Rule Of Faith, later won the 1300m Inland Digital Class 1 Handicap.

Having the second start for Barry Wall after previously racing from Hawkesbury stables, Rule Of Faith (Izzy Neale, $10) led throughout to beat Swift Gun (Jacob Stiff, $9) and Bushwalker (Deon Le Roux, $21).

Leading apprentice Jacob Stiff and Dubbo trainer Michael Mulholland combined with Vicious Rumour ($6) which raced past the favourite Patrika Express (Coriah Keatings, $1.40 to $1.30) in the straight to win by over a length with Can Do It (Nick Heywood, $16) back from a spell, running home well for third in the 1000m ShedBoss Central west-Country Boosted Benchmark 58 Handicap.

Both were ridden by apprentice Amber Riddell formerly the champion apprentice in New Zealand and the daughter of leading New Zealand jockey Jonathon Riddell.

Scabbing Flat Bridge a chokepoint for regional economy

"When city planners picture a bridge closure, they think of a suburban bottleneck where alternative routes take an extra five minutes," Karen Paxton said.

"In the Central West, losing a vital river crossing means primary producers are cut off from major arterial routes, fracturing supply chains that feed the nation."

Primary production in the Central West is a cornerstone of Australia's domestic food security and export economy.

Burdening this sector with inefficient transport corridors due to bureaucratic red tape and slow-moving heritage frameworks compromises farm gate returns and drives up costs right along the supply chain.

The call for practical reform

Local producers and regional communities are demanding immediate, practical reforms to how state agencies manage regional transport assets.

Infrastructure must be prioritised for its primary purpose: keeping people safe, connecting communities, and ensuring that Australian food and fibre can reach markets efficiently.

It is time for policymakers to step outside the metropolitan bubble, recognise the true scale of regional isolation, and deliver permanent, heavy-duty infrastructure solutions that match the economic weight of regional New South Wales.

Association calls on everyone to lodge a submission or complete the survey

The bridge's future is being decided now.

Review

Transport for NSW is reviewing its Timber Truss Bridge Strategy, and that review will decide whether Scabbing Flat Bridge keeps its heritage listing.

The listing is what stands between our district and a modern crossing that can carry today's freight.

Anyone can take part, and it only takes a few minutes. You can complete the survey, drop a pin on the map, or lodge a written submission at haveyoursay.nsw.gov.au/TTBS-review.

Consultation closes on 30 October 2026.

If you'd like help with what to say, example wording is available at scabbingflat.com.

Ode of Remembrance to return to Soldiers Club

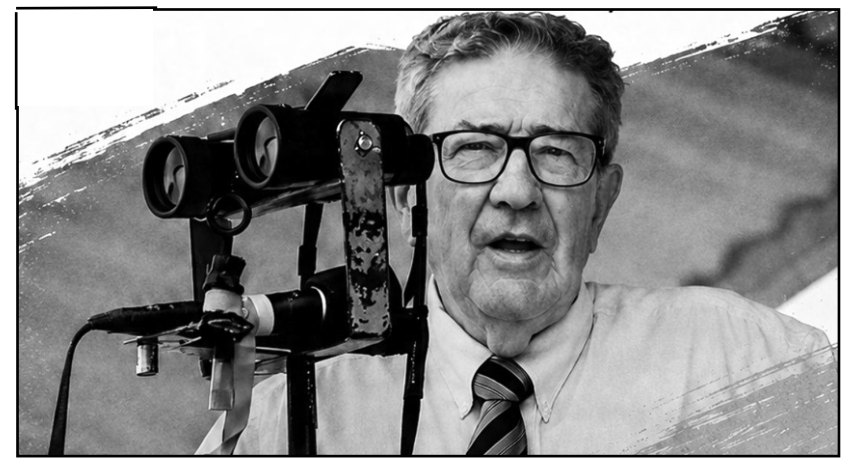

The Board of Directors have announced the return of the Ode of Remembrance to Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club as a daily tradition.

Beginning at 6pm each evening, members and guests will be invited to stand in silence as a mark of respect and remembrance for those who have served and sacrificed for our country.

The reinstatement of the Ode reflects the Club's strong connection to its history, its veterans and the local community.

Club President Robyn Edwads said directors hoped this quiet moment of reflection would become a meaningful part of our daily Club tradition, honouring the legacy upon which our Club was founded.

Club General Manager Stephen Hodge said there were technical details with lighting, TVs and PA system throughout the club that had to be ironed out before the date of the return of the Ode of Remembrance will be advised.

Colin Hodges recognised for significant contribution to country racing

By Katherine Matts

LOCAL RACING identity, Colin Hodges, was recognised for his significant contribution to country racing at the Australian Racehorse of the Year Awards, receiving the prestigious Simon Nivison Special Achievement Award, which recognises extraordinary dedication, promotion, or service to regional racing.

Given that racing is somewhat of an institution out here in the bush, providing employment for thousands across regional NSW and adding a glamourous thread to our social tapestry, it was great to hear of country racing's trainers, jockeys, clubs and callers achievements celebrated.

A regular contributor to this paper, Col Hodges is a man whose voice has been synonymous with racing in the western districts for more than half a century.

He began calling professionally in 1970 after being given an opportunity to call at a picnic meeting at Fifield.

What followed has been a remarkable career spanning more than 50 years and in excess of 30,000 race calls.

Few people have given more of their life to country racing, and few voices are more closely associated with it.

"It was a bit of a shock to be honest," Colin said.

"I was at a 10-race meeting and after race two, I ran down the ladder, accepted my award, then was straight back up the tower to call eight more races.

"So I didn't really have time for it to sink in," he said.

"I feel lucky that I get to do something I love every weekend.

"All the people I have met over the years, from committee members to punters, are what makes country racing such a special part of our social lives, and I'm glad I get to be part of it."

Based in Forbes, Col has travelled countless kilometres covering race meetings across country NSW, from major regional centres to some of our smallest picnic clubs.

For generations of racing participants and followers, Col hasn't just called the races – he has told the stories of country racing, its horses and, most importantly, its people.

His contribution to the industry was recognised with the Medal of the Order of Australia in 2017, and in 2022 the race-calling tower at Bedgerebong was named in his honour.

Glenwood Merino rams top at $9000 - ave $3289

A DUAL-PURPOSE Merino wool and meat breeding enterprise on peninsular farming country 55 kilometres south of Adelaide, were feature buyers at the 25th annual Glenwood Merino stud ram sale at Wellington last Friday.

Bidding on behalf of Port Wine Pty Ltd, Jeff Cook, Springmount Grazing and Jason Trompf, Greta, Victoria, secured six rams for a $6000 average including the $9000 sale-topper for a 3000-ewe, 19-micron self-replacing Merino flock at Hindmarsh Tiers, South Australia.

This year Glenwood principals Norm and Pip Smith and family cleared 121 rams from an offering of 136 effecting an 89 per cent auction clearance with rams selling to a top of $9000 and averaging $3289, some $486 up on the 2025 sale average and selling 28 more rams than last year.

Speaking on behalf of the buyers, Jason Trompf said that because the flock is in 1000-millimetre rainfall country, it was important to buy rams with traits for that country.

"We are looking for rams with traits to enable a Merino to function in this high rainfall environment," Mr Trompf said.

"Firstly, really good feet structure - pasterns and foot are a must, plus the ability to cope with worms.

"In our breeding objective we want condition score as well that can cope with our variable environment, because you don't always get the good growing seasons, and we are looking for better growth and high-quality wool.

"So, it's a real dual-purpose animal that we are focusing on."

The sale-topper, a twin sired by Glenwood 201113, is rated in the top five per cent of the SRS index and top 10pc of ASBVs for yearling staple length and weaning rate, also top 20pc for yearling worm egg count, yearling fibre diameter coefficient of variation, and ewe rearing ability.

Port Wine also paid $8000 for the second top-priced ram.

Glenwood studmaster Norm Smith said it's a great time to be in the Merino industry.

"I know stock prices have been really good, but to have the wool price pick up the way it has, it's added another level to the Merino industry," he said.

"Yesterday, we sold the wool off ewe lambs with six-months wool and the fleeces and bellies averaged $3760 per bale.

"When you think where we were last year, it's amazing how far the market has come in those 12 moths.

"So, this shows just how much money is in Merinos now when you add the wool and the meat, and the surplus sheep sales. It's just fantastic."

Regular buyers Dan and Bill Whiteley, Narambon Park, Cudal, returned and bought three rams to $6000 averaging $4167.

The $9000 sale-topper at Glenwood Merino stud's 25th sale, is pictured with Martin Simmons, Elders, Dubbo, Bruce Bryant, Peter Milling and Company, Wellington; Maggie, Will and Amber Smith, Glenwood stud; buyer Jason Trompf; Pip and Norm Smith of Glenwood.

They are joining 1600, 18.5-micron ewes this year and shear every eight months.

Paul Martin, Old Dalkeith, Cassilis, returned and paid $5500 each for two rams.

He is joining 3500 ewes of 18.5 micron.

Bill Mann, Moonbucca, Rylstone, a buyer for some 20 years, purchased four rams to $5500 to average $4375.

A client of 10 years, Peter Lawson, "Trewalla", Wagga Wagga, returned to secure eight rams for a $4000 average and also topping at $7000.

He is running 2500 ewes of 18.5-micron average and said he liked the Glenwood breed type.

"I like the type here, the staple length and body of the Glenwood sheep," he said.

"They have good fertility in their breeding."

Gilmandyke, Orange has been noted for their quality Angus stud, but Merinos have run on the property for many decades.

In recent years the flock has moved from a traditional ewe base and in the past five years have injected SRS blood.

For the third year Wade Peatman and Peter McNamara returned and took home seven rams while paying to $7000 and a $3214 average.

Gilmandyke is currently joining 4000 ewes, the Merino half growing 18.5 micron wool and shearing every eight months. The other half are joined to White Suffolks.

For some 24 years -plus nearby neighbours the Kiss family have been purchasing Glenwood rams and this year Steve and Kate returned to secure seven rams while paying to $$6500 and a $4071 average. The Kiss family is joining 2000 ewes of 18.5-micron wool.

Another near neighbour and possibly Glenwood's oldest client, the Barton family of Brooklyn, on the Twelve Mile Road, also returned and bought seven rams for a $2500 average and top of $4000.

Peter Baton and daughter Alex currently join 1500 ewes of 18 to 19 micron and shear six monthly to return a 6.5kg average wool tally.

Travis Fernandes, Silver Gully, Winjallock, Vic, has been buying at Glenwood on and off since 2023, but returned this year to secure five rams for a $1700 average.

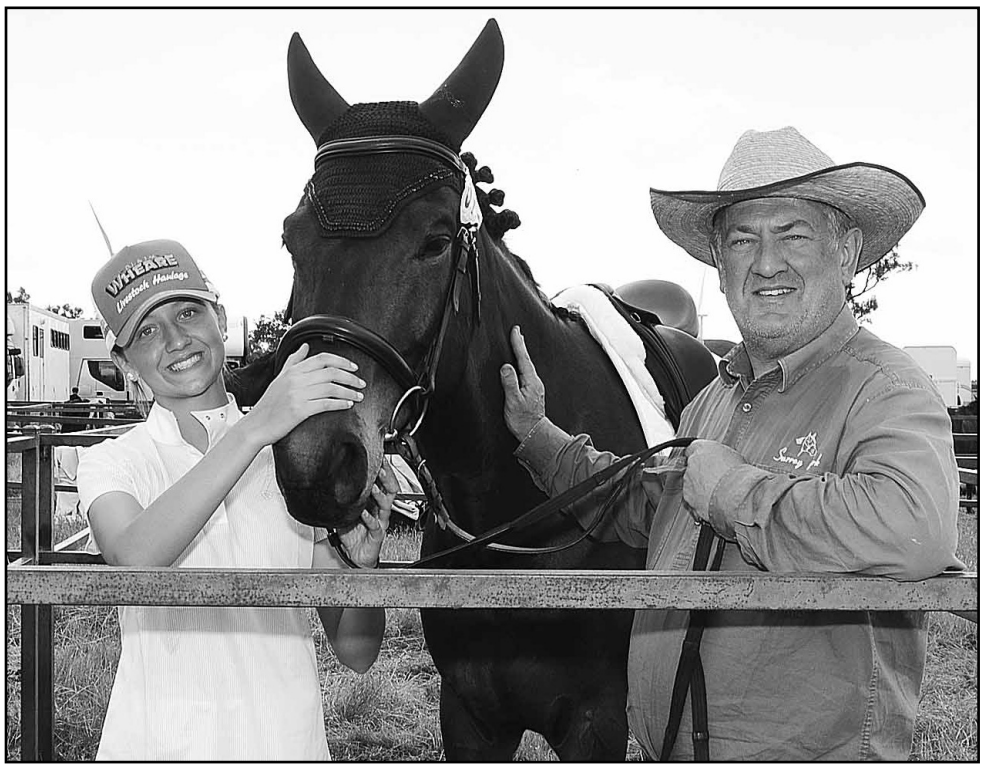

He joins 2500 ewes of 19 to 19.5 micron for autumn lambing and shears six-monthly.

"I like Glenwood's wool style as much as anything," he said.

"It's hard to go past Glenwood's style of wool."

The sale was conducted by Peter Milling and Company, Wellington and Dubbo, and Elders, Dubbo, with Danny Tink and Martin Simmons sharing auctioning duties.
