Feathered friends steal show

AN AUDITORIUM packed with more than 140 'Bird Nerds' and 100 artworks was an incredible opening night for Wellington Arts' Bird Nerds Art Prize.

The room was buzzing at the Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club last Friday evening with local and regional artists, community members and art lovers, all enjoying the outstanding quality and diversity of work on display.

Guest judge, Jack Randell, had the challenging task of selecting the winners from an impressive field of entries.

Wellington Arts president, Emily Falson said the atmosphere was fantastic, with plenty of conversation, admiration and appreciation for the creativity on show.

The art show and exhibition was a joint promotion of Wellington Arts and Mid Macquarie Landcare.

And it's not over yet!

The exhibition continues at the Soldiers Club until tomorrow (Friday, October 23) and is open daily from 10.30am to 4pm.

"That's when our much-anticipated People's Choice Award will be announced," Emily said.

"If you haven't visited yet, there's still time to come along and see what all the excitement is about – an entry if free!"

Judge, Jack Randell, Debbie Murray, Hayley Jones of St Mary's, Annabel and Lily Roberts and Simon Ferguson.

Financial Assistance Grants latest

I'VE CORRESPONDED previously about the Financial Assistance Grants (FA Grants) Methodology review being conducted by the NSW Loca Government Grants Commission, and how the proposed new model would have seen the Federal funds distributed to NSW councils based on equity and financial need.

Under that proposed new model Dubbo Regional Council would have received an extra $4.9 million in the first year, and nearly all western councils would have seen much needed increases in their FA Grants allocations.

And some councils would have received less FA Grant money.

Whenever there is a proposed redistribution of money this close to an election, and given the public opposition from councils who would have received less money if the formula was financial needs-based, it was hardly a surprise to see the Grants Commission send out an emailed letter late on Friday afternoon saying that there would be no change to the current distribution model.

What is extremely disappointing though is the paragraph that states that: "If additional Financial Assistance Grants funding becomes available, the Commission may revisit a revised model for the 2029–30 council term, following further consultation with the sector and appropriate transition planning."

Instead of further consulting the Local Government sector on the proposed model, the Grants Commission has pretty much thrown the baby out with the bathwater, and kicked the can down the road on funding according to equity and financial needs.

A better approach would have been for the Grants Commission to:

* Continue to consult with the Local Government sector on an improved funding model rather than stopping all further consultation.
* Remove Disaster Relief Funding Arrangements from the calculations as it is post-natural disaster funding to simply replace destroyed infrastructure, not funding for new projects.
* Looked at an extended phase-in period of something like seven years to allow councils time to adjust budgets and programs.
* Be fully open with councils' and peak bodies on the methodology/formula. Include a number of fully worked examples of exactly what numbers are being used in the calculations so that genuinely informed feedback can be given. We saw that secrecy breeds resistance.
* Not drop the announcement of major funding reform on councils' five months out from a State election which is predicted to be fairly close.

Ultimately, more money needs to be directed to councils to continue to deliver existing services without significant rate rises.

IPART Rate Peg for 2027-2028

The Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal (IPART) has set the rate peg for the 2027-28 financial year.

For Dubbo Regional Council the maximum amount that rates could be increased by is 3.8 per cent - the second lowest in the state.

With wages increasing by 4pc and other costs such as bitumen, concrete, PVC, steel and so on increasing by much more than 3.8pc it makes it extremely difficult to maintain services and keep up with required asset renewal.

The core rate peg for the 2027-28 financial year for each council across NSW (i.e. before applying the population factor) ranges from 3.7pc to 5.4pc.

IPART sets the annual rate peg for councils in NSW. This is the maximum percentage by which a local council can increase its total general rate income each year and applies to general rate income (property rates).

It does not apply to stormwater, water, or domestic waste management charges (though waste pegs are regulated separately).

The rate peg on the Local Government Cost Index, which measures changes in the cost of labour, materials, and operating expenses, alongside factors like population growth adjustments, election cost smoothing, and emergency services levies.

The rate peg limits overall council income, not necessarily every individual ratepayer's bill, which can vary depending on land valuations and how the council distributes the rate burden.

Letter to Editor

I PRE-EMPT this letter by cautioning that statistics can mislead, if not considered with a holistic perspective, but nevertheless it is interesting and concerning to look at some published statistics relevant to Australia today.

One Trillion dollars of Government Debt, costing $75 billion in yearly interest, and the imposed cost of repayment by future generations, when added to the fact that we have the highest household debt to income, (almost $15,000/household) in the world at 1.77 times "annual disposable income" and much of it at Credit Card interest rates exceeding 20 per cent, are a restrictive burden on us and future generations.

Home ownership statistics indicate that in 1990, 42pc of home owners had no mortgage commitment, whereas today that has dropped to 30-32pc across 2.9 million households and in 1981 those with an average mortgage had paid it off by 52 years of age and by 2015 this increased to 62 years of age.

Today, 37pc of home owners still have a mortgage on retirement and with the average age of first home buyers currently being 34 to 37 years most will still have a mortgage on retirement.

The Employment to Population ratio in Australia was last reported at 63.9pc with 14.84 million employed, 3.7 million of these being taxpayer funded, and today there is 4.7pc or almost one million of the population unemployed and seeking work whilst on Jobseeker payments between $825 and $885 per fortnight, or other Government benefit with claims this is unliveable.

The last reported National Median Personal Income" was $74,100, or $90,500 excluding part time and casual employees and the average weekly earnings of Public employees was $2263.10 compared to $2034.10 for private employees.

The cost of living varies across Australia but for a comparison, on average our reported cost of living is 5.6pc higher than the United States.

Immigration has seen India, due to "skilled migration", overtake England in immigration numbers with 971,000 living and working in Australia, and immigration from Muslim countries has grown to 3.7pc of the population (now over 850,000) of which 43pc are reported as "not working",

Islam is now our fastest growing Religion in Australia and worldwide is expected to be equal to Christianity by 2050 and the dominant religion by 2070.

An all-time record of 50,000 businesses have closed down since the Covid Pandemic, many with debts exceeding several years of their income, whilst many others have gone offshore to survive, and concurrently substantial government grants have been allocated to avoid closures particularly in a number of high energy demand industries.

Overall productivity continues to decline and Australia now ranks 29th of 39 advanced economies after a further 0.2pc decline in 2026 and Headline inflation at 4.0pc remains among the highest in all advanced economies and persistently hovering above the 2-3pc acceptable threshold.

The Australian Government has identified what they perceive as "Generational Inequality" in living standards and home ownership, and have initiated tax changes and policies affecting existing home owners, small business, and Trust ownerships and this is currently playing out with considerable controversy and backtracking.

What does all this amount to for the future of our Prosperity, Traditional Values, Lifestyle, Opportunities, Social Harmony and Cultural Identity?

How will Australia be defined in generations to come and should we be addressing most of these issues more aggressively?

NSW Gas Statement outlines role of gas

THE STATE Government has released the NSW Gas Statement which outlines the critical, defined role gas will play to rebuild NSW's domestic manufacturing sector, support the growth of new low-carbon industries, and transform the energy system to power the state's future prosperity.

The NSW Gas Statement provides an overview of the state's gas outlook and the actions being taken to support energy security, economic growth and the orderly transition to a net zero economy, according to Minister for Energy Penny Sharpe.

NSW's energy system is changing rapidly, as ageing coal-fired power stations are replaced by renewable energy, firmed by a significant amount of storage and backed up by gas-fired power stations.

Forecasts from the Australian Energy Market Operator indicate potential gas supply shortfalls on Australia's east coast in the years ahead, highlighting the importance of careful planning to ensure energy security throughout the transition.

NSW relies on gas from other states. Securing diverse gas supply for NSW will support industry to access reliable, affordable energy sources and help NSW remain a competitive and attractive investment destination.

NSW gas production, alongside investment in import terminals, gas pipeline and storage, renewable fuels, electrification and energy efficiency, will safeguard NSW against supply disruptions.

Earlier this year, the Government announced it would open new areas in the state's Far West for gas exploration.

This complements the existing Narrabri Gas Project to help secure a reliable domestic supply for the East Coast. Under the NSW Gas Statement, no new areas will be released for gas exploration.

World-Class violinist Jonathon Glonek to perform in Wellington October 30 and Dubbo October 31

THE BENDOC Philharmonic is bringing internationally acclaimed Australian violinist Jonathon Glonek to Wellington for a special solo performance on Friday, October 30 at 7 pm.

Presented at the Anglican Parish of Wellington, the concert will showcase Glonek's exceptional musicianship through a virtuosic program featuring masterpieces by Bach, Paganini and Ysaÿe, alongside a rare performance of Scheherazade's Dreams by acclaimed Ukrainian composer Mikhail Shukh.

The work holds deep personal significance for Glonek, who first met Shukh while performing in Kyiv with the Kyiv Festival Symphony in 2002.

The two formed a lasting friendship, with Shukh later composing the technically demanding work specifically for Glonek.

Inspired by Rimsky-Korsakov's beloved Scheherazade, the composition reimagines its iconic themes through a contemporary lens while remaining firmly rooted in the classical tradition.

The program reflects Glonek's belief that classical music continues to evolve while remaining accessible, relevant and emotionally powerful for modern audiences.

With a career spanning Australia, Europe, Asia and the United States, Jonathon Glonek has earned a reputation as one of Australia's leading concert violinists.

Renowned for his expressive performances and technical mastery, he is passionate about sharing world-class classical music with regional audiences and ensuring communities beyond the major cities have access to exceptional live performance.

Jonathon Glonek said he was looking forward to performing in Wellington and connecting with local audiences.

"Performing in regional communities is always a privilege," he said.

"There is something incredibly special about sharing live music in places where audiences are genuinely engaged and eager to experience something unique.

"I'm looking forward to visiting Wellington and presenting a program that celebrates some of the greatest works ever written for the violin while introducing audiences to the extraordinary music of Mikhail Shukh."

Glonek said the tour forms part of his ongoing commitment to bringing Australia's finest classical musicians to rural and regional communities.

"Classical music is a gift that should be available to everyone, yet opportunities to hear it live outside our major cities can be limited," he said.

"This tour is about ensuring regional audiences can experience some of the world's greatest music, performed at the highest level, in their own communities."

The performance is expected to appeal to both devoted classical music lovers and those discovering the genre for the first time.

He will also be performing in Dubbo at the Western Plains Cultural Centre in Wingewarra Street, 7pm on Saturday, October 31.

Wellington Lions roar for community wellbeing

A SIMPLE cuppa and a conversation helped put mental health and community connection in the spotlight as Wellington Lions joined a national campaign encouraging Australians to make their wellbeing a priority.

The Wellington NSW Lions Club brought its community wellbeing message to the heart of town last Saturday, hosting a morning tea at their Preloved Bookshop in Nanima Crescent as part of the Australian Lions Wellbeing Foundation's Roar for Wellbeing campaign.

Held during Mental Health Month, the event invited residents to go along for a cuppa, a chat and an opportunity to connect with others, reinforcing the important message that looking after our mental health can begin with small, everyday actions.

The Roar for Wellbeing campaign encourages Lions clubs across Australia to promote positive mental health, strengthen social connections and help make conversations about wellbeing a normal part of community life.

The Australian Lions Wellbeing Foundation relaunched the campaign in October 2026 following a successful inaugural year in 2025, when more than 50 Lions clubs and districts participated in activities ranging from community walks and morning teas to school events, workshops and mental health awareness displays.

For Wellington, the morning tea provided an opportunity to bring that national message into a familiar local setting, where people could take time out of their day, enjoy a conversation and feel part of their community.

Lion Jude Besterwitch a Clinical Psychotherapist (pictured right) reiterated that self-care was not a luxury or a reward for getting everything else done.

Instead, it is an essential part of maintaining the energy needed for relationships, work, volunteering and everyday responsibilities.

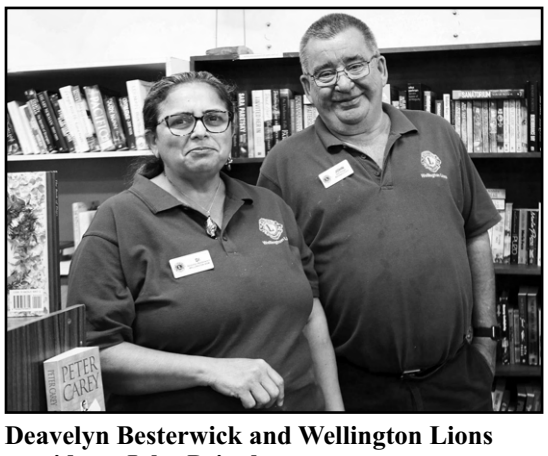

He encouraged participants to pause for a brief check-in with themselves. Asking questions like "What am I noticing physically?", "What thought keeps looping?" and "What would help in the next hour?" can help people recognise what they need before deciding on a next step.

Five simple practices underpin the campaign's approach to everyday wellbeing: getting adequate sleep, choosing regular movement, eating and drinking well, connecting with someone who provides support, and taking time to reset through activities such as breathing, enjoying nature, listening to music or having a short break. The message is that small, repeatable choices matter more than perfection.

Community organisations such as Lions also play an important role in creating opportunities for people to come together, particularly at a time when loneliness, stress and mental health challenges can affect people of all ages and backgrounds.

By encouraging conversation and connection in an accessible, welcoming environment, the Wellington Lions' initiative reflected the campaign's broader goal of helping people feel supported and reminding them that they do not have to navigate life's challenges alone.

Sheep eID rollout - make it right before making it mandatory

NSW FARMERS and WoolProducers Australia are calling on the NSW Government to rethink its mandatory electronic identification (eID) rollout for sheep and goats, warning farmers are being forced to bear unnecessary costs and compliance burdens before the national traceability system is ready.

Both organisations support strong biosecurity and effective livestock traceability but are calling for full mandatory implementation to be deferred until the system is ready, and for existing transitional provisions to be retained to prevent double tagging.

NSW Farmers Wool Committee Chair, Craig Mitchell, said full mandatory implementation must be backed by reliable systems, adequate infrastructure and fair funding arrangements.

He said producers were particularly concerned about the requirement to electronically tag older sheep and goats already fitted with compliant visual National Livestock Identification System (NLIS) tags.

"Farmers who have done the right thing and complied with existing identification requirements should not be forced to tag the same animals twice simply because the government has changed the rules," Mr Mitchell said.

"These animals are already identified and traceable, yet producers are being asked to bear the cost of another tag, additional labour and unnecessary livestock handling.

"There's also an animal welfare impact from having to bring stock back through the yards and handle them again, all without a clearly demonstrated improvement in traceability.

"Producers understand the importance of biosecurity, but we need a system that is practical, affordable and actually delivers the outcomes it's supposed to achieve."

WoolProducers Australia CEO, Jo Hall, said the wool industry had consistently maintained that support for mandatory eID was conditional on appropriate national arrangements being in place.

"Effective livestock traceability is essential to protecting Australia's biosecurity, our livestock industries and our international market access," Ms Hall said.

"However, mandating electronic identification before the national database and supporting systems are fully operational risks imposing significant costs on producers without delivering the traceability improvements the industry has been promised.

"Producers cannot be expected to keep absorbing additional costs and compliance obligations while fundamental questions about system readiness remain unresolved."

Both organisations have also raised concerns about delays to the NLIS database uplift project, inconsistent scanning and reporting practices, and the cumulative costs of electronic tags, equipment, labour and ongoing compliance.

Mr Mitchell said the NSW Government needed to listen to producers and address these concerns before proceeding with full mandatory implementation.

"This isn't about resisting better traceability. It's about getting the implementation right and ensuring farmers aren't left paying the price for a system that isn't ready," Mr Mitchell said.

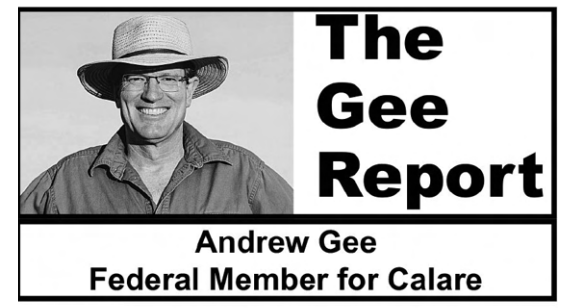

Ms Hall said retaining transitional identification arrangements would be an important step towards ensuring producers were treated fairly.

"Good biosecurity policy must be built on sound systems, practical implementation and genuine consultation with the people expected to make it work," Ms Hall said.

"The NSW Government must address these outstanding concerns and demonstrate the system is ready before imposing further costs and obligations on producers."

Slash the tobacco tax and crack down on the crooks

THE EXPLOSION of illegal tobacco and vapes is a massive policy failure!

Repeatedly hiking taxes hasn't stopped demand.

It's just created a booming multibillion-dollar market for crooks and organised crime syndicates.

Last year I called for the slashing of the excise on tobacco to pull the rug out from under these criminal gangs.

I'm pleased to see my policy position has now been plagiarised by One Nation, the Liberals and the Nationals.

They say it's the sincerest form of flattery!

What the Government has done so far, has not been good enough.

We are handing a flourishing business to criminal networks while up to $11 BILLION in lost excise goes up in smoke!

Imagine how many Great Western Highways, roads, bridges, hospitals and schools we could build.

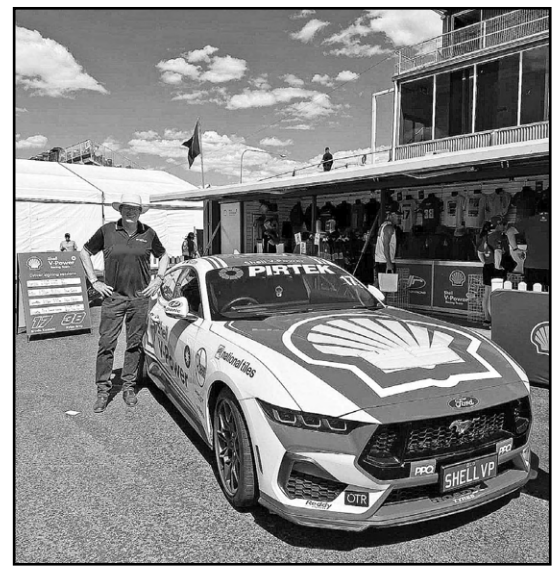

From firebombings in our streets to small businesses losing trade, this cannot go on.

We need to back this policy up with genuine enforcement and support legitimate businesses NOW!

Back Bathurst – Back the Track

In parliament last week, I gave a massive shoutout to Bathurst Regional Council, Supercars and all the local businesses and volunteers who made the Great Race such an incredible success.

But amidst the high-octane excitement, one thing became crystal clear on live TV: our track surface is showing its age and cracking under the pressure.

The message I gave to Parliament was that if we want to keep Mount Panorama as the physical and spiritual home of Australian motorsport, we can't wait.

State and Federal Governments need to open their wallets and cheque books for badly needed upgrades!

The drivers love it.

The fans love it.

Now our Governments need to show some love for it, too.

Make it happen!

tech talk with Mathew Dickerson, Axxis Comworld

MANY YEARS ago, one of my children approached me with a serious complaint.

The Wi-Fi wasn't working properly in one of our toilets.

Now, whether anyone should be using a phone while sitting on the toilet is an entirely separate discussion, but the technical challenge was clear.

I needed to improve wireless coverage throughout our home. Apparently, reliable internet access had become an essential bathroom service, right alongside running water.

Wi-Fi has come a long way since its early days. The original standards arrived in the late 1990s, but the technology gained momentum with Wi-Fi 4 in 2009.

Wi-Fi 5 followed in 2013, delivering faster connections as video streaming became popular. Wi-Fi 6 arrived in 2019, introducing clever ways to manage multiple connected devices more efficiently. Wi-Fi 6E opened up the less congested 6GHz frequency band, while Wi-Fi 7, introduced in 2024, offers greater capacity, reduced delays and the ability for compatible devices to communicate across multiple frequency bands simultaneously. The theoretical maximum speed has jumped from 600 megabits per second with Wi-Fi 4 to approximately 46 gigabits per second with Wi-Fi 7. Of course, these are theoretical maximums under ideal conditions, not speeds you'll experience while checking emails in the kitchen.

And speed isn't everything. Modern Wi-Fi standards are increasingly designed to handle the growing number of devices competing for wireless connections.

Once upon a time, household Wi-Fi might have connected a single notebook computer. Then came smartphones and tablets. Today, televisions, streaming devices, security cameras, doorbells, washing machines, solar inverters, air conditioners, lights and door locks all want their slice of the wireless action.

Even the family dog might have a tracker, although these mainly use Bluetooth or mobile networks.

Our homes are becoming miniature technology ecosystems, and reliable connectivity is increasingly important. But here's the problem. Wi-Fi speed and Wi-Fi coverage are not the same thing. Imagine installing a magnificent sound system in your lounge room. It might sound incredible nearby, but that doesn't mean you'll hear it clearly through three brick walls at the opposite end of the house. Wireless signals face similar obstacles.

This is where multiple wireless access points and mesh networks enter the picture.

A wireless access point, or WAP, is essentially another location from which your network broadcasts Wi-Fi. Install several throughout your home and you can provide excellent coverage without expecting one router to reach every corner.

Ideally, each access point connects to your main network using an Ethernet cable. This provides a fast, reliable connection back to the central Internet connection.

Configure them with identical network names, passwords and compatible security settings, and your devices can automatically switch among access points as you move around. But running cables through an existing home isn't always practical.

Mesh Wi-Fi systems offer an alternative. Several coordinated units spread coverage throughout the house, often communicating wirelessly with one another. They're convenient and relatively easy to install, although performance can suffer compared to wired connections.

So, should everyone rush out and purchase Wi-Fi 7 equipment? Maybe.

Your phone, tablet or computer must support Wi-Fi 7 to enjoy its particular advantages. Older devices will still connect, but won't suddenly become faster because you've purchased a new router.

If your existing network reliably handles your household's needs, upgrading may deliver little noticeable improvement. Better positioning or additional access points could make a much bigger difference.

As our homes become increasingly connected, reliable Wi-Fi will become as fundamental as electrical wiring. The smartest home won't necessarily have the newest router, but the network designed to support everything connected to it.

Including, apparently, someone sitting on the throne.

We will remember them - Lest we forget

Remembrance Day 2026

WELLINGTON RSL Sub Branch members are inviting the community to join returned service men and women at the Wellington Cenotaph on Remembrance Day – Wednesday, November 11.

This year the sub-branch has invited local schools to also participate, hoping for more community involvement as the service is attracting more interest each year.

This year people are asked to assemble at the cenotaph by 10.20am with the service to commence at 10.30am including a minute's silence at 11am, commemorating the official end of World War One on the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month 1918.

Saunders calls for Mitchell Highway upgrades following fatal single-vehicle crash

From ABC Radio, By Zaarkacha Marlan and Jennifer McCutcheon

A FATAL crash has sparked calls for the upgrade of the Mitchell Highway, a key western NSW highway.

Emergency services were called to the Mitchell Highway at Apsley, about five kilometres south of Wellington, shortly after 4am last Thursday.

NSW Police said officers arrived to find a vehicle had crashed into a ditch.

The driver died at the scene and had not as yet been formally identified.

Dubbo state MP Dugald Saunders said more money should be spent on the Mitchell Highway to keep drivers safe.

"Any death on our roads is one too many," he said.

"The Mitchell Highway is a significant provider of daily traffic and also freight traffic.

"It is just being left behind [apart from] a bit of patchwork here and there."

A crime scene was been established as police investigated the circumstances surrounding the crash.

More overtaking lanes needed

Earlier this year, Transport for New South Wales lowered the speed limit on the Mitchell Highway between Wellington and Dubbo to 100 kilometres an hour.

But Mr Saunders said more overtaking lanes were also needed.

"My question remains: why would you upgrade and widen when you are not then attaching overtaking lanes anywhere else and drop the speed limit?" he said.

"It doesn't make sense."

Earlier, the highway was closed in both directions, with motorists diverted through Burrendong Way to Orange and advised to allow an additional 90 minutes of travel time.

Previous serious crash

The fatal crash came five months after a multi-vehicle crash on the same highway at Neurea, south of Wellington, that left a 70-year-old woman critically injured.

Two trucks and two cars were involved in the crash near Dripstone Road.

Police alleged a semitrailer crashed into vehicles stopped at roadworks, and continued for another 500 metres before coming to a stop.

A 54-year-old truck driver was later charged over the incident.

A report on Thursday's fatal crash would be prepared for the coroner.

A Transport for NSW Spokesperson said in a statement: "Our thoughts are with everyone affected by a serious crash on the Mitchell Highway at Apsley near Wellington."

Transport for NSW is currently working on safety improvements at six locations between Orange and Wellington that have a history of crashes.

Arts and Crafts Club to celebrate 60 years with 'open day'

"WELLINGTON ART CLUB FORMED
University Tutor Addresses Enthusiastic Local Meeting
In what was described by those in attendance as an excellent response, almost 50 people on Monday night met to form an Independent Art Group in Wellington and to hear an address by Mr. A. King, Staff Tutor, University of Sydney Department of Adult Education.
Following Mr. King's enlightening and entertaining address, the meeting elected office bearers and made initial arrangements for the foundation of the Wellington Art Club"

ABOVE WAS part of the report in the Wellington Times that was published two days later, on Wednesday 7th December 1966.

The founding Office Bearers were President: Col. R.F. Oakes, Vice Presidents: Gillian England (Ryan) and Bruce Sherringham, Secretary: Marjorie Wyatt, Treasurer: Marlene Hoskin, Publicity Officer: Mrs A.T. Maurice.

The meeting was convened by the Wellington Arts Council under the chairmanship of Ken Masters.

The first meeting was above Dr. Darrel Wall's Dental Surgery on the corner Percy and Bank Streets on 12th December 1966.

The Club was granted a room in the Museum located on the corner of Warne and Percy Streets in 1967 by Council which had recently purchased the building.

Originally, the building was the site of the Bank of New South Wales from 1883 to 1922 and was purchased from the Bank by the Catholic Church for a Presbytery. The Museum remained there until 2022.

The Art and Craft Centre used the upstairs rooms until they were needed for use by the Historical Society.

They were able to use the existing pottery room downstairs, and they were given the use of the CWA Hall.

The Art and Craft Centre applied to Wellington Shire Council for an extension to the Museum in June 1986 and successfully raised money to build the extension to the pottery room for workspace.

This was opened on 13th November 1987 by the Mayor of Wellington, Barney De Fonte.

The Art and Craft Centre vacated the Museum in 2013 and moved to empty Doctors rooms in Percy St. before moving into the Old Police Station in 2014.

In 2021 Dubbo Regional Council required the Old Police Station to relocate the Museum.

The Art and Craft group gratefully accepted an invitation from Rev. Carl Palmer to meet in their present home in the small hall at St. Johns Anglican Church.

Over the past 60 years, the club has hosted many events including Art Exhibitions such as the Wellington Art Club Inter Club Art Prize held during the Wellington 1967 Sesqui-Centenary celebrations and combined with Wellington Lions Club for the Wellington Art and Craft Exhibition.

There have also been many Summer Schools and workshops for varied Arts and Crafts.

A Craft shop was successfully opened and operated in the corrugated tin building in Fong Lee's Lane from June 1976 to June 1985.

In recent years, donations have been made to many charities and organisations in Wellington through weekly fees and sales from member donations on the charity table.

During the 2018 drought, $1000 was donated to the Geurie Lions Club Need for Feed Hay Drive.

This donation helped pay for half a semi-trailer load of hay to help several farmers in the region.

Many people have ensured the Wellington Arts and Crafts Club has continued for the past 60 Years, and to celebrate, there will be an Open Day for the public on Thursday, October 29 in the small hall of St Johns Anglican Church, Warne Street.

Planned new museum collection needs assistance

WELLINGTON MUSEUM is currently seeking memorabilia, photographs, documents and personal stories relating to the Korean and Vietnam Wars, particularly from veterans and families with connections to Wellington and surrounding districts.

"Plans are under way; however, the museum's collection is severely lacking in this area," Wellington Historical Society & Wellington Museum, secretary, Beth Hattenfels said.

"We're also very interested in hearing personal recollections from veterans and their families.

"We believe there may be many untold stories of local servicemen and women that deserve to be recognised and preserved before they're lost to time."

People can contact to museum directly.

Garden competition judging today

Busy day for garden judge

THE ANNUAL Wellington Rotary and Wellington & District Leader garden competition has attracted 16 entries from in town and surrounding rural areas.

Seven Town Gardens and five Country Gardens are entered while there are four entries from Non-Residential Gardens including Wellington Correctional Centre. Rotary's Garden competition coordinator Beth Hattenfels said it was fantastic to see so much enthusiasm for gardening across our community.

"We sincerely appreciate the time, effort and dedication all have put into their gardens."

Judging commenced at 8.30am this morning (Thursday, October 22) by competition judge Lorraine Holland and will continue throughout the day. "With 16 gardens to visit, our judge, Lorraine, certainly has a big day ahead of her," Ms Hattenfels said.

Special Celebration

LAST FRIDAY night the Western NSW Community Legal Service (WNSWCLC) celebrated a very special occasion – 30 years of service to the western region.

While the journey has not always been easy, it was wonderful to join the WNSWCLC team to celebrate their achievements over the past three decades and look toward what comes next.

The event also marked 10 years of the Western Women's Legal Support (WWLS), which WNSWCLC established after recognising a gap in specialist domestic violence support for women and families in our region. Congratulations to WNSWCLC and WWLS – your commitment to ensuring people out west have access to quality generalist and specialised legal support is nothing short of extraordinary and I can't wait to see what comes next!

Unity in Rhythm

It was an honour to be a guest of Orana Gujarati Samaj at the Navratri Garba Night - Unity in Rhythm on Saturday.

Garba is a traditional folk dance from Gujarat in western India, known for its colourful traditional clothing, joyful music, rhythmic clapping and circular dance formations. It was fantastic to join our community for a night filled with joy, lots of dancing, colour and good company.

Last chance to enter

Entries for my 2026 Christmas Card Competition close at 5pm, Friday, October 30. This year's theme is Design Santa's New Sleigh: think flying tractors, Chrissy decorations or even added features like a snack station for Santa and his reindeer.

The possibilities are endless! I've already received some really creative entries and I'm excited to see what comes in before entries close.

In addition to featuring on the front of my Christmas Card, the winning entry will receive a $200 gift voucher to the store of the student's choice, while second place will receive a $100 gift voucher and a $50 voucher for third. Remember, all entries must be A4 in size with no cotton, glitter or anything stuck to the page, not be folded, and have the artist's name, age and primary school should be clearly marked on the back.

Entries can be sent via post to Dugald Saunders MP, PO Box 1327, DUBBO NSW 2830, or dropped in to my Dubbo electorate office at 1/18 Talbragar Street.

Small Business Month

October is Small Business Month, so this month I want to shine a light on the backbone of our local economy – our local small businesses and the people who run them!

Throughout the month of October I want to try and get out to as many businesses as I can. I've already had a chance to catch up with a number of familiar faces around the electorate, in addition to meeting a lot of new ones too!

If you or someone you know operates a business in the Dubbo electorate, or if you have a favourite small business that doesn't get the attention you think it deserves, I'd love to hear from you.

Shoot an email to dubbo@parliament.nsw.gov.au or send in a contact submission at dugaldsaunders.com.au/contact-us.

Do you know your risk?

Shingles is a common illness that can occur at any age, to anyone who has had chickenpox, but did you know the risk is higher in people aged over 50, who have a weakened immune system or who had chickenpox within the first year of life?

Chronic health conditions such as cardiovascular disease, diabetes, asthma and rheumatoid arthritis can also be associated with an increased risk of shingles.

The potential impact of shingles can extend beyond its symptoms, disrupting the moments and priorities that matter in everyday life, including work, family and caring responsibilities, social activities and day-to-day tasks.

If you're aged 50 and over, especially if you live with certain chronic health conditions, speak with a healthcare professional to better understand your personal shingles risk and what it could mean for you.

SUPPORTING THE VOLUNTEERS WHO MAKE A DIFFERENCE IN OUR COMMUNITY!

It was wonderful to present a $2,000 Volunteer Grant to Julie from Doin It For Rural Aussie Kids at Cameron Park in Wellington recently.

This incredible volunteer-led organisation supports rural families doing it tough through three fantastic programs:

Christmas Assistance – providing personalised Santa sacks to children aged 0–18 years.

KISS (Kids In-need Santa Sacks) – working alongside health professionals in hospitals to deliver Christmas gifts to children and families experiencing hardship.

YOWIE (Youth, Outback, Work-hard, Inspire, Encourage) – visiting rural schools to inspire and encourage young people through motivational talks and engagement.

With around 500 Santa sacks and 397 presents distributed to children, including those on Palm Island, the organisation brings joy and hope to families who may otherwise struggle to afford Christmas gifts.

This awesome charity was founded by Dubbo country music star Jason Owen!

Julie and the dedicated volunteers are making a real difference, bringing smiles to children's faces and reminding families that their community cares.

Thank you to Julie and everyone involved in Doin It For Rural Aussie Kids for the incredible work you do to support rural and regional communities.

Good Company, Great Coffee and Even Better Conversation!

I called into a well known local cafe in Wellington recently where I joined this group of distinguished gentlemen and we were able to solve most of the world's problems in about ten minutes!

The world needs a little more country common sense!

FIGHTING TO SAVE COUNTRY POST OFFICES

In parliament, I called out the federal government and Australia Post to demand immediate action. They do not get a free pass on this.

Alarm bells are ringing across the Central West and regional Australia!

Dozens of post offices have already closed, and our communities are deeply concerned Australia Post has a secret plan to drive even more out of business.

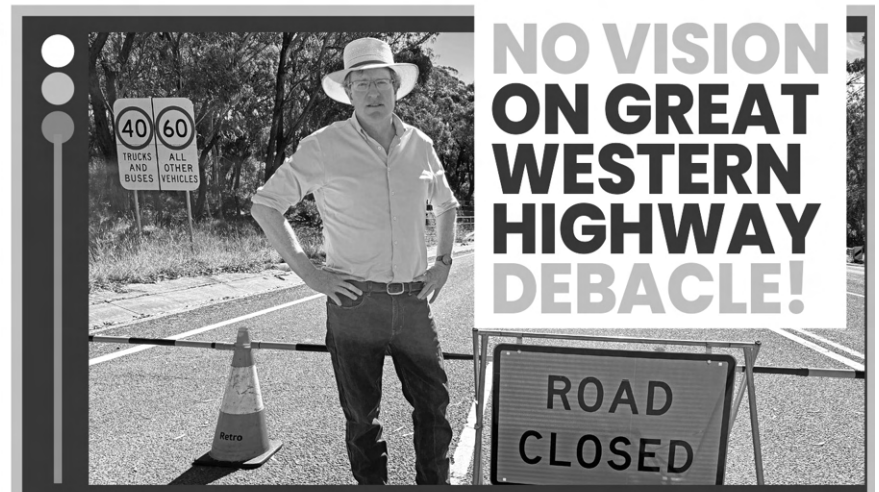

We've seen the banks leave town, and now we could lose our post offices too. Replacing them with just parcel lockers is not good enough!

Country post offices are vital to the survival of our communities, and we simply cannot do without them!

Any attempt to mess with our post offices will be met with white-hot fury across country Australia!

It's time for the government to bring Australia Post under control, support our local posties, and be quick about it.

WATCH MY SPEECH HERE

NO VISION ON GREAT WESTERN HIGHWAY DEBACLE!

This week I put the spotlight on the state of the Great Western Highway.

Here's the speech I gave to Parliament:

The Bathurst 1000 on the weekend was an outstanding success, but as we watched the long queues of cars struggling to get back over the sandstone curtain, we were once again reminded of the failure of successive governments to deliver a permanent high-speed connection to Sydney.

This is negligence on the part of government, pure and simple. Businesses are going broke, lives and livelihoods upended, and there is no plan or vision for this vitally important national road corridor.

What really infuriates our communities is seeing billions upon billions poured into gold-plated tunnels and motorways in Sydney, yet our region is treated as an afterthought!
You cannot fix a major artery with a bandaid!

That's what's currently happening with the patch-up job on the broken 1832 convict bridge.

Maybe we should get the convicts back, because it seems they were the last ones with any vision for that road!

It's a disgraceful way to treat a region that contributes so much to the wealth and prosperity of our state and nation.

The Great Western Highway must urgently be designated a national infrastructure priority.

It must be backed by serious state and federal funding.

Our businesses must receive the support they need and deserve. We've had enough of the cheap words and the empty promises.

THIS DEBACLE IS AN ONGOING DISGRACE!

Crops in the Wellington district are generally performing well, with above-average subsoil moisture and favourable planting conditions and a frost-free environment and according to the NSW DPIE and Regional Development, the 25/26 winter cropping season has been a record or near record for most commodities, driven by above average subsoil moisture, on time sowing, with below average seasonal rainfall.

The NSW Government's interactive drought map and regional drought summaries provide up to date location-specific information for Wellington.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

WOOL.. Northern EMI 1882c/kg clean, down 12c and the EMI closed 1803c/kg, clean down 17c. 33,265 bales offered nationally. Opening day the market fell although finer microns and good style wool with favourable additional measurement results attracted solid demand. The second day had further losses. In summary, good-style wool continued to hold its value, while lesser-style types and wool with less favourable additional measurements faced weaker demand. Next sale will have much less bales.

CATTLE.. CTLX 13th, 1259, -266. Weaner steers reached 550c and 480c/kg for heifers. Medium feeder steers firm to 10c softer, heavies lifted 9c/kg, 480c to 576 c/kg, medium heifers slipped 4c, heavy feeder heifers gained 7c, most sold 450c to 500c/kg. Heifers 470c to 490cv/kg to the trade. Grown steers and bullocks up 20c, 466c to 510c, heavy grown heifers lifted 14c to 18c, 465c to 489c/kg. Heavy cows gained 20c, 400c to 432c/kg, leaner 2-score cows to restockers lifted 10c, 377c to 396c/kg. Best bulls made 446c/kg.

SHEEP.. CTLX 14th. 1210 sheep, 3630 lambs. Lighter grades to restockers $161 to $220, heavier lines $230 to $255. Medium and heavy trade new season lambs held mostly firm, $275 to $290. Heavy trade old lambs $260 to $265, heavies firm $290 to $316. Heavy old lambs to $340.

MUTTON.. Numbers fell, quality varied with prices up and down. Heavy first-cross ewes $255 to $340.

Worldwide cost of living issues holding back wool demand

BY THE end of selling last week the thoughts of the market starting to show stronger demand had drifted away. In the largest national offering in more than five weeks of 33,265 bales, prices eased back throughout all the indicators, mainly on the second day. Sydney conducted a designated superfine sale, highlighting the premiums given for wools with better style and specifications at the finer end. There was little movement in our currency, with the US EMI falling 7 cents over the two days in all three selling centres. Skirtings were also softer by similar levels to the fleece, cardings cheapened in the North and South but improved in the West, and crossbreds continued to lose a little more ground. The demand pull through from the retail sector in Europe and China doesn't look as though it has started, but the cold weather predicted over the next couple of weeks may see T-shirts and shorts traded for trousers and jumpers. Woolmark has a retail campaign running during October in China, France, Germany and Italy called "Return to Real", with the aim to turn growing consumer interest in natural fibres into demand for wool. According to Bryan Fry AWI's CEO "Consumers are actively looking for more natural choices, but wool can not rely on its history or reputation alone. We need to show a new generation why Merino wool remains relevant to modern life." This will build on Woolmarks earlier Wear Wool, Not Fossil Fuel and Wear Wool, Not Waste campaigns, which presented wool as a natural alternative to synthetic fibres and fast fashion. With most wool being bought in the identified target area of the newest campaign, the message is being adapted through local media and prominent urban locations across Berlin, Milan, Paris and China. Research by AWI in China points to strong consumer preference to natural fibres and the rapid growth in Merino wool outdoor apparel, with year on year growth in this sector sitting at 139%. Chinese consumers surveyed were asked, are you willing to pay more for natural fibre clothing, would you pay a premium for apparel carrying the Woolmark, and do you pay attention to the Woolmark. More than 92% answered yes to those questions. Converting that sentiment to demand is the next hurdle. 26,883 bales are to be offered this week, with the Macwool/Carmichael/ Beecher team catalogued 880 bales for yesterday.

Merino lambs to restockers $56 to $152. Hoggets dearer to $308.

MUTTON.. 5325 head. Most grades $10 to $20 dearer. Merino ewes $165 to $330, crossbred ewes $230 to $376. Merino wethers $170 to $284, Dorper wethers to $290.

WOOL.. Last week's offering climbed in volume to the second largest weekly offering for season to date and only the fourth time this season that the offering has exceeded 30,000 bales. This paved the way for further losses in most micron categories with the odd pocket of resistance shown by the 17-micron indicators. In Northern region Tuesday's opening produced a hesitant start with the market retreating 5 cents. Wednesday was similar with some of the falls growing larger resulting in a further 12 cent decline. Selective buying patterns remain with better style and strength types reported as selling at levels similar to previous week, whilst wool carrying any imperfections is suffering from varying but increasingly larger discounts. A subtle but now noticeable change in micron price premiums has occurred over the past 12 months. As an example, if we compare the 19 and 20 micron indicators, the difference between them was 80 cents 12 months ago. In the first sale this season the difference had grown to 180 cents. Last week was 280 cents. As an explanation for this pricing change AWTA figures show a 10% decrease in all wool testing 19.5 micron and finer for the September quarter, with only a 0.7% decrease in the total volume of wool tested. This means the Australian woolclip is testing broader and the fight to secure better style finer types has intensified amongst the trade.

Racing at Narromine

THE four-year-old gelding Kevin, kept the family flag flying when winning the 800 metres Bill Wilkie Memorial Benchmark 58 Handicap on Saturday at Narromine.

Older half-brother and stablemate Gallant Star had finished unplaced in the $2,000,000 Kosciusko at Randwick before the Brett Robb, Dubbo trained Kevin ($2.40 favourite) ridden by apprentice Jasmine Urqahart-Warren led most of the way for a close win over Denman Force (Jacob Stiff, $2.60 fav) and Divine Sinner (Zoe Hunt, $18).

David Ringland from Dubbo and former Test cricketer Kerry O'Keefe are in the ownership of both Kevin and the top galloper Gallant Star.

Brett Robb had earlier won the 1300m Narromine USMC Maiden Plate with the Dr Bob Slack-Smith and Mrs Jean Slack-Smith owned and bred Tucklan (Clayton Gallagher, $3.10 fav) which led all the way to win by over three lengths from Mega Missile (Jacob Stiff, $11) and Knights Templar (Zoe Hunt, $4).

A very good crowd was at Narromine to see the Lyle Chandler, Scone trained Harriet win the feature event the QUBE Agri Dandy Cup, a Benchmark 50 Handicap over 1600m.

Patiently ridden by leading apprentice Jacob Stiff, Harriet ($3.00 fav) came from last to beat Sellinya (Clayton Gallagher, $7.50) and Pickaxe (Nick Palmer, $14).

Dubbo based apprentice Zoe Hunt produced an outstanding ride to win the 1100m Chris & Dale Harding Christmas Surprise Benchmark 50 Handicap on the David Smith, Mudgee trained Deodee.

From an outside barrier, Zoe Hunt allowed her mount to travel at the tail of the big field before she found an opening in the straight and Deodee ($8) burst through a wall of horses to beat Dodge The Dark (Wendy Peel, $6) and Ready For Lift Off (Jasmine Urqahart-Warren, $5.50) in a photo finish.

Prominent trainer Clint Lundholm from Dubbo, following a win at Coonamble last week with Media Spin, won the 1100m Western Plains Veterinary Service Maiden Plate with Best Defence.

Close to home, Best Defence (Jake Pracey-Holmes, $3.80) overhauled Moon Dart (Clayton Gallagher, $1.75 to $1.65 fav) and No Defence (Jess Del Frari, $17).

In the final event, the 1300m Three Rivers Machinery Benchmark 50 Handicap, the Jane Clement, Mendooran trained Extreme Merger (apprentice Gabrielle Johnston,$4.20 fav) with a late run down the outside won by a half-length from Justo's Rocket (Kody Nestor, $12) and Rocky Rich (Clayton Gallagher, $4.80).

A new short story from Eris Fleming

'Scarecrow Hill' - continues

Zofia, two years younger than her husband, had also survived the camps. She was a small lady with a gentle face; her long brown hair streaked with grey. She quickly had a name as someone who was kind and gentle and could put together a meal from very little. She could make an excellent rabbit stew or a pie; could make do with whatever was at hand.

Within months there were goats and a cow, half a dozen pigs and two kelpie dogs so that, life for Jakub and Zofia was, once more, worthwhile.

Chapter 4

The sick man.. Peanut helps out.. ambos take control.. tea leaf talk.. odds of 100 to 1.

ANOTHER YEAR had passed.

It was a Sunday morning, the sun yet to appear, when Peanut Simpson and his wife, Annie, were awakened by a loud banging at the back door.

Both scrambled out of bed to find an exhausted Zofia who, in a few jumbled words, described how the previous day, at about four in the afternoon, the two kelpies had begun barking in the shed at the rear of the house.

Jakub, thinking a snake, was surprised to find a man, a very sick one, flat out on the floor. He was a big, unkempt man with a mop of scraggly red hair, blue eyes and a very messy red beard. There were tattoos on both arms.

Not saying a word, the sick man had struggled to get upright and move on but, in seconds, collapsed back to the floor.

A fool could see he was in big trouble.

He began rambling on, making little or no sense.

Meanwhile Jakub had called out to Zofia. After some gentle prodding they learned the man, while camping in the nearby hills, had consumed mushrooms for lunch and in quick time had fallen ill with crippling cramps, and then severe nausea and vomiting.

Desperate to rest up somewhere comfortable he'd headed for the old house he'd, in the past, always found to be deserted, planning to rest up and then move on when well again.

Crippled with pain, he could say no more. Jakub and Zofia, having gotten the man into a bed, dosed him up with this and that potion.

During the night, however, the man's condition had further deteriorated. With talk of hospital the sick man had thrashed about, insisting he wanted nothing to do with doctors or nurses or any authorities - he simply wanted to rest up till he was well enough to be on his way once more.

Both Jakub and Zofia, assuming the mushrooms had ruined the man's thinking, ignored his pleas so that at first light, Zofia rushed down to Peanut's for help.

Peanut, on hearing Zofia's story picked up the phone and related the whole thing to the ambos. Not one for beating around the bush he made it clear they'd better get their fingers out because, from what he'd heard, the poor man was all but dead and it was most likely a snake bite, but he wasn't all that sure.

Most along the lane heard the phone ring and thinking, at that hour, something quite odd was afoot, picked up and listened in so that in ten minutes the whole story, from go to wo, was common knowledge.

A dozen or so people, keen to help out, and, at the same time, have a sticky, headed up the hill. An hour had passed and the sun was up when one of those waiting noticed dust in the lane.

In another five minutes, as the ambos pulled in, the sick man, insisting he felt well again and crawling from his bed, collapsed onto the floor. The ambos, ignoring his protests, immediately took control and after a difficult few minutes, wrapped him in blankets, strapped him onto a stretcher, loaded him in and closing the door, thanked everyone for their assistance and set off, going very carefully down the hill before increasing their pace on reaching the main road.

For a few minutes, as the dust settled along the valley, those up on the hill stood in silence and watched.

Those keen for breakfast were gone in minutes.

Others, the lazier, more inquisitive types, found excuses and dithered, hoping for a cup of tea and biscuits or maybe even a slice of cake and so sat back and pulled out their smokes while, in idle conversation, they shared their thoughts about the man and just what the hell he'd been up to out there in the hills.

One man, Mick Dufty, felt almost certain the poor man, because of his curious behaviour, must have suffered a stroke. His wife, let him talk for a minute, then giving him a scathing look, said, "You silly man - it's not a stroke - it's his heart, for sure and certain."

Dick O'Connor, from Three Mile Flat, had a different take on things. In his opinion, the man was a slacker, was bunging the whole thing on - had in mind nothing more than a free bed.

"My bet - there's very little, if anything, wrong with the man - at the very worst it's one of them migraine things. My auntie complained of something quite similar - and she lived to be 85. Lung cancer got her in the end. Silly old bag smoked like a chimney she did."

Several people agreed with Dick - most, though, didn't.

Jack Klondike, astride his palomino as he smoked, said, "To my way of thinkin' e's one of them anti-social maniac, depressive types - my bet e's havin' a breakdown - his nerves are shot. He didn't want to talk to people, wanted nuthin' to do with anyone. Why? - it's simple enough - it's a nervous breakdown - that's how come he hates everyone - especially them doctors and nurses and cops. He blames them lot for everything."

A group of ladies standing nearby were busy talking oven temperatures and scone recipes and whether dates made any difference when two of the ladies pushed a third one towards the group of men.

One of the ladies doing the pushing said to her friend, "You tell them Angela, tell them what you think and why. "Let them know just what you've been feeling."

Angela, whose full name was Angela McLeod, was a stooped little lady well into her seventies who had made a name for herself reading tea leaves.

She stepped away from her two friends, raised a shaky hand and said, "Excuse me, I've been listening to what you gentlemen have been saying and now it's my turn to explain matters. Right now, at this very minute, I'm experiencing this very odd feeling - and it's not a nice one neither, I can tell you that much. And it's all because of that man you are all so worried about. You see I'm pretty sure, almost certain, something nasty, really creepy's going on here.

"For the last two days now my readings with the leaves have been awful - simply frightful. They're saying something evil is afoot. And everything points to that red-headed man. And whether you like it or not, the leaves don't lie. The leaves are saying be careful - something quite wicked is in our faces. It's all about death. And it all points to the man with the beard."

Mr Parker, a big, somewhat overweight gent of 65 years with a huge grey moustache, gave a half-hearted laugh and said, "Look Angela this is a serious matter - the poor man is quite unwell. This it's not the right time to bring up that stupid, hairbrained tea-leaf stuff. Forgive me for speaking bluntly - but your talk is complete rubbish. You're not really asking us to take it seriously, are you?"

"I'm telling you, Mr Parker, it's not what I'm saying - it's what the leaves are saying - it's all about that man - and none of it is good - it's evil stuff. And whether you like it or not, my leaves don't lie!"

"Look lady, no sane individual can take that drivel seriously - you should focus that little mind of yours on something useful like cooking or darning socks or saying Hail Marys."

"Forgive me, my good sir, but me thinks, in this instance, you're talking through your big hat. You must understand you're not arguing with me - it's the leaves you're contending with."

"Look Angela, that tea-leaf stuff of yours is nothing more than third-rate witchcraft for mental defectives. The poor chap's crook because he ate some poisonous bloody mushrooms - that's all there is to it. The rest is rubbish.

But to settle our differences why don't we have a small wager on the outcome - say twenty measly little dollars? - and I'll offer you very good odds - how about say 100 to1?"

The big man was laughing now. Half a dozen others joined in. It was a big joke.

Angela said," I think perhaps not. You see, I don't gamble, have never in my life had a bet. Gambling, you see is, in my book, an evil thing."

One of Angela's friends, who'd listened to everything, stepped forward and said, "Do it Angela - take the silly man up on his bet - show him your tealeaves aren't a lot of poppycock. Maybe then, they'll take you seriously."

Angela turned and said, "Well, when I think about it, only last week the leaves were promising me lots of good luck - so I accept your wager Mr Parker. And the odds are a hundred to one?"

Mr Cecil Parker, delighted with the silly woman's response, laughed out loud and said, "Correct - but wait!

"Why not make it a worthwhile thing? Why not forty dollars? And at a hundred to one. Agreed?"

Angela, after more prodding from her friends, smiled and said, "Agreed Mr Parker - let's make it forty dollars."

"And we have lots of witnesses so there'll be no backing out of it." The big man, waving both arms, was laughing again.

Mr Parker turned and, in an aside to his friends, said, "That, gentlemen is the easiest forty dollars I'll ever make. I can't help feeling guilty taking money off the poor old thing, but then, someone must put a stop to all her prattle about tea leaves and mood swings and curious omens."

Mr Parker, together with his friends, laughed once more.

At the hospital, Doctor Michael Wilson, having listened to the two ambulance men, examined the man who insisted his name was Bill Roberts.

Everything was in keeping with mushroom poisoning. Dr. Wilson said to the nurses, "The poor bloke's in big trouble - we must hurry."

In just minutes everyone, pulling out all stops, got down to business, working carefully but quickly so that, in just hours, their efforts paid off.

The patient's response was quite remarkable - so much so that, in just two days, he was strong enough to crawl out of bed and, still in his pyjamas, bash two nurses senseless before stealing a Holden from the visitors' carpark and speeding off.

In a curious twist, on the outskirts of town, swerving to miss a black cat, he crashed headlong into an oncoming police car. It was then the officer driving recognised the man as Charlie Fielding. After a further week in hospital under a heavy police guard, Fielding was charged with three counts of murder.

***

Postscript:

A very humble Mr Parker, not all that graciously, handed Angela a cheque for four thousand dollars.

Jakub and Zofia received the reward of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Jakub became a successful bee farmer.

Fielding was serving a life sentence in Long Bay when, disputing certain debts re a poker game, he was bashed to death. He was 45 years of age.

Angela lived another seven years. Somehow, though, bit by bit, her talent with tea leaves deserted her so that, at the end, she refused to even drink tea. She died a bitter, disillusioned woman.

Racing odds at Narromine last Saturday

What's the chances of this ever happening again?

A POSER for Lotto players and mathematicians as to the odds about the sequence of numbers following the running of the 800 metres Bill Wilkie Memorial Benchmark 58 Handicap on Saturday at Narromine.

Cupcake drive this Halloween

Audrey Burfitt's fourth cupcake store to raise funds for local land care.

CUP CAKES are her speciality and there's plenty of customers who keep returning when she conducts a cup-cake sale.

So, Audrey Burfitt will host her fourth Cupcake Store on October 31, (Halloween), raising funds for Yindyamarra Land Care & Maintenance, a community-driven initiative born out of Jeff Amatto's, More Cultural Rehabs Less Jails' Yindyamarra Healing Men's Group.

Yindyamarra Landcare was established to bridge the gap between cultural healing, employment, and land stewardship has a focus on landcare services while providing training, employment, and mentoring opportunities for Aboriginal people.

LEFT: Audrey Burfitt served plenty of customers durng her Easter Cup Cake sale. Her cakes were so popular she ran out quicker then expected. So, she and helpers have been busy baking already.

The community event will run from 9am to noon at Jespresso, 56 Lee Street, with Halloween cupcakes available.

All funds raised will go towards supporting the cause.

Local businesses and community members have generously donated baking ingredients to help make the fundraiser possible.

Special thanks go to Garian Foods for its support.

Everyone is welcome to come along, enjoy a treat and contribute to a good cause.

Audrey's fundraising gained special mention in the NSW Parliament recently when the state member for Dubbo (and Wellington) Dugald Saunders enlightened the house of the wonderful volunteer fundraising work she has been doing within the Wellington community.

His speach was recorded in Hansard and Mr Saunders visited and presented a printed reproduction to Audrey.

He said her fundraising style was quite unique for a young person.

Time to tackle old poly pipe on farms

MID MACQUARIE Landcare is encouraging local farmers to clean up old and damaged poly pipe and dispose of it responsibly through their local council waste facilities.

"Poly pipe is incredibly useful on farm and, with a bit of maintenance and the occasional repair, you can get a lot of life out of it," Local Landcare Coordinator Deborah Cooke said.

"Repair and reusing it where practical should always be the first option, but once it is beyond practical repair, it's time to think about how to best dispose of it."

Old poly pipe can become tangled or spread around sheds, paddocks and fence lines, creating trip hazards for people, livestock and wildlife and risks damage to vehicles and machinery.

"Burning or burying unwanted poly pipe is not an appropriate disposal option," NetWaste Environmental Learning Advisor Bill Tink said.

"Burning plastics releases harmful pollutants into the air, while buried plastic remains in the soil and poly pipe that's left exposed to sunlight and weather for long periods will deteriorate and contribute to plastic pollution".

While dedicated poly pipe recycling is not currently available in the Central West, it is recycled in some parts of Australia.

So, by taking old poly pipe to your local waste facility and keeping it sorted from other waste, this will help make future recycling and management options possible.

Poly pipe should also be secured for transport so it cannot spring free or come loose on the road and loads should always be tied down and covered.

"Poly pipe can also cause problems for machinery and landfill operations when it arrives at the waste facility in a big, tangled mess," Mr Tink said.

"It's best to coil and tie it neatly and securely, or cut it into manageable lengths and bundle it together before you transport it".

"It's also important to note that some waste materials may have a cost to process and rural transfer stations can't always accept every type or quantity of waste.

"For instance, poly pipe that has been used for chemicals may require different handling, transport and disposal.

Farmers should always check their local council website or call ahead before taking poly pipe or other agricultural waste to a waste facility."

Discarded pipe can also trap small mammals, reptiles and birds seeking shelter or water, and these impacts are often overlooked, according to Regional Landcare Coordinator Danielle Littlewood.

"Cleaning it up frees up space, removes hazards and means we're not leaving piles of deteriorating plastic for the next generation to deal with," she said.

"So, before that pile of old poly pipe turns into an even bigger bird's nest, spend a bit of time getting it sorted.

Repair or reuse what you can, then coil, bundle and safely dispose of what has reached the end of its useful life.

"It's another simple way to make the farm cleaner and safer for everyone."

The poly pipe campaign is part of the year-long AgWaste project being delivered by Central West Landcare groups in partnership with NetWaste.

The project encourages farmers and smaller landowners to consider the long-term impacts of inappropriate waste disposal practices, including stockpiling, burning or burying waste on farm.

Racing at Forbes - By Col Hodges

EXCITING FINISHES continued throughout the Forbes meeting on Saturday culminating in a dead heat for first between Bitta Bon Magic and Calmundi in the final event.

Yael's Delight led for home in the 1200 metres Club Forbes Benchmark 50 Handicap before the Bill Hayes locally trained Bitta Bon Magic (Jess Del Frari, $5.50) and Calmundi (Kody Nestor, $13) from the Kylie Kennedy stable at Narromine, crossed the finish line together and were unable to be separated by the judge while a half-length away third was Ms Reeves (Jacob Stiff, $6).

Over recent years Bill Hayes has taken a team to race over summer at King Island and after the latest trip brought home one of the Island horses, Bitta Bon Magic.

Racing kicked off at Forbes with the 1200m Bedgerabong Picnic Races Maiden Plate and coming from back in the field the Brett Robb, Dubbo trained South Eight (Clayton Gallagher, $4.40) edged out Argyle Springs (Jake Pracey-Holmes, $2.90 fav) by a long head with The Friskee Flash (Glenn Cahill, $3.50) a neck back third.

Sairyn Fawke, after riding in South Australia and other States, is now based at Canberra and was at Forbes to ride Jade Division for Gulgong (and Wellington) trainer Brett Thompson in the 1400m Terry Bros Carpet Court Benchmark 50 Handicap.

Working home from last and under strong riding, Jade Division ($12) won by a head from Commando Jack (Clayton Gallagher, $1.75 fav) while over a length away third was Champ De Mars (Jacob Stiff, $7.50).

Owned by former jockey Michael Hackett in partnership with Parkes trainer Sharon Jeffries, Way To Divine ran out the 1600m strongly to win the Forbes Shire Council Benchmark 50 Handicap.

When the leader dropped out quickly 700m from home, Way To Divine (Jacob Stiff, $2 to $1.85 fav) took control and won by almost two lengths from Cobar stayer Bellman (Michael Heagney, $8.50) and Himeros (Jake Pracey-Holmes, $4.60). Owned and bred by Simone and Steve Beattie from Condobolin and trained at Cowra by Michael Lynch, Devil's Reach (Ken Dunbar, $13) finished strongly from well back to beat Don'tdoubtdagoose (Jess Del Frari, $7) and Meldirer (Jake Pracey-Holmes, $8) in the BWR Accountants Maiden Handicap.

A recent addition to the Melissa Harrison stable at Forbes after two starts in Victoria, the 3YO filly Dontdoubtdagoose held on well for second after taking the lead mid race.

The now six-year-old Quasimoto has presented Dubbo trainer Clint Lundholm with plenty of problems since displaying high promise as a juvenile but was back in winning form in the 1100m Peter Maher Shearing Services Class 1 Handicap. Well ridden in the lead by successful apprentice Zoe Hunt, Quasimoto ($3.20 equal fav) raced to a convincing two-lengths win over Elderberry Wine (Glenn Cahill, $4) and the strong finishing Symphonite (Jess Del Frari, $3.20 equal fav).

Three new centre records

PIPER DRURY has rewritten the Wellington Little Athletics record book, three times in two competition nights.

Firstly in the Under 16 Girls Discus: 28.56m (old record 20.92m) on Monday, September 21.

The second, Under 16 Girls Shot Put: 7.86m (old record 7.50m, set in 2006) on Monday, October 12.

And the third in Under 16 Girls Hurdles: 17.43s (old record 18.63s, set in 2014) also on Monday, October 12.

Two of those records had stood for more than a decade.

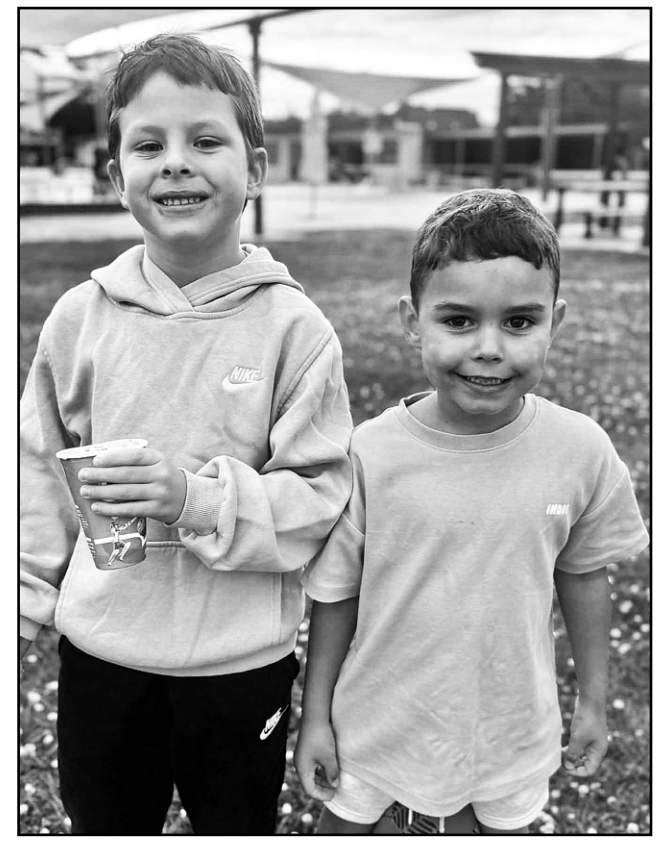

Well done to Piper and every athlete chasing PBs at Rygate Park this season.

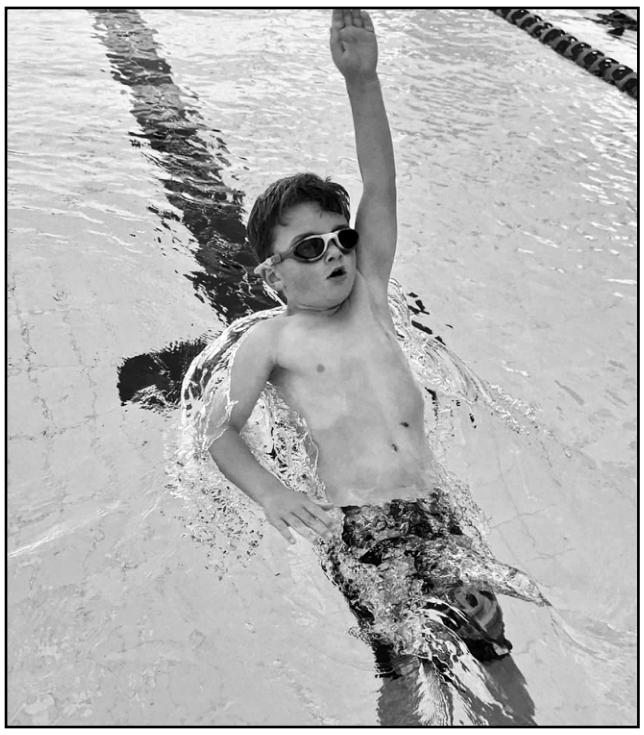

Wellington Little Athletics conduct their weekly event at Rygate Park each Monday from 5:30pm.

Golfing News Hollow/Cusack take 'Lion's' trophy

IT'S BEEN a busy couple of weeks with golfers venturing to Narrandera and other courses with plenty of excuses used for some bad results.

The Drew Stone Earthmoving Par 3 Championships were played last Sunday over 27 holes with a good field of golfers taking up the challenge, plus the great barbecue chefs David East and side kick Elton Keeffe.

Scratch winner was Kurt Cusack with a 1 under par 80, Mitchell Cusack finished a further three shots back to claim the runner-up prize.

B grade winner was Rod McMahon with a 90 off the stick while James Fleming also finished a further three shots back for the runner-up prize.

C grade's Neil Hollow took out the winner's prize with a 92 off the stick with Ryan McCracken finishing a long way back as runner-up prize.

Ladies scratch winner was Denise Haesler who finished with a 94 off the stick with Marie Cornish runner-up three shots back.

Handicap winners were A grade Nathan Stewart 80nett, B grade James Fleming 78nett, C grade Ryan McCracken 76nett, Ladies Patsi O'Brien 66nett.

The Final of the Lion of Waterloo Trophy has seen a big upset with George Hollow and Gary Cusack claiming the winner's prize over the very unlucky Teena Campbell and Marie Cornish with the combatants shaking hands on the 16th hole.

Last Saturday's Individual Stableford A grade winner was Lewis Stanley who is definitely enjoying his time on the course, finishing with 38pts.

Runner up was Denise Haesler 36pts on a countback.

Snapped before the final - George Hollow, Teena Campbell, Marie Cornish and Gary Cusack.

B grade winner was Ben McIntosh with 39pts on a countback.

Runner up was Teena Campbell who finished with 39pts.
