Letters to Editor

Let's organise our own Australia Day - P2, 6.

Junior Touch Footy, U12 Cricket, Swim stars in photos - P17,18,19.

All's looking well on the course and greens for the centenary celebrations at Wellington Golf Club on Sunday, March 15. Golf course grounds manager Damien Bell checks the 18th green with James Smith and Peter Holden in readiness for the big family day.

Hundred years on the green

WELL, it won't be on the actual date - records talk of 1924, but according to an official document held at the current clubhouse, the Wellington Golf Club was formed in 1925 on "Nanima", the Barton family property, with an 18-hole sand-green course near the Macquarie Bridge between Nanima and the Macquarie River - but there's going to be a centenary celebration out at the present 'Caves' sight on Sunday, March 15.

It's always great to have an excuse to hold a party, so Wellington Soldiers Memorial Golf Club is inviting all to participate in the day.

It won't be all golf. The party has been arranged so that every member of your family will be entertained.

An all-day barbecue will be the hunger fangs at bay and there'll be plenty of fun things for the youngsters.

Junior putting, just one of the golfing games for the kids.

Plenty of seating, inside and outdoors will be available for relaxing in or out of the sun.

For those who are keen of golf, or those who just play once in a while, the club has organised a 'Four-Person Ambrose' competition to make it easier on the lesser experienced players.

Make sure you form a team of one or two good players in the mix.

There'll be plenty of prizes to share around as well.

Team entries are now be called and will close closer to the day.

Importantly, being a centenary celebration, people are being asked to make contact with past Wellingtonians, even if they were not club members, and encourage them to head to Wellington for the weekend.

More information will be published as it comes to hand, however, turn to Page 15 to view some of the historic 'old' photos found in the club archives.
