Caves set to reveal more secrets

INTERNATIONALLY ACCLAIMED Wellington Caves is set for another discovery chapter with a $1.2 million federal research grant.

As one of Australia’s most celebrated megafauna fossil sites, Wellington Caves has hosted scientific explorations from its first European discovery back in 1830 by George Rankin and soon after by Thomas Mitchell, then Surveyor General of NSW. Rankin unearthed bones that were identified as belonging to the Diprotodon (giant wombat).

Flinders University Professor Gavin Prideaux has received the Australian Research Council (ARC) funding to expand the University’s megafauna fossil research at the site, where his team use the caves as a living laboratory, unearthing ancient bones and unravelling the story of Australia’s faunal evolution.

For many years scientific research was caried out by the Australian Museum, while in recent decades Flinders University has taken keen interest.

Professor Prideaux said the site served as a vital field study area where university students are able to gain hands-on experience unearthing fossils and studying ancient environments.

“The Wellington Caves are a popular tourist attraction and also a unique archive of faunal evolution and ecosystem change in eastern Australia.

“The area gives amazing insights into the ecological impacts of major climatic changes and megafaunal extinctions which provide us with important knowledge to guide and shape biodiversity management,” Prof Prideaux said.

The team were last on the ground over the April 2026 school holidays.

During this time, they excavated a 2m x 2m pit in the Cathedral Cave, with tours passing right by them giving visitors the opportunity to see science in action.

In 2023 Flinders University published a scientific paper describing a large extinct armoured skink from fossils excavated here at Wellington Caves.

Affectionately known as ‘Megachonk’, this was the largest skink ever known.

With other leading Australian palaeontologists, and partnerships with Council, the Australian Museum and Project Zone Pty Ltd, the project will analyse the site’s rich and diverse mammal fauna and vegetation, both at the famous fossil site, in the lab and via museum records.

It will encourage involvement from citizen scientists in the community, and education and training opportunities including for First Nations people.

Flinders Palaeontology has been conducting field trips to the region for the past decade.

Mayor Josh Black said it was great to see the Caves being used in a way that benefits not just our community, but students and research from around the country.

“Having Flinders University here, using the Wellington Caves as a place to learn and discover, shows just what is possible when we open our doors and share what we have,” he said.

“When Council facilities like this are used to teach and inspire the next generation, that’s something we can all be proud of.”

A(nother) Code of Meeting Practice

AS I reported last week, at 9.30pm on 26 May 2026, the NSW Legislative Council voted to Disallow the Council Code of Meeting Practice brought in by the Local Government Minister on 1 January 2026.

The new Code had been a source of complaints from Council, Councillors and members of the public.

The next step was that Dubbo Regional Council held an Extraordinary Meeting on Tuesday this week to rescind the new/current Code, and reinstate our previous Code.

All 128 Councils in NSW will have to do the same.

What does this mean? That we go back to running meetings the same as we did previously, with Public Forum during the meeting, a pre-meeting Briefing meeting for Councillors to ask the staff questions on items, foreshadowed motions back in the mix, and Councillors able to join a meeting via Audio Visual Link (we are in the 21st century after all!).

This change will hopefully help those people who follow Council Meetings.

I expect a new Code from the Minister won't be far away, and then all 128 Councils can go through the process all over again.

Trees staying – Goolma Rd/ Mitchell Hwy/Car Wash

There's been some chatter regarding the gumtrees on the corner of Goolma Road and the Mitchell Highway near the car wash and if these will be removed to allow trucks carrying wind farm parts to turn that corner.

I have asked internally if anyone is aware of these trees requiring removal for the over-size- over mass (OSOM) movements associated with the wind farm development.

The people contacted were not aware of these trees requiring removal but there are intersection works to be undertaken.

Council also spoke with a team member from Squadron Energy who confirmed that no trees are to be removed from this location, however they may have been marked out as a no-go area as part of the works to the intersection.

So, it looks like the trees are safe, for now. ***

$1.2 million Grant for Wellington Caves Fossil Dig

Wellington Caves, one of Australia's most celebrated megafauna fossil sites, is set for a new chapter of discovery thanks to a $1.2 million federal research grant.

munity, and education and training opportunities including for First Nations people. Flinders Palaeontology has been conducting field trips to the Dubbo region for the past decade and has close ties with the community and tourism operators in the region. ***

Making it easier for women to access contraceptive pill Country Press Australia statement on News Bargaining Incentive

FROM THIS week, women in NSW will have improved access to the oral contraceptive pill.

The reform enables community pharmacists to directly prescribe and supply the oral contraceptive pill to low-risk women between the ages of 18 and 39.

So far there are 30 eligible pharmacists who have met approved training requirements to be able to prescribe the pill, with numbers expected to grow significantly as more pharmacists complete training over the coming months.

To boost the number of eligible pharmacists, the state government announced a new partnership with Family Planning Australia to develop a stand-alone training course subsidised by the government for 100 rural and remote pharmacists, and pharmacists in under-served metro areas, including time taken from their working days to attend clinics.

The course will be up and running in October 2026, and take eligible applicants around two weeks to complete. This will give women faster access to care while reducing pressure on GPs.

Opal mining is back on in White Cliffs

THE PEOPLE of White Cliffs are this week celebrating following the Commonwealth decision to allow opal mining to recommence in the region, Federal Member for Parkes Jamie Chaffey said.

"It has been almost eight years' wait for the people of White Cliffs, who have struggled to keep their outback town alive in the meantime," Mr Chaffey said. "This amazing historic town, 255km north-east of Broken Hill, was born through opal mining in the late 1800s, and still has opals at its heart. "More than 135 claims have been waiting to be granted. Businesses and tourism have been suffering during this long wait, and this may well have been the end of White Cliffs. "I congratulate the people of White Cliffs for continuing to fight, and the Commonwealth

The initial tranche of pharmacists available to prescribe the pill are across metro and regional NSW, including Western Sydney, the Hunter, northern NSW, the Mid North Coast, the Northern Rivers, and the Central West.

More pharmacists are expected to come online as they complete training, with around 250 expected by the end of the year.

The government will cover the cost of the first 5000 consultations for women with participating pharmacists across the state.

Patients will still need to pay for their medicines which may cost around $15 to $60.

Already across NSW there are more than 700 pharmacies with a pharmacist who is qualified to renew the oral contraceptive pill.

This is one part of a suite of government reforms to make healthcare more accessible and affordable for people and families including:

- * Allowing GPs to diagnose ADHD and provide ongoing treatment
- * Expanding the treatment services available in pharmacy including for uncomplicated UTIs and common skin conditions.

Attorney General the Honourable Michelle Rowland, who has taken action to ensure mineral claims in the town's main mining field can finally be granted and renewed."

White Cliffs miners were advised in August 2018 that due to Native Title matters, all current mining claims were pending claims only.

Only 16 claims could be worked. Since that time, White Cliffs miners have had their livelihoods on hold – and the whole town has been in limbo.

President of the White Cliffs Miners Association Troy Karkoe and Secretary Dick Wagner said it was an important decision for White Cliffs.

"From a miners' perspective, being able to peg new ground is something like a dream come true."

COUNTRY PRESS Australia (CPA) supports the core purpose of the News Bargaining Incentive, to encourage major digital platforms to enter into fair commercial agreements with eligible Australian news publishers.

CPA president, Damian Morgan said the NBI must remain focused on that purpose.

"Regional, rural and independent publishers have been among the most exposed to the market power of global digital platforms. They employ journalists, produce public interest journalism, serve local communities and carry the obligations of professional news publishing.

"It is essential that the NBI delivers practical support to those publishers, not only to the largest media companies."

Mr Morgan said CPA supported sensible measures to ensure small and medium publishers are not excluded from commercial agreements.

"The scheme should be designed to encourage fair dealing with genuine regional, rural and independent publishers that produce covered news content and employ professional journalists."

However, CPA is concerned by proposals to divert a portion of NBI levy funds into a discretionary grants program.

"The NBI is not intended to become a general media grants scheme," Mr Morgan said.

"Its purpose is to incentivise commercial agreements between platforms and eligible news publishers. Where a platform elects not to enter sufficient commercial agreements and a charge is collected, those funds should be returned directly and transparently to eligible news publishers that are investing in journalism.

"Top-slicing NBI funds into a supplementary grants pool would risk changing the character of the scheme. It could make the NBI look less like a bargaining incentive and more like a revenue-raising mechanism followed by government redistribution.

"That would be a serious policy risk and could strengthen arguments from platforms that the scheme is simply a tax rather than an incentive to support commercial agreements for news.

"It would also risk diverting funds away from professional publishers employing journalists and producing public interest news. A grants program would inevitably introduce delay, discretion, administration and uncertainty.

"It may also create pathways for NBI money to flow to organisations that do not meet the same standards, obligations or employment commitments as professional news publishers.

If government wishes to support news deserts, emerging publishers, community media, multicultural media or underrepresented voices through grants, that should be done through a separate program and a separate appropriation, such as the News Media Assistance Program.

"It should not be funded by carving money out of the NBI."

Mr Morgan said CPA's position was clear.

"Any NBI distribution mechanism should remain directly tied to eligible news businesses, covered news content, professional editorial standards and the employment of journalists.

"Funds collected under the NBI should be returned to the news sector through a transparent, objective and journalist-based distribution model, not diverted into a discretionary grants pool.

"The survival of regional and independent journalism is too important for the NBI to be diluted or redirected.

"The scheme must remain focused on its original purpose, requiring the global platforms that benefit from Australia's news ecosystem to support the professional publishers and journalists who sustain it."

Adding more history on “The Blue Building” before it’s new lease on life

By Tracey Parker
“OUR GRANDFATHER, Alfred Mostyn ran a very successful ‘Produce Merchant Insurance Agent’ in 1940s to the 1960s known as ‘Alf Mostyn Chaff Cutting’.

Alf married Ethel Hubbard in 1912 at Seatonville. Ethel’s parents ran the farm ‘Bulah Mount’ Seatonville. Alf and Ethel ran the farm ‘Kiora’ at Maryvale.

Alf had seven chaff cutters, with the repair yards at Maryvale.

Life was busy with his business for many years to come.

Their family grew, having eight children and with four sons grown up, they often helped out in the Percy Street business.

My older siblings remember the huge chaff bags stacked up in the shop and playing on them.

Also up the street was Ernie Kitch’s shop, then Mick Cullen operated the ‘Blacksmith’ shop.

Alf Mostyn was first to get a ‘Car’ in Wellington.

He also had great interest in horses and owned a successful racer “Pacenna” in the 1950s.

Many Wellington residents won a pound or two on this horse, if you saw any sons of Alf Mostyn catching the train to Sydney .. you gave them some money for a bet!!

Our Father Eric, a proud son of Alf Mostyn married Lorna Tedd in 1950.

Also a family of eight children all growing up in Wellington.

Many of us Mostyns still reside grandchild of Alf and Ethel Mostyn, I say thank you Alf and Ethel for passing down a great batten to all of us and showing that by putting in the hard work and family values we can all reap the rewards for many generations to come.”

Fuel costs and shortages put pressure on 72pc of Australian businesses

Great Western Highway traffic nightmare

FUEL PRICES and supply availability have negatively impacted 72 per cent of Australian businesses, according to new data released today by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

Tom Lay, ABS head of business statistics, said data from the Survey of Business Conditions and Sentiments, brought back earlier this month, helped us better understand the economic impacts of the closure of the Strait of Hormuz on Australian businesses.

“Businesses across all industries were impacted by rising fuel costs from global volatility and ongoing supply chain disruptions.

“One in six businesses experienced disruptions in their supply chain, with transport, logistics, agriculture and small businesses among those most affected.”

Over one third (36pc) of businesses reported revenue had dropped over the past four weeks, while more than a quarter (27pc) expect revenue to fall over the next four weeks.

Half of all businesses reported operating expenses had risen, with fuel prices and freight and delivery costs the most frequently reported reason. About two thirds (60pc) of businesses reported making changes to business operations because of fuel prices or availability in May.

This included absorbing cost increases (48pc), increasing prices (11pc), changing or delaying production targets, schedules or volumes (6pc) and implementing a fuel surcharge or levy (6pc).

Roughly one in four businesses (28pc) made changes to their workforce in response to fuel prices or availability, including reducing or suspending non-essential travel activities to reduce fuel consumption (15pc) and reducing the size of the current workforce (9pc).

DURING THE long weekend on Monday, June 8, traffic in Lithgow was backed up as far as the eye could see.

Contrast that with what’s happening on the other side of the sandstone curtain where they’re currently drilling in the new Western Harbour Tunnel at a total cost of $7.4 billion, and have just opened a gleaming new expressway to the new Western Sydney airport with a cost of $2.1 billion. That’s $9.5 billion in total.

While on the Great Western Highway, they’re giving us a patch up job of a bridge built by convicts in 1832 and a business support package which is woefully inadequate and worth just $3.5 million.

It is an absolute disgrace and proof if you ever needed it that we are being treated like second class citizens.

Our Central West veterans deserve better.

The recent Federal Budget failed to provide funding for any new Veterans’ and Families’ Wellbeing Centres across Australia, including the Central West.

This was particularly disappointing given the outstanding work of Bathurst RSL Sub-Branch and local veterans in developing a proposal for a wellbeing centre in Bathurst.

I recently raised this issue in Parliament.

Below is my speech calling on the Government to back our veterans and fund a Central West Veterans’ and Families’ Wellbeing Centre.

“I rise today to voice the disappointment of the Central West veteran community following the recent budget.

“The budget did not deliver any direct funding for any new veterans’ and families’ wellbeing centres, or hubs, across Australia, including in the Central West of our state.

“Working with our local veterans, Bathurst RSL sub-branch submitted a comprehensive proposal for stage 1 of a Central West veterans’ and families’ wellbeing centre at Bathurst.

The Gee Report

Andrew Gee
Federal Member for Calare

They did the work and they put forward a solution.

“Yet the government has, to date, not supported these proactive efforts, leaving the fate of the project uncertain.

“I know that Bathurst RSL sub-branch President Barry Parsons, vice presidents Darlene Macri and Norm Pattison, the committee members and the whole sub-branch are committed to making this veterans’ centre a reality.

“The voices of our local veterans will be heard.

“I call on the government to fund a veterans’ and families’ wellbeing centre at Bathurst, on the double.

“You will be hearing from us.”

I STILL remember a day many years ago when I was driving a hybrid vehicle while conducting a route survey for a regional cycling event.

There were three of us in the car, all focused on the job at hand. We were checking safe stopping points for cyclists, measuring distances between towns and making notes about rest areas.

What we weren’t paying attention to was the fuel gauge.

Suddenly, the warning light came on.

The problem was that we still had about 40 kilometres to travel before reaching the next town. Do we turn around?

How much fuel is actually left when that little light appears? Nobody really knew.

Air resistance quadruples when speed doubles so we dropped our speed from 100km/h to 70km/h to halve our air resistance and then crossed our fingers.

Fortunately, we rolled into town without incident, saving the embarrassment and inconvenience of having no fuel in the tank and being stuck in the middle of nowhere.

4 THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 2026 WELLINGTON & DISTRICT LEADER

Fast forward to today and one of the things I find interesting about discussions surrounding electric vehicles is how often range anxiety comes up.

Ironically, I feel more confident about the remaining range in an EV than I ever did in a petrol-powered car.

Modern EVs constantly estimate how far you can travel based on your driving conditions and energy consumption.

The laws of physics still apply. Drive faster and you use more energy. Climb hills and consumption rises. But generally speaking, the range display is remarkably accurate and updates in real time.

The second part of the range anxiety argument is the fear of being stranded somewhere remote.

Yet if my old hybrid had run completely dry, I would have needed someone to bring me petrol. Someone would have had to fetch fuel and drive it out to me.

With an electric vehicle, I actually have another option.

If I find myself stranded, I am surprisingly confident that I could locate a power point long before I could locate a can of petrol.

A farmhouse, a business, a shed, a community hall - electricity is everywhere.

A normal power point won’t charge a vehicle quickly, but it would eventually get me moving again.

Now, however, roadside assistance companies may soon have a much better solution.

An Australian company has unveiled what it describes as the world’s first direct EV-to-EV fast charging system designed specifically to rescue stranded electric vehicles.

The Melbourne-based company has developed a system that effectively allows one vehicle to rapidly charge another.

Think of it as the electric vehicle equivalent of bringing a jerry can of fuel, except instead of carrying petrol, you’re carrying electricity. The technology is built into a support vehicle and can deliver around 65 kilometres of driving range in just 15 minutes.

That is enough to get many stranded motorists comfortably to the nearest charging station.

What’s particularly interesting is that this isn’t simply a large battery bolted onto the back of a ute.

The company has developed specialised hardware and software that enables direct current vehicle-to-vehicle charging at speeds much faster than many existing mobile charging solutions.

Initially, the technology is expected to be tested by roadside assistance organisations, towing companies, mining operators and fleet managers.

These are exactly the situations where charging infrastructure may be sparse but vehicles still need to remain operational.

As electric vehicles become increasingly common across Australia, innovations like this help remove another barrier to adoption.

They don’t eliminate the laws of physics, and they won’t stop people occasionally misjudging their remaining range.

But they do provide something every driver appreciates: a backup plan.

The M.M. Co. - 100 years of Wellington history

PART 2. ... Continued from last week.

Following Mick's passing Edmond continued to run the business and eventually the premises was divided into separate shops, with long-time employee, Gary Shepherd trading as Shep's Shoes, Marilyn and Paul Kelly opening 'Kel's' (Kidsware), The Medical Benefits office, as well as the M.M. Co.

These businesses traded harmoniously before closing some years later.

Variety store, Have A Look followed by Bag a Bargain which moved from Lee Street to the former M.M. Co. premises with Marcus Hanney as manager.

When that business closed, the building was advertised for sale in October 2016.

150 Percy Street was purchased by Raymond Day-Hakker, who previously conducted a Piano Museum at the town of Neville.

He moved his Golden Era Piano Museum to the Percy Street location.

Raymond passed away and his daughters removed his loved pianos and memorabilia.

The building was placed on the market again and was purchased by the owners of the former Kitch's store next door.

YVONNE MELLICK: Died 10th May, 1995. 1962-63 she was the President of Quota Club of Wellington – and involved in CWA Younger Set. Yvonne could always be found at the front of house welcoming the audience to WATS productions. A painting hangs at the Civic Centre in her memory.

DIANA MELLICK: Grew up and was educated in Wellington, in later years she married, Harold and the pair moved to Sydney.

MICHAEL MELLICK: left Wellington to study Medicine at University. Michael became a pharmacist. He married Maria. They lived in Sydney and welcomed one son, Michael, who unfortunately passed away at a young age. Michael also passed away.

EDMOND GEORGE MELLICK, 20th April, 1943 - 22nd February, 2009.

Commenced education at Wellington before he joined his brother Michael at University of NSW, Sydney to study medicine.

When his father became unwell, Edmond returned home to assist with the family business, eventually becoming the Manager.

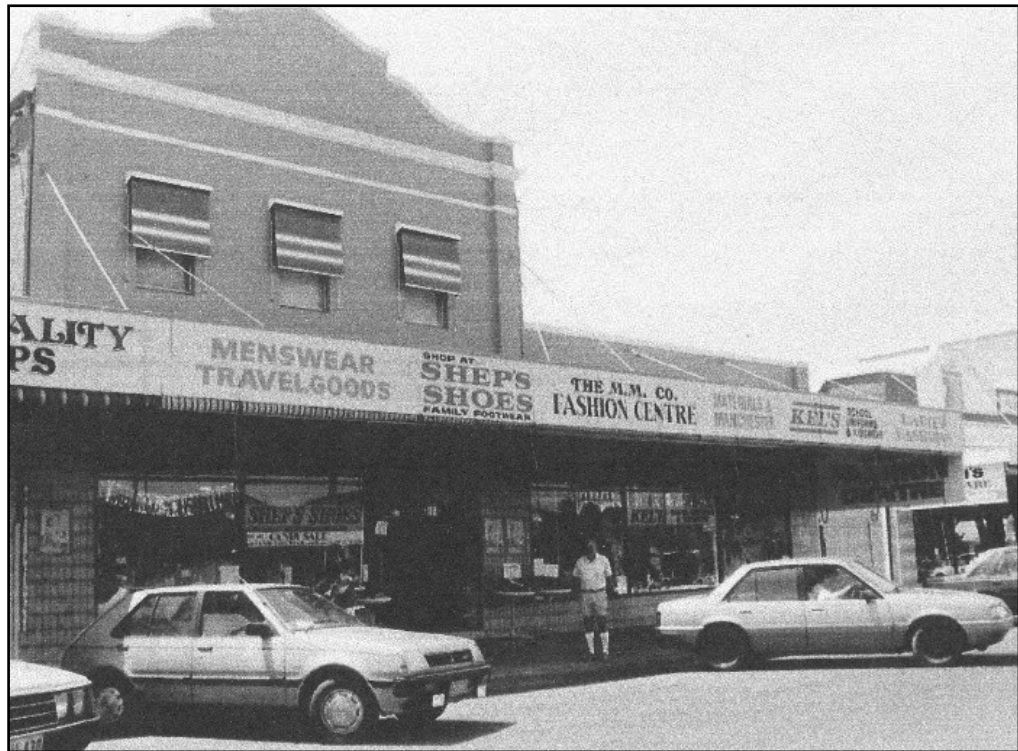

Edmond served as president of Apex Club of Wellington and compiled the history of the Club 'The First 1000 Dinners' booklet.

He was President Wellington Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Wellington Hospital Board.

The Wellington Times conducted a fund raiser event in 1998-99, 'Wellington Naturally', featuring businessmen in the nude – Edmond was a splendid Mr. January.

All money raised was presented to the Wellington District Hospital.

He was the much-loved husband of Gwen, and father of Murray, Ward and Janelle, father-in-law to Therese and cherished Pa of Hogan, Amelia, Mary,

The M.M. Co. Fashion Centre during the 1990s.

Ben and Charlie.

Thank you to the late Edmond Mellick for allowing me access to his family's memories.

He was most anxious that the Mellick family is not forgotten in the town that they served and loved.

Many people, particularly Eris Thorpe, have assisted with remembering a remarkable family.

Pre-booked bulky rubbish collection continues

COUNCIL (DRC) will continue the pre-booked bulky rubbish collection service until June 2028 for residents with a two or three bin service. Councillors adopted the decision at the May Ordinary Council Meeting. Pre-booked bulky rubbish collection has received positive feedback from residents who have used the service and has helped to divert waste from landfill by being able to separate recyclable materials from non-recyclable. “With the pre-booked bulky rubbish collection now extended, Council will continue promoting the service to the community, while the Customer Experience team remains available to assist residents with booking a collection if needed,” environment director Jennings said. Residents can place up to one box-trailer of rubbish on the kerbside the Sunday before their booked collection date. A collection cannot be conducted without a booking. Council will now investigate and implement having tipping vouchers and bulky rubbish collection services as interchangeable. This would mean instead of residents having one tipping voucher and one bulky rubbish collection service, they could opt to have two tipping vouchers or two bulky rubbish collection services. The annual tipping voucher program and pre-booked bulky rubbish collection service will continue to operate as normal until Friday, July 31, 2026 before any changes to the program regarding interchangeable vouchers. The pre-booked bulky rubbish collection has been operating for the past two years with 5765 collections made through the service.

Neurea - Low Carbon Landscapes

Are you interested in understanding the carbon potential of your property and comparing returns from Environmental Plantings with your current farm enterprise? On Friday 12 June, Mid Macquarie Landcare is hosting an information night in partnership with Little River Landcare for the Restoration Economics Project at the Neurea Community Hall starting from 4pm. We can provide you with a personalised report of your properties Carbon Potential on the night along with dinner. RSVP for BBQ (included) to 0401 376 209 or email project.coordinator@littleriverlandcare.com.au

Subsidised Soil Testing

Soil provides ecosystem services, enables plant growth, resists erosion, stores water, retains nutrients, and is a natural environmental buffer in the landscape. Healthy soil is the foundation of productive, sustainable agriculture. Managing soil health allows producers to work with the land against impacts such as erosion, reduced water infiltration and/ or nutrient cycling. Mid Macquarie is offering subsidised soil testing for local landholders. This project will be run based on the successful project conducted by Little River Landcare. We will collect soil samples from one good and one problem area of your property. Carry out comprehensive soil tests at 5cm increments to identify any production issues lurking below the surface (50% Subsidised. Total cost to you of $250). Provide expert support to interpret the results, to help you understand and how to address any issues. Expressions of interest are open now, contact us to get a copy of the EOI form or see this facebook post and email to info@mml.org.au to secure your place. You must be a member of Mid Macquarie or Little River Landcare to participate, we will be prioritising soil testing for pasture management.

King’s Birthday Honours

THE KING’S Birthday Honours List has been released, and I’m pleased to share that four locals from the Dubbo electorate have been honoured with some of our most prestigious awards! Medals of the Order of Australia (OAM) have been awarded to Susan (Sue) Hood of Dubbo for her service to regional agricultural shows and youth, and to Paul Griffiths of Mudgee for his service to sport, to people with disability, and to the community. Dubbo’s Kenneth Harrison has also been awarded a Public Service Medal (PSM) for his outstanding public service to emergency response and management in NSW, while Paul Cavalier of Gulgong has received an Australian Fire Service Medal (AFSM) for distinguished service as a member of an Australian fire service. Congratulations to Sue and Paul on your OAM, and to Kenneth and Paul on your PSM and AFSM respectively. ***

Housing woes

The latest data confirms the NSW housing and homelessness crisis is getting worse. Housing affordability is at an all-time low and the lack of social and affordable housing is putting more pressure on our frontline homelessness services. Since 2023, the social housing waitlist in NSW has increased by 23%, with 12,478 households on the priority waiting list. Under the Minns Labor Government, the regions have seen some of the highest increases in the need for priority housing. Last week I put the Minns Labor Government on notice - as housing and financial stress pushes more people to the brink under their watch, they must increase funding for our frontline homelessness services and commit to growing our social housing stock to match current and future need. ***

Check your smoke alarms

Annual messaging reminding you to check your smoke alarm has traditionally been anchored to the change of daylight saving, but with most clocks now changing automatically and fire alarm batteries lasting for up to 10 years, this messaging is verging on obsolete. Supported by every State and Territory, 1

June is now the official nationwide day of action known as ‘Smoke Alarm Action Day.’ But don’t worry if you missed testing your smoke alarm last week, there’s no better time than the present. Alternatively, you can always set up your own date - any date that is predictable and memorable, like a birthday or anniversary, works. A working smoke alarm halves your risk of fatality in a fire, so what are you waiting for? It takes just three seconds to test your smoke alarm. And yes, hardwired smoke alarms need to be tested too. ***

Police consultation

The NSW Police Force’s independent oversight body, the Law Enforcement Conduct Commission (LECC), is looking at ways to improve how officers respond to mental health-related interactions. By making a submission or completing the survey, you can help to ensure NSW Police has reasonable and adequate policies, systems, and training in place to help officers effectively respond.

You must be 18 or older to participate; however, submissions on behalf of young persons welcomed and encouraged. Share your experience by 30 June at: <https://www.haveyoursay.nsw.gov.au/Mental-health-and-policing-interactions-in-NSW> ***

New rider rule

Learner and provisional motorbike riders only have a few weeks left to secure mandatory safety equipment ahead of new rules kicking into gear next month. From 1 July, learner riders will be required to wear approved hi-vis and safety gloves at all times, and P1 and P2 riders will be required to wear approved safety gloves at all times. Fines and demerit points will apply for non-compliance. For more, visit: <https://www.nsw.gov.au/driving-boating-and-transport/driver-and-rider-licences/rider-licences/gear-requirements-for-learner-and-provisional-riders> ***

Happenings at Yeoval Central

Parent-student teacher conferences

EXPRESSIONS OF Interest (EOIs) for the 3-Way Parent-Student-Teacher Conferences were distributed to all students during Week 7. These interviews will take place on Tuesday 30 June, and completed EOIs for teacher bookings must be returned by Tuesday 16 June. This conference provides a valuable opportunity for open and direct communication between parents, students and teachers. We look forward to partnering with our families to celebrate student achievement and identify any additional support or resources your student may require.

Inter-school carnivals

YCS has two inter-school events coming up this month, allowing students to meet and interact with peers from different schools in our region: Our school is continuing the long-held tradition by participating in the 2026 3-Way Athletics Carnival, this year hosted by St Columba’s at the Yeoval Oval. The Carnival, which also involves Cumnock Public School, is an important opportunity for our K-6 students to compete against their peers from other local schools. Students in Years 3-6 have been given the opportunity to participate in the 2026 Soccer Gala Day at Trangie on Friday 19 June – which encourages friendly competition and motivates students to challenge themselves and develop personal resilience.

2026 School photos

Our annual school photos will be taken next Tuesday 16 June. School photos hold a significant importance for both students and the school, capturing moments in time that mark year by year growth while promoting a sense of community and belonging. Please ensure your child attends in full YCS uniform.

NSW Public Schools Parent survey

A reminder that we are inviting parents and carers to participate in the NSW Public Schools Survey. This Survey gives you the opportunity to share your experience at Yeoval Central, including communication, inclusion, wellbeing and how your child’s learning is supported. The Survey closes on Friday 19 June, with information on how to access the Survey sent home with all students during Week 6. Please contact the school office if you have any questions.

DISTRICT CROSS COUNTRY CARNIVAL

Yeoval Golf Course - Friday 29 May 2026

The herbicide QUADRANT is an effective tool for controlling broadleaf weeds in winter cereals. It contains four active ingredients and three modes of action allowing it to suppress or control 60 broadleaf weeds including wild radish and capeweed. Quadrant is suitable for use in herbicide resistant programs and can be applied in various tank mixtures to enhance its effectiveness against resistant weeds. Always read the label before use.

The main structures of the plant are the coleoptile, leaves, tillers, stem, roots and head. The coleoptile is a protective sheath that encases the first leaf. It pouches through the soil to the surface. It consists of a sheath, which wraps around the newly emerging leaf and a leaf blade. The leaf sheath contributes to stem strength. The leaf collar is the point where the leaf sheath joins the leaf blade. The leaf collar has two features; the ligule and the auricles. Leaves are produced in a set order on alternate sides of the stem. The final leaf to grow before head emergence is the flag leaf.

Tillers are lateral branches that arise from buds in the axil of the leaves at the main stem. Primary tillers are produced from the main stem and can form their own secondary tillers. The stem is made up of nodes and internodes. Nodes are where structures such as leaves, roots, tillers and spikelets join the stem. The structure of stem and leaves gives strength to the shoot helping to keep the plant upright. As the stem grows it changes function from providing support for leaves to storing carbohydrates and nutrients for grain filling.

Roots: Wheat has primary and secondary root systems. The first roots to appear are the primary supporting the plant until the secondary root system develops. These roots initiate from nodes within the crown after germination.

Quantity continues as motivating factor

ANOTHER POSITIVE wool market last week, extending gains to five consecutive selling days in an 88-cent rise in three weeks. Sydney and Melbourne’s limited offering of 23,413 bales was the smallest weekly offering in 12 months. Both days found good support, with Wednesday having the better. Gains were shared equally between all categories, Merino fleece stronger by 51 cents, skirtings up to 40 cents better, cardings a 55-cent jump, and crossbreds, the broader end lifted a huge 54 cents. Year-on-year, the EMI in Australian and US terms has risen 63.8% and 81.6% respectively, massive gains in anyone’s language. In this current low volume environment, the key for processors is to secure wool that delivers processing certainty. Buyers are willing to pay premiums for consistency and manufacturing efficiency, supporting demand for higher performing lots. The difference in similar lot pricing can be substantial, moving between 10 to 50 cents, even up to 100 cents for the right article. Processors’ decisions are being driven from much further up the chain, at the consumer end. For example, a long running campaign Woolmark and Tmall, a Chinese website performing as a platform for local and international businesses to sell in Greater China, have achieved a 28% year on-year increase in wool sales, with more than 5000 brands and merchants participating. For growers this shows brands are investing in wool programs and promotion, consumers are buying wool in volume, with its sustainability and quality credentials influencing purchasing decisions. This sustained retail demand plays a crucial role in maintaining confidence and competition throughout the supply chain, filtering down to the sale rooms. Merino wool particularly is clearly positioned and trusted by consumers, which underpins the long-term clip That underlying demand remains strong, giving encouragement to growers that investments made on farm will be rewarded over time, with previous market history not as relevant as it once was due to low production, with no stockpile, either on farm or in wool stores, to flood in on the back of current prices. With the supply and demand balance definitely on the side of the growers, current price levels look to be sustained over the long term. Slightly improved quantity of 26,178 bales this week, with Macwool and Carmichael wool offering only 387 bales today.

YOUR WOOL IN SAFE HANDS

Cloudy outlook for BOM

By Natasha Lobban, AuctionsPlus.

The BUREAU of Meteorology (BOM) has received more than 750,000 complaints about its new website, with the staggering figure confirmed by the Bureau’s Chief Executive Dr Stuart Minchin last week.

The figure emerged during questioning before the Senate Environment and Communications Legislation Committee, where Dr Minchin and his team faced scrutiny over both the volume of complaints and a significant cost blow-out on the project which has been loudly criticised by the nation’s farmers.

Dr Minchin acknowledged the scale of the complaints but said the organisation was working through them methodically and prioritising the most common issues first.

“It’s not something that can be solved overnight,” he said.

“We have done a number of releases of the website and updated a number of things since launch, including the way the rain radar, which is our primary piece of feedback, presents itself and there is more to come.

“So we are not completely finished with working through that very long list of feedback but we are addressing the most common pieces of feedback first.”

The minister responsible sees it differently.

Minister for the Environment and Water Murray Watt told the committee the project was largely complete.

“The website to the best of my knowledge has been completed,” he said.

“There are ongoing updates being made to that website as occurs with you know most website, but from my point of view the project is largely completed.”

Despite the complaints, Dr Minchin said overall site usage - of the new site and the legacy one - had grown since the relaunch in October 2025.

Many producers continue to access the old radars, stating that the new ones are not fit for purpose and difficult to navigate.

Nationals Senator Susan McDonald is one such user, telling the committee the new site was difficult to navigate.

She also asked how long the old resources would stay online, which was not answered.

“I would put to you that every single time I log onto use it - because I’m attempting to be, you know, open and exploring the new website - I go mad... it’s bloody impossible,” she said.

Senator McDonald also asked if a radar would be provided for Croydon’s Gap in Queensland.

Dr Minchin replied that the Bureau operates 69 radars nationally, covering about 98% of Australia’s population, with two currently offline for repairs.

He said there was no funding to expand the network.

“At this point we don’t have any funding to expand that network any further, but we are aware of strong community interest in a number of places around Australia for radar coverage,” he said.

He added the Bureau was working towards a project to look at future radar technologies that “may make radars cheaper, more efficient, and that might allow us to expand that network in future”, and noted Australia has 100 per cent satellite imagery coverage alongside automatic weather stations and a range of other data inputs used to produce forecasts.

Racing at Gulgong

THERE WERE plenty of supporters among the big crowd on Sunday when the locally trained and locally ridden Cumnock won the 1200 metres Gulgong Bowling and Sporting Club-Gulgong Gold Cup.

Rounding the final turn in front, the Brett Thompson trained Cumnock ($5.50) with Jake Pracey-Holmes in the saddle, kicked away to win the Cup by nearly three lengths from Dusty Vermeer (Leanne Boyd, $21) and Rothgate (Nick Palmer, $8).

Bred on their Dubbo property by Dr Bob and Mrs Jean Slack-Smith, Cumnock is from their broodmare Coasters, the dam of numerous winners.

Punters were off to a good start at Gulgong when Jake Pracey-Holmes, with the first leg of a double, led all the way on the Kelly Barber, Muswellbrook trained On Me ($2.80 favourite) to beat Atomic Bomber (Billy Cray, $17) and Lotina (Leanne Boyd, $31) in the 1400m Maiden Handicap.

The winning chances of the Brett Robb trained Prophet’s Lass seemed forlorn when the three-year-old filly was last and appeared to be struggling as the leading division broke well clear at the top of the straight in the 1000m Maiden Plate.

Owned and bred by Bell River Thoroughbreds, Prophet’s Lass (Nick Palmer, $2 fav) however came with a tremendous burst down the outside to beat Euphoric Miss (Juliet Partridge, $5) by a half0-head while Parrisident (Leanne Boyd, $5) battled on for third.

Apprentice Nick Palmer made it a race-to-race double when he won the Benchmark 50 Handicap on the Dar Lunn trained seven-year-old grey mare Ultra White.

Given a nice run behind the leaders, Ultra White ($5.50) finished best to account for Adviser (Gabrielle Johnston, $3.50) and Spotted (Zoe Hunt, $7).

Gabrielle Johnston is arguably the most improved apprentice in the region and her ride was outstanding on the Jane Clement, Mendooran trained Proclivity in the 1200m Class 2 Handicap.

From fifth position, Johnston pushed her mount through a narrow gap on the rails and Proclivity ($3 equ fav) sprinted to a half-length win over stablemate My Angel Shell (Kody Nestor, $8) and The Git Up (Jake Pracey-Holmes, $5).

Back in action after several months on the sidelines, Dubbo trainer Garry Lunn won the Aussie Country Catering-Thinkwater Dubbo Benchmark 58 Handicap with Charlottong.

Running a strong 1800m, Charlottong ($3.50 equ fav) ridden by Billy Cray led throughout and held on to beat Casterly Rock (Liam Blanch, $5.50) which finished well from the tail and Sel-linya (Nick Palmer, $9).

Racing on Saturday at Bligh Picnics (Mudgee) and Walgett while the Warren TAB meeting transferred from Coonamble is scheduled for Sunday.

St Mary's Catholic School

St Mary's Students Shine at Diocesan Spelling Bee

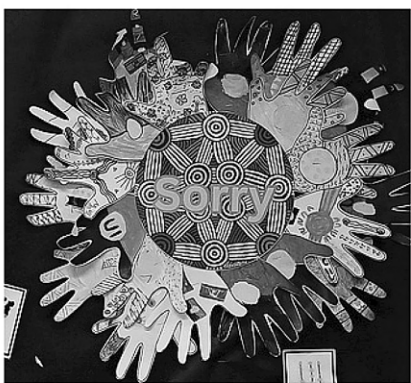

St Mary's is celebrating the achievements of the students who proudly represented the school at the recent Primary and Secondary Diocesan Spelling Bees. Competing against students from across the diocese, our participants demonstrated excellent preparation, confidence and determination while representing the school with pride.

A special congratulations goes to Annabel.R, who achieved runner-up in the highly competitive Stage 4 division. This outstanding result is a testament to Annabel's hard work and dedication. St Mary's congratulates all students who participated and thanks them for being wonderful ambassadors for our school community.

St Mary's 'All In' for National Reconciliation Week and Sorry Day

St Mary's School was proudly 'All In' for National Reconciliation Week and National Sorry Day. Throughout the week, students participated in meaningful learning experiences that explored the histories, cultures and contributions of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. A highlight of the week was a special soup lunch shared with some of our community Elders, providing an opportunity to connect, listen and learn together. The gathering celebrated the importance of relationships, community and mutual respect—values that lie at the heart of reconciliation. Through these experiences, students gained a deeper understanding of the importance of reconciliation and the role we all play in building a more united future.

The Bells of Wellington

(BY PINXIT)
Researched by Marie Hoffman from The Wellington Times, Thursday, March 11, 1937 – Page 7.

The bell doth toll,
I love its roll,
Its song I know full well;
I love its ringing,
For it call to singing,
With its bim, bim, bom, bell.

The call of the bell has, from the earliest times, summoned humans to many duties – some attendant with joy, others stern duty, others fear.

The first bell to be heard in ‘The Wellington Valley’ was undoubtedly ‘The Prison Bell’ attended with all the horrors and cruelties of the convict system.

Another bell sounded in those early days, ‘The Mission Bell’, conveyed the message of ‘Good Will Toward Men’ in its notes.

These bells are still with us.

Before the transepts were added to the Church of England at Wellington “The Prison Bell’ stood on a gallows at the back of the church and was rung for all the church services.

There was at the same time a bell hung in a miniature belfry on the apex of the western gable of the church, which was not used until after the transepts were completed.

The old “Prison Bell’ was taken away, and was erected at Stuart Town (then ‘The Ironbarks’) where it still does duty in its adopted sphere.

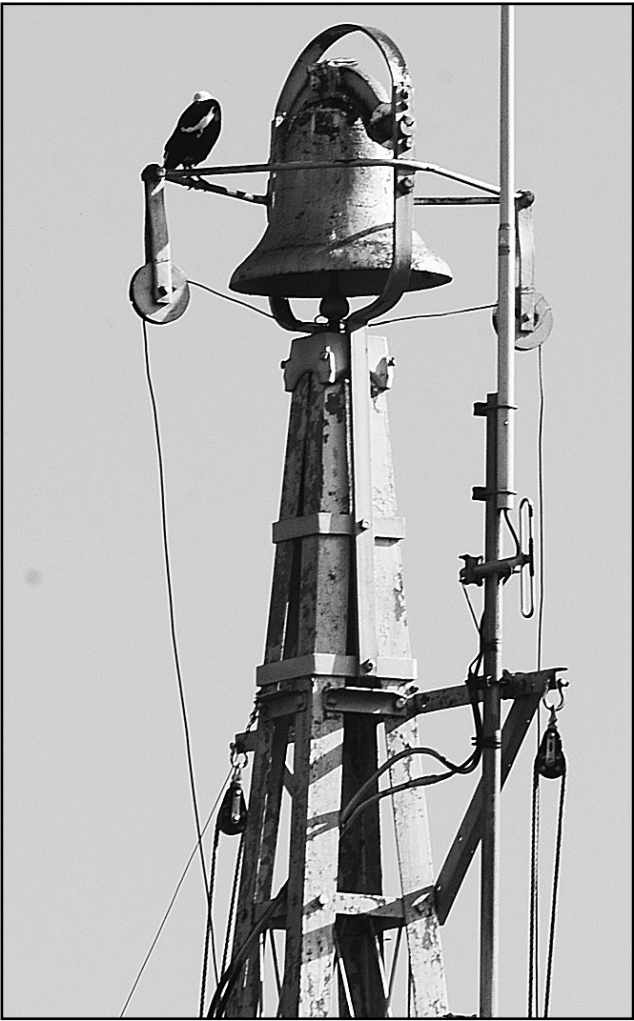

When the existing peal of tubular bells was installed at St John’s’ Wellington; the belfry was demolished, being in a very weather-worn state, and the bell was stored for years on the ground floor of the new brick belfry.

It was later taken to Geurie and erected there.

The ‘Mission Bell’ did duty, I believe, for the various churches erected by Parson Watson, and finally became the property of the Callaghan Memorial Wesleyan Church.

I trust it will do duty in the new and beautiful church which it is proposed to build on the land in Swift Street, lately purchased by the Methodist Church of Wellington.

The Catholic Church was the possessor of one of the finest bells in the State, weighing about 6cwt (hundred-weight).

Many years ago Mr McNiven of ‘Cardington’, had the bell recast, and until a few years ago its tones were heard resounding through the valley, and were often heard at Bodangora and Neurea.

There was another bell which was sometimes rung at the Catholic Church, which I believe, is now at the Kindergarten School in Warne Street.

(In mentioning the old bells at St Patrick’s Church, it must be remembered that there is now in the steeple a very heavy-tones bell presented by the Veech family, which will in years to come become one of the old bells of Wellington. This bell was cast in Longborough, England, by Taylor’s, the world-renowned bell-casters, who were responsible for the casting of the Rockefeller bells in New York as well as the carillon at the Sydney University.)

The bell that did duty at the old Public School in Lee Street was (when the existing school was erected in Arthur Street) sent on to the school at Wuuluman (since demolished).

I am not certain of its present station of service.

A new bell was hung in a perfectly balanced sandstone belfry tower facing Arthur Street about 15 years ago.

This beautiful piece of work was needlessly demolished – a poor compliment to the eminent school architect, Mr G. A. Mansfield.

The bell is now in use, standing near the fence in the playground still doing duty.

There was a bell hung in the Wellington Gaol, but it has been silent for many years.

It may still be there.

Should the efforts of some of our citizens be successful in getting the old gaol converted into a Domestic Science School, the old bell may again be brought into use, and its call answered by bright and happy students.

The last of the bells acquired by the town is the fire bell.

It was first erected in Nanima Crescent, at the side of the first fire station (now the Agriculture Bureau).

When the new fire station was built, it was erected in its present position.

We should be proud of such a line of Bell history.

The Church of St Matthew, Geurie, possesses, besides the bell, a very old hym board, and also a square-cut stone font worked in Stoney Creek sandstone.

Plain in the simplicity of design, it is moulded in perfect order.

It was first erected in St John’s, Wellington, and was undoubtedly designed by the architect of St John’s, Mr Edmond Blackett, the designer of St Andrew’s Cathedral, Sydney, and the Sydney University.

Racing’s Shane Horan to retire from Colin Hodges.

HIGHLY RESPECTED and very well-liked Coonamble based Shane Horan will work for the final time as a bookmaker next Saturday at the Walgett Cup meeting.

Retirement comes after taking on the punters for 56 years at tracks covering a wide area of New South Wales but mainly in the western region.

Travelling about 15,000kms a year, he worked at meetings from Tamworth in the north to Tullibigeal and Bedgerabong in the south to Louth in the west to Enngonia and Lightning Ridge towards the Queensland border and many other towns and villages.

Reared at Combara village, on the Warren Road between Coonamble and Gulargambone, from where his father Kevin Horan worked as a shearer until 65 years of age, Shane gained initial experience in the bookmaking trade when working as a clerk for Coonamble bookmaker Joe Evans.

At age 21, Shane Horan was granted a bookmakers licence and as the majority of race meetings until more recently were held on Saturdays and public holidays, he was able to also have a successful career for 42 years in the clerical department of Coonamble Shire Council.

The first meeting for Shane as a bookmaker was at Mendooran with 12 bookies fielding on the local races and nearly as many operating on the Sydney and other metropolitan events.

Very big crowds attended the country race meetings in those days including a Returned Services Day organised by Frank Fish and Artie Long at Coonamble where amongst a big ring of bookmakers Shane Horan held $50,000 on the local races.

To help look after his many punters both big and small, Shane had very good clerks, the longest serving being champion local golfer Peter Foody for 20 years and Reg Horan for 15 years while Shane’s granddaughter Annabel Barrett has been a clerk for the past two years.

With race meetings not being held on Sundays, Shane was able to also excel at sport including cricket where he was a classy top order batsman and left arm spin bowler, winning numerous premierships with the Combara and Coonamble Colts teams.

A good cricketer Shane played against was Wayne “Bronc” Lunn, a shearing contractor from Carinda who is still a prominent racehorse owner.

Impressive figures which included 133 runs not out and 6 wickets for 7 runs were taken into account when Shane was selected in the far west and north west team to contest the zone championships held every year.

A talented halfback, Shane played rugby league for eight years with Coonamble and in 1971 won the Group 14 Grand Final against Coonabarabran, played at Coolah.

Playing for Coonamble was Peter Kennedy who as a centre alongside Mick Cronin from Gerringong was in the last and only team selected from country clubs to beat Sydney in the annual City versus Country clash.

“In the Grand Final at Coolah we led 20-4 and after halftime we kicked off and Coonabarabran brought the ball well back inside our half where they spilled the ball in a tackle,” Shane said.

“Peter Kennedy went to dummy half and when we looked up he was planting the ball underneath the goal posts at the other end.

“Later, Peter Kennedy played for Forbes and Gundagai where he was warned to keep a close eye on an opposition player coming up from the junior ranks and tipped to become a future star.

“Peter Kennedy told me he got in first and decked him, that player later being the highly ranked international Les Boyd.” Shane added.

Maintaining his sporting ability at a good level, Shane played his last game of club cricket at age 48 in the competitive Coonamble competition.

Over his 56 years as a bookmaker, Shane Horan had as clients many of the biggest punters in the region including Allan Lloyd (Narromine), Les Gibson (Narromine), Les Cook (Newcastle), Cec Wallace (Parkes), Emmanuel Samios (Dubbo), Bill Sheridan (Wellington), Garry McCarney (Wellington), Vic Grady (Bogan Gate), Col Sullivan (Coonabarabran), Jacky Barton (“the Prince of Punters”) from Forbes and Ian O’Connor (Collie).

According to Shane Horan, the ultimate professional was Garry “Spud” Murphy from Dubbo who kept meticulous records on every horse and spent countless hours on research every week to beat the bookies and year after year returned a profit on the punt.

Bookmaker versus punter is often a tough game but as astute punter and racing follower Tim Moses recently stated, “I’ve never heard anyone say a bad word about Shane Horan”.

Reflecting on his many years in racing Shane mentioned some of the good gallopers at the western tracks where he worked including Shady Place, Native Orchid, Commercial Balance, Native Dawn and Marlotta while top jockeys included Wayne Weate, Harry Troy, Dennis Firth, Ray Bradley, Robert Bradley, Mathew Cahill , Greg Ryan and Paul Wearne while Andrew Banks from Gulargambone was a brilliant apprentice before continuing his career in Sydney.

Appropriately, Shane Horan will finish his bookmaker career at Walgett, once the headquarters of racing in the North West.

Richard Jackson, now at Dubbo, was the last remaining trainer at Walgett where at one stage there were up to 350 horses in work with outstanding trainers including Albert Hazlett, Harold Hamilton, Billy Rose and Tiger Bow while numerous leading jockeys served their apprenticeships at Walgett including Harry Troy, the Lunn brothers, the Bradley brothers, Wayne Weate, Paul Wearne and Ron Sheargold.
