Lower default power bills for households – Premier’s pledge

MORE RENEWABLE energy flowing into the system is helping place downward pressure on electricity prices, with the Default Market Offer in NSW set to fall from July.

NSW Premier Chris Minns said the Australian Energy Regulator (AER) has determined the cap on default electricity prices for NSW households will drop by between 3.4 and 7.7 per cent from July, reflecting lower wholesale electricity costs as more renewable generation and storage enters the market.

“The determination comes as my government has accelerated the renewable energy rollout with utility scale wind and solar capacity increasing by 80 per cent in the past three years and today’s determination from the AER shows the government’s rollout is beginning to place downward pressure on energy costs,” Mr Minns said.

According to the AER, the 7pc of households on the default plan will see between $66 and $211 off annual bills, as more renewable energy flows into the grid and lowers underlying wholesale electricity prices.

The 14pc of small businesses on the default electricity offer can expect savings of between $432 and $1303 a year.

Lower wholesale prices help put downward pressure on retail prices across the market.

“We recognise that power bills are still high, and families and businesses continue to face cost-of-living pressures,” he said.

“But this is a welcome sign that NSW households and businesses will soon see the benefits of more renewable energy and storage in the system.

“The job is not done but the direction is clear. Reversing course now would cost tens of billions of dollars more and only make power bills worse.

“The Liberals and Nationals need to be honest about whether they support the renewable energy and storage NSW needs to replace ageing coal-fired power stations, or whether they would put that investment at risk.”

Mr Minns said blocking renewable energy and storage means higher bills, less reliability and more exposure to ageing coal-fired power stations.

“The Minns Labor Government will continue to support the effective and consistent implementation of the NSW Benefit-Sharing Guideline, ensuring councils and communities hosting projects receive associated benefits.

“More than $180 million in benefits have been committed to communities since the guideline’s introduction in November 2024. This is in addition to the Renewable Energy Zone community and employment benefit funds coordinated by EnergyCo.”

Labor making mugs of small business

NSW BUSINESSES struggling with surging costs face another financial hit under the Minns Labor Government’s confused reusable coffee cup Bill now in parliament, according to state member for Dubbo, Dugald Saunders.

“Under the Environmental Legislation Amendment (Plastic Reduction and Container Recycling) Bill 2026, cafes and takeaway hospitality businesses will be required to implement reusable takeaway cup schemes,” he said in his Wellington & District Leader weekly column on Page 8.

“While this sounds like a good way to reduce waste in theory, the reality is that businesses will be forced to absorb the costs of such scheme because, in its current form, the Bill prohibits them from charging customers for the cost of supplying a reusable cup.

“If a business fails to offer customers a reusable cup under this scheme, they could face fines of up to $22,000.”

Mr Saunders said businesses want to do the right thing environmentally, but the last thing they need was to worry about new compliance obligations and penalties, whilst managing the storage, cleaning and return of their own reusable takeaway cups.

“And to add further insult to injury, the hospitality industry wasn’t even properly consulted before this legislation was introduced to Parliament!

“Reform should focus on incentives and practical partnerships.

“The NSW Nationals and Liberal Coalition don’t support shifting the entire cost burden of environmental reform onto our small businesses, and we will be introducing our own sensible amendments to the Bill.”

Renewable Energy projects - this is the topic that just won't go away

Very few people don't believe in the benefits of appropriately installed renewable energy – just look at how many people have solar panels on the roof of their houses or sheds, and how many people have signed up to the Federal Government rebate scheme to add a home battery.

But it is how this energy transition is occurring in our local area that has many people offside and has caused a loss of social license for the government and developers.

Some local people and businesses are benefiting amazingly from the projects, but many in the community tell me they feel that they and the wider community are not seeing the purported benefits that we are continually being told by governments that we should be thankful for.

Most of the angst that people raise with me centres around large-scale solar projects and the impact on visual amenity – meaning that people don't want to have to look at a sea of solar panels where they once looked at rolling countryside and farmland.

I agree. If people wanted to live in an industrialised landscape with no views of farms, then they'd live in Sydney.

But we don't. We live here for a reason. Unfortunately, successive NSW Governments have failed to care enough to bring in rules to solve the major problem and require developers to plant a decent native vegetation buffer (30-50 metres) around the outside of solar projects.

The same governments have also failed to ensure that all the thousands of acres of roofs of industrial sheds in Greater Sydney are covered in solar panels as well.

The Daily Telegraph on 18 May 2026 reported that, Australian Energy Infrastructure Commissioner Tony Mahar (who visited Geurie recently to meet with local impacted residents) has written to the NSW Planning Minister Paul Scully and said that the Minns government was failing to minimise the impacts of renewable energy projects on local communities, and had failed to take action on warnings of the pressure these projects are placing on communities like ours.

The massive influx of workers has impacted the rental and accommodation markets, as well as having a range of other flow-on impacts.

The letter also mentioned cumulative impacts of so many projects in one area.

When asked about the letter, Premier Minns is reported as saying that “(The Government) don't have a choice”.

But it is a choice of this government to enforce the planting of a 30-50 metre native vegetation screening buffer around solar projects if they are going to force them into this area (which they are).

Another successful Wellington Show

CONGRATULATIONS to the Show committee and all the other volunteers that put in so much effort every year to ensure the success of the Wellington Show.

And of course, there is no show without many members of the local community supporting the show with so many entries into the exhibits.

To see so many former Wellington Show Girl/Young Woman winners all in the same place with their original sashes was a great initiative.

Looking forward to the 151st Wellington Show in 2027!

Council's new General Manager, Andrew Wilsmore.

New general manager started this week

ANDREW WILSMORE has started as the new General Manager for Dubbo Regional Council this week and has already got straight into the role with his first Ordinary Council meeting in Wellington on Tuesday night.

Mr Wilsmore has been meeting locals and exploring the region since arriving and said, the region was full of potential and Council played an incredibly important role in realising the opportunities this would bring.

“I'm excited about this being a can-do Council where we are focussed on delivering real impact for the community we serve,” Mr Wilsmore said.

“My first day has been like the saying – drinking from a fire hydrant. There is a lot to get my head around and so many people to meet. I'm looking forward to my first Council meeting in Welington.

“I would particularly like to thank the team and Councillors for the warm welcome. I've got a packed schedule, including visiting some of the facilities across the region and getting to know my new community more.”

Mr Wilsmore has been enjoying life in the Dubbo Region, attending the annual Dubbo Show on the weekend and seeing first-hand how events like it bring the community together.

“It was great to see the Dubbo Show really delivering for our region, with streets packed and business flourishing.

“Given my farming background, it was impressive to see the strong agriculture flavour to the event, as well as the great arts, crafts, foods, and family friendly activities on show.”

Mr Wilsmore was previously the CEO at Alice Springs Town Council and was appointed to the general manager role of this regional council in March.

Interim General Manager Luke Ryan has now returned to his substantive role as council's director of infrastructure.

Letter to the Editor

WHEN I left Wellington in the 1960's to work in Sydney, my circumstances similar with many others, made us Hitchhikers?

For me it took a while to overcome the familiarity of home and to “take the country out of the boy” and at every opportunity after work on Friday I hitchhiked home and my mum would always be up waiting until I arrived, often at 3 or 4 am.

I still recall, with almost disbelief, an instance when I almost froze to death when an old guy in a small Ford Prefect Ute offered me a lift from the Blayney turnoff into Orange in the very early hours of a severe Winter morning.

I threw my bag in the back and proceeded to get into the small two seat cabin with him and his dog, and he said “that's the dog's seat you can get in the back” which in desperation I did.

On another memorable occasion I picked up my third lift home at Lithgow, in a truck loaded with produce going to Dubbo, and a few miles out of Wellington a half-naked woman waving frantically appeared in the headlights.

The truck driver didn't even slow down and when I said “aren't you going to stop” he replied “she's a Gypsy and whilst she is soothing your desires (not exactly his words) those down over the bank raid the truck”.

Then there was an arrangement between my best mate and the Bathurst Police where I was to ask for a certain Policeman and he would get me a lift from Bathurst to Wellington.

I got to Bathurst and made the contact and was taken out to a spot on the highway adjacent to the Jail where they proceeded to stop cars and ask where they were going.

They finally stopped a middle-aged couple going through Wellington and I heard the Policeman say “this young man's mother has unexpectedly passed away and he needs to get to Wellington”.

Unbeknown to me, my mate had “cooked up this furphy” and set me up for the longest most condescending and embarrassing trip ever.

On arrival in Wellington at 4am this lovely couple insisted in dropping me off at the house despite my strenuous argument and concern for exposing the lie.

But as expected they pulled up in front of our house and Mum turned on the verandah lights and came out to meet me.

I couldn't thank them and disappear quickly enough.

In time I got to know regular lift opportunities and Wes Searles Paper Truck was a really good one.

I would go down from Ultimo to the newspaper printery, and ask which truck was going west, after loading the daily first edition.

At speed these trucks would deliver the newspapers at all towns until they caught up with the morning train and then they would offload onto the train and return to Sydney.

As a little aside. It is perhaps unknown by many that the daily paper had a number of editions and the content of each edition was updated as new news came down from the News Room Editor and the first edition we got in Wellington did not always have the latest news of the day.

The stories of hitchhiking and the personalities you encounter were endless and at times a little precarious, and today it would be a dangerous undertaking, and unnecessary, but at that time, as in many undertakings, we did what circumstances demanded.

Such was life!

Eyesore about to gain new lease on life

THERE's BEEN some movement around the old tyre service building on the corner of Maughan and Percy Streets, looked upon by locals as an eyesore. Back in November 2023 the Leader reported a development application with council for a 24-hour service station has been approved. Plans included six fuel bowsers and a building housing retail merchandise and drive-thru. It was reported the premises would be open 24 hours daily, seven days a week with nine car parking spaces also available.

Wellington historian Marie Hoffman researched the history of this site.

IN THE Wellington Times Thursday 27th August, 1936 this article was published. "Looking Backward" "At the corner of Percy and Maughan streets there used to be a store kept by Mr and Mrs Dan O'Connell, two old Irish people. They could be very funny when they liked, but the old lady could be very peppery, and as she was boss, she used to keep the old man in his place. They did a good trade among farmers. After their death the old place was sold to the Shaws, and the store was closed and held as a private house."

NSW Landcare projects receive $10 million boost

THE STATE Government said it is delivering on its election commitment to support Landcare NSW initiatives, with 22 projects across the state receiving a share of $10 million in grant funding through the Landcare Enabling Program.

Environmental projects large and small, from western NSW to the east coast, have received a welcome boost through the program.

Eleven Landcare Networks across NSW will each receive two grants, one to support innovation and climate adaption and the second designed to strengthen culturally informed landscape management.

Landcare in NSW supports community-led environmental projects across the state, working with farmers, volunteers, schools and local groups to protect and restore land, waterways and native habitats.

Its work includes tree planting, river restoration, soil conservation, sustainable farming, weed and pest control, and biodiversity projects that help improve the health of local environments and communities.

The grants will be administered by Local Land Services and delivered on the ground by local Landcare groups over the next 12 months to support collaboration and sustainable agriculture and deliver shared outcomes for Country through thoughtful collaboration with Aboriginal communities.

The NSW Government committed $59 million to the Landcare Enabling Program 2023-2027 to enhance the capacity and self-sufficiency of the NSW Landcare movement.

Renewable energy projects on a fast track to nowhere

THE NSW Liberals and Nationals will oppose Labor's rushed attempt to remove independent oversight, increase Ministerial powers and bypass effective community consultation on renewable energy projects in regional NSW, with the views of farmers and other stakeholders already being ignored by the Minns Government.

Energy company CEOs and industry bodies have consistently identified community trust and social license as the single greatest determinant of whether renewable energy projects are delivered on time, on budget, or at all.

The Energy Legislation Amendment (Prioritising Renewable Energy) Bill 2026 is a reckless concentration of unchecked Ministerial power with no legislated criteria, no requirement for independent expert advice and no obligation to publish reasons, according to shadow energy minister James Griffin who said the renewable energy transition was too important to take shortcuts.

"NSW needs a renewable energy transition that works and cutting corners on community consultation isn't a shortcut, it's a detour," Mr Griffin said.

"You can't build the energy infrastructure this State needs on a foundation of communities that feel steamrolled. Industry knows this. The Government's own reviews know this. This legislation pretends otherwise.

"The Coalition is not opposing the energy transition. It is opposing legislation that is badly designed, unsupported by independent expert advice, and that concentrates power in ways this Parliament should not accept."

The delays identified by both independent reviews can be fixed through clearer institutional responsibilities, earlier and better community engagement processes, and stronger coordination between EnergyCo and planning authorities.

NSW Nationals Leader Gurmeh Singh said the government's own review asked for more community voice, not less.

"Requiring a response to highly technical documents within weeks has already created a situation where time-poor landholders feel pitted against large developers," Mr Singh said.

"Projects built without meaningful community involvement don't get built faster, they are tied up in courts and conflict for years and we can't have long-term gridlock.

"Communities are right to ask whose side is the government on?"

NSW Farmers Energy Taskforce Chair Reg Kidd said the state's race to renewables has always ignored the genuine concerns and impacts for rural and regional communities.

"We need to get the settings and the processes right before we hit the accelerator," Mr Kidd said.

"Making poor decisions quickly doesn't do anyone any good."

"NSW Farmers understands the need to build more power generation, but we must see the right thing in the right place, done in the right way, to minimise negative impacts."

Scabbing Flat Bridge debacle continues

Destruction of Wiradjuri site exposed

Transport department can’t find the bridge despite tonnes of correspondence

From Radio Binjang 91.5
IN A strange twist, the Scabbing Flat Bridge debacle continues to deliver perplexing surprises from Transport for NSW. NSW Farmers have been lobbying the Mins Labor Government and Transport for NSW to replace the Scabbing Flat Bridge.

However NSW Farmers say they have recently received communication from Transport for NSW that Strategic Regional Integrated Transport Plans, otherwise known as SRIPT, has had no submissions or pin drops regarding Scabbing Flat Bridge. Michelle Tomkins says, she knows this is incorrect, as she sent an email some months ago regarding this Plan, and many proponents dropped pins and sent her confirmation of doing so and pins were evident then on the website.

This indicates that the pin drops flagging a problem to Transport For NSW appears to have been mysteriously removed to indicate the bridge problem does not exist.

To further explain, the public has access to the NSW haveyoursay portal that displays a map of NSW on the portal, whereby a particular location can be zoomed in, and a pin marker can be dropped on the location with details relating to the problem added.

The map is to inform Strategic Regional Transport Plans. The Scabbing Flat Bridge Committee, is encouraging the public to navigate online to haveyoursay.nsw.gov.au/sript-map, and reinform Transport For NSW. The Minister for Roads and Minister for Regional Transport NSW is Jenny Atchison.

The Scabbing Flat Bridge Action Group – Geurie, has been advised that the deadline of June 30 2026 for the review of timber truss bridges will not be met.

The advice came from the Mins State Government office of Damien Pfeiffer, Executive Director Partnerships & Integration West, Regional Integration Planning, Integration and Passenger Transport for NSW.

The Scabbing Flat Committee has so far been largely ignored by both Jenny Aitchison, Minister for Roads and Minister for Regional Transport and no response from Penny Sharpe, Minister for Heritage. Meanwhile following communication from Mr Pfeiffer with Michelle Tomkins, chairperson of the Scabbing Flat Committee, he said the review committee had finally identified that the required community consultation has not taken place despite the Scabbing Committee pointing this out repeatedly on numerous occasions as reported by Binjang News.

It appears this situation will be addressed as the committee impatiently awaits the outcome.

It should be noted that a number of solicitors (including Claire and former barrister A Gee) have indicated that a failure to follow mandated process for heritage orders relating to community consultation (lack of) would render the heritage order on the Scabbing Flat bridge void. Interesting when Wagga City Council undertook their own community consultation on the removal of the heritage order on the Hampton Bridge, a heritage listed timber truss bridge on the Murrumbidgee River in Wagga, the Minister allowed its demolition on the basis the city council who owned the bridge could not afford its upkeep. Maybe because there was no community consultation in the first place Im guessing. The new concrete Wiradjuri Bridge had already effectively replaced it and the Hampton Bridge had fallen into disrepair.

IT’S TIME for the New South Wales Government, EnergyCo and ACERERZ to come clean on the destruction of Wiradjuri cultural sites in the Central-West Orana Renewable Energy Zone.

The cold hard truth is that ACERERZ and EnergyCo have not been open and transparent about the destruction they have wrought across the region.

This includes the killing and orphaning of native wildlife, and now the destruction of at least one culturally sensitive Wiradjuri site and possibly more. We now have an admission that workers on the project, engaged by Acciona and Cobra, have totally obliterated an irreplaceable Wiradjuri rock shelter, near the Cope Road between Gulgong and Ulan.

Wiradjuri representatives I have spoken to are appalled and outraged by this act of wanton vandalism and insider whistleblowers are telling me that more culturally sensitive sites have also been damaged.

I’m therefore calling on the Premier, Chris Minns, to make a clear statement about the scale and scope of destruction that has occurred to Wiradjuri sites, including the number of sites damaged.

The destruction of native trees, wildlife and cultural heritage sites has shocked our communities, and EnergyCo and ACERERZ have not been open and transparent about what has occurred.

It appears to be one rule for government and another rule for everyone else.

There were no consequences for the destruction we saw at Merotherie Road, and there don’t appear to be any consequences or even acknowledgement of the destruction that is occurring to culturally sensitive sites now.

It’s simply not good enough. Where’s the public apology? What are the consequences? There seems to be an attitude that because it’s the New South Wales Government doing this, they can act with impunity.

Our communities aren’t going to cop it. We need full transparency and accountability from the New South Wales Government on this issue immediately.

The Chief Executive Officer of ACERERZ should resign.

Business support package an insult!

The business support package announced by the NSW Government for businesses being smashed to pieces by the indefinite closure of the Great Western Highway is an insult.

It’s proof that our region continues to be ignored and neglected by governments in Macquarie Street and Canberra.

This closure has been caused by the negligence of governments. The NSW Government well knew that the Convict Bridge would fail.

Instead of fixing it, they chose to monitor and prioritise other road projects, including $2 billion for a new Sydney expressway to the airport.

Our local businesses are going broke through their negligence yet all they can offer is $10,000 which wouldn’t even cover a week’s wages for some of our businesses.

This package is totally and utterly inadequate and highlights a government totally out of touch with what’s happening on the ground on the western side of the sandstone curtain.

Governments are supposed to serve the people, not wreck their businesses and insult them with pathetic and inadequate support packages that will make little difference to business owners who are struggling to put food on the table for themselves and their employees.

The package also doesn’t even cover businesses in Lithgow or further west.

Why? The answer can only be to save money. It’s scandalous.

The package also ignores larger businesses who have employees at risk of being laid off because of this debacle.

And the inadequate support package offered to local councils just adds insult to injury.

The state and federal governments are going to be hearing a lot more from our communities until we get meaningful support, a proper plan to deal with this closure and the delivery of genuine high-speed access in and out of the Central West.

I CONSIDER myself a poet.
I’m not entirely sure what the official qualification for that title might be, but I do write poetry and regularly perform public poetry recitals for various groups and organisations.
Some of my poems drift into technology, others into humour or social commentary.
My favourite quick-fire format is the humble limerick - as anyone who has rung my messagebank already knows - although classic fourteen-syllable bush poetry with its strict rhythm and rhyme still feels like home to me.
When I was young, one of my greatest treasures was a beautifully bound Roget’s Thesaurus.
I would spend hours hunting for the perfect word.
Later, when the internet arrived, I remember feeling slightly guilty whenever I used online rhyming dictionaries to rescue myself from a stubborn verse.
Even now, I still believe there is something magical about a poem with perfect metre and carefully crafted rhyme that tells a succinct story. But apparently, we can now throw all of that out the window.
6 THURSDAY, MAY 28, 2026 WELLINGTON & DISTRICT LEADER

Because someone has invented a camera that writes poetry for you.
The device is called the “Poetry Camera”, and instead of printing photographs like an old Polaroid, it analyses the scene in front of it and instantly prints an AI-generated poem describing what it sees.
Point it at a beach sunset and receive a reflective haiku. Aim it at your dog and out comes a sonnet.
Photograph a busy train station and read a free verse about modern life and movement. The camera has a physical knob that lets users switch among customisable poetry modes.
Under the hood, though, the technology is more interesting than the poetry itself.
The camera combines several emerging technologies that are rapidly becoming part of everyday life.
At its core is a tiny computer similar to the inexpensive microcomputers hobbyists use in various projects. Attached to that is a digital camera module, wireless networking and a thermal printer - the same type used for shop receipts.

But the real magic happens in the software.
When the shutter button is pressed, the image is sent to an artificial intelligence vision system. AI image recognition software analyses the scene, identifying objects, colours, lighting, mood and composition.
Modern image-recognition systems are astonishingly capable. They can identify not just “tree” or “dog”, but also emotional context such as whether a scene appears peaceful, gloomy or joyful.
That information is then handed to a large language model - the same kind of AI technology now powering chatbots and digital assistants around the world.
Instead of simply describing the image, the language model has been specifically prompted to produce poetry in different styles and structures.
In simple terms, the camera is really using two different AIs working together. One AI interprets the image. The second AI transforms that interpretation into creative language, which is then printed immediately onto thermal paper.

What makes this device particularly fascinating is how accessible the technology has become.
Five years ago, building something like this would have required a research laboratory and enormous computing power.
Today, advances in compact processors, cloud computing and AI models combine all these technologies into a handheld gadget.
The Poetry Camera feels whimsical, but it is actually a glimpse into a much larger future where AI becomes woven into ordinary objects around us.
Of course, the poems themselves are sometimes brilliant, sometimes awkward and occasionally unintentionally hilarious.
Poetry has always been a very human attempt to make sense of the world around us. Now the machines are having a go as well.
And somewhere, I suspect my old Roget’s Thesaurus is feeling slightly nervous.

Historic newspaper - last copies on sale

AN IMPORTANT historical publication by Mathieu Gallois titled Country, Spirit and Belonging: The Wiradjuri in Wellington Valley, centering on the history and community of Wellington, is reaching the end of its print run.
Gallois’ grandfather Ernest Moulton (1905–1966), a British migrant who settled in Wellington in 1944, purchased the local paper, the Wellington Times, and as editor, became a prominent conservative voice in the community for the next twenty-one years.
The 64-page newspaper-styled publication, features contributions by, and perspectives on, the local Aboriginal community, traditional home to the Wiradjuri people, as a gesture toward writing their narratives back into the recorded history of the area.
The tome represents an intimate history of Wellington’s race relations, the processes of colonisation and the community’s tentative steps towards reconciliation, highlighting some of the complexities of cross-cultural engagement, as well as issues of censorship, and selective historicising.
This project was assisted by the Australian Government through the Australia Council for the Arts.
The remaining copies are obtainable from the Wellington Newsagency.

Lions Biggest Morning Tea success

WELLINGTON CRAFT Co-op’s Percy Street store played host to this year’s Wellington Lions Biggest Morning Tea last Wednesday.
Proceeds went to the Australian Lions Childhood Cancer Research Foundation.
Organisers reported there was more than ample eats provided, so Barnardo’s After School Care certainly enjoyed their afternoon tea.
Lions thanks Coles and Keirles Pharmacy for donating the raffle prizes won by Ann Barlett with Vicki Jeffery winning second prize.
All money raised this month of May from our preloved book shop is also going to ALCCR with the sale of half-price on all non-fiction books as well as 10 cds/dvds for $10! Donations still being accepted at the Book Shop in Warnes Street.

Up for debate
TODAY IN parliament my 17 March Notice of Motion calling on the Minns Labor Government to urgently address the closure of the Great Western Highway is due to be debated in Parliament.
Debate on this motion actually started during the last sitting fortnight but was interrupted just seconds in and had to be postponed.
While a sitting day’s schedule is set in the Orders of the Day, you never really know exactly what’s going to happen until you’re in the moment, so watch this space!

Labor making mugs of small business
NSW businesses struggling with surging costs face another financial hit under the Minns Labor Government’s confused reusable coffee cup Bill.
Under the Environmental Legislation Amendment (Plastic Reduction and Container Recycling) Bill 2026, cafes and takeaway hospitality businesses will be required to implement reusable takeaway cup schemes.
While this sounds like a good way to reduce waste in theory, the reality is that businesses will be forced to absorb the costs of such scheme because, in its current form, the Bill prohibits them from charging customers for the cost of supplying a reusable cup.

If a business fails to offer customers a reusable cup under this scheme, they could face fines of up to $22,000.
Businesses want to do the right thing environmentally, but the last thing they need is to worry about new compliance obligations and penalties, whilst managing the storage, cleaning and return of their own reusable takeaway cups.
And to add further insult to injury, the hospitality industry wasn’t even properly consulted before this legislation was introduced to Parliament!
Reform should focus on incentives and practical partnerships.
The NSW Nationals and Liberal Coalition don’t support shifting the entire cost burden of environmental reform onto our small businesses, and we will be introducing our own sensible amendments to the Bill.

Last chance to nominate

Australia’s biggest blood pressure check
Did you know high blood pressure is the single biggest preventable risk factor for stroke, heart disease, kidney disease, and dementia?
Around seven million Australians have high blood pressure, but nearly half don’t know it because the thing about high blood pressure is that you usually can’t feel it.
May is Australia’s Biggest Blood Pressure Check Month, so there’s no better time to know your numbers.
Getting your blood pressure checked is easy, quick and painless, and can be done at your GP, local pharmacy or anywhere else a blood pressure check is done.

I got checked this month and got the all clear - when was the last time you had your blood pressure checked?

Growing wheat
Wheat evolved from wild grasses and is thought to have been cultivated between 15,000 and 10,000 BC. It is an annual plant belonging to the genus Triticum which includes common bread wheat and durum.

Wheat is the largest grain crop in Australia with wheat farmers producing some 16 million tonnes each year, 70 per cent of which is exported.

In world terms, Australia is the fourth largest exporter, contributing around 11pc of world trade, and is the largest producer and exporter of white wheat in the world. Asia, the Middle East and the Pacific are the principal export destinations, whilst the domestic market is the largest single market and is growing rapidly.

There are two types of wheat grown in NSW winter and spring. The main difference between the two types is that winter wheats need a period of cold temperatures to begin reproduction while spring wheats don't.

The vast majority of wheat varieties grown in NSW are spring wheats. (to be continued next week).

Impending smaller quantities changing sentiment

With an offering just under 30,000 bales for the second week in a row, the Australian wool market finished in a positive way, seeing the EMI lift 4 cents overall. After a few difficult weeks, Merino fleece indicators were generally stronger, thanks mainly to Wednesday's finishing results. First day selling quoted slightly softer, dropping up to 17 cents in the mid-micron indicators. By Wednesday's end, all indicators were up, giving a much more positive tone. Skirtings continued their strong run, as did cardings and crossbreds, with all crossbred indicators lifting 20 to 34 cents, the strongest performers. Forecast for next few weeks are well below 30,000, with just 23,000 bales listed two sales away, most likely the reason for sentiment change on second day. Buying again reasonably selective, but well supported, showing trade has moved from an unbought position to a partially covered one. Season to date 1,390,723 bales offered, 46,516 bales below previous season's total. With so much wool coming out of hold, tested in store or held on farm, now sold, that brings processors thinking of supply to the front of mind again. With the forecast of less wool next season than this one, supply and demand will be a balancing act for top makers over coming months. The change of seasonal conditions for many in the past couple of months is for the better, coupled with excellent wool, sheep and lamb returns currently has seen a subtle change of sentiment by some growers that have focused on other enterprises rather than wool growing sheep up to now. New infrastructure is being built to make working sheep easier, cropping options are more towards grazing and grain rather than just grain, and most importantly it's the younger generation driving the change. Last week's rain certainly seemed to build confidence in sheep sales, with joined older ewes making between $300 and $365 on AuctionsPlus. Previous history for all sheep products tells us that markets fluctuate as supply tends come out of the woodwork when prices rally. Looking at current wool sheep numbers, which are at 100-year lows, it's going to take numerous good seasons and intentions to have supply come anywhere near the levels that allow processors of all types to use quantity as an excuse for markets to drift to levels not attractive to keep growers interested. This week just over 27,000 bales, Macwool and Carmichael wool have catalogued almost 1000 bales yesterday.

PSSA SOCCER KNOCKOUT

Both our boys and girls soccer teams travelled to take on teams from Buninyong Public School in Round 2 of the PSSA Knockout competition.

The boys were first to take the field in an incredibly fast-paced and challenging game. Despite going down 7-0, the team showed tremendous determination and never gave up. A special mention goes to Connor, whose impressive saves in goal kept the scoreline down. All of the boys should be commended for playing their hearts out and demonstrating resilience and teamwork throughout the match.

The girls had a fantastic game, coming away with a 4-0 victory and progressing through to the next round! The team displayed excellent sportsmanship and enthusiasm from start to finish. A big shout out to Aavehya and Rosie C for their impressive goal scoring efforts.
