Community leadership recognised
- Australia Day 2026

Australia Day Ambassadors Katie, Maggie and Michael Quach with Mayor Josh Black presented the Wellington Citizen of the Year award to Mark Griggs on Sunday evening during the Wellington Australia Day awards ceremony in Cameron Park.

“OUR NATIONAL day is the time for us to come together to reflect, respect and celebrate being part of our nation’s story” – was the beginning of Michael Quach’s address speaking on behalf of the Quach family siblings as Wellington’s Australia Day Ambassadors.

The trio of Michael, Katie and Maggie Quach are the founders of Beyond Best Before, a social-impact enterprise tackling food waste and promoting sustainable living which earned them in 2025 international recognition with a place on the Forbes 30 Under 30 Asia list for Social Impact, highlighting their leadership in sustainability and innovation.

Founded in 2021, Beyond Best Before intercepts surplus stock and near-date grocery items destined for landfill, reselling them at affordable prices through a national e-commerce platform, a flagship store in Sydney, and an emerging wholesale marketplace. Their model reduces waste, saves consumers money, and educates Australians about food sustainability.

Michael Quach told a story of valuing stories that have and continue to shape Australia today.

“From the first nations whose ancestors lived on these lands for tens of thousands of years, to the descendants of settlers, children of migrants and those recently arrived, today we come together to celebrate and share stories about what makes us unique and consider the Australia we aspire to be,” he said.

Michael told of his mother arriving in Australia in 1980 as a Vietnamese refugee from a rural town south of today’s Ho Chi Minh city.

He and his siblings lived in a small street in West Melbourne and tells of their relationship to a Greek family, and shared their stories.

His sister Katie said later that when growing up, “our street was like a family, Greek, Albanian, German, Vietnamese. We shared food, traditions and kindness without thinking twice. That’s the Australian spirit,” she said.

Michael Quach’s Australia Day address is published on page 13.

“What connects us in Australia is our shared desire for unity, safety and prosperity that Australia represents.

“While our experiences may be different, we are shaped by the same quote – that in this country where everyone belongs, everyone’s views, beliefs and contributions are valued.

“Today, I encourage everyone to share a piece of your story, and listen to the stories of others, whether it’s over a slice of cake, a coffee or a VB, because one thing remains true, and that is, we are all an important part in this nation’s ongoing story.”

Australia Day

HOPE everyone had a great Australia Day long weekend.

Congratulations to all those members of our community who gained awards at the Wellington and Stuart Town/Mumbil/Euchareena ceremonies.

The celebration at Maranatha House Aged Care was also well attended with residents hearing from the Australia Day Ambassadors Maggie, Michael and Kate Quach, singing the National Anthem and eating the Australia Day cake.

Dulcie Johnson made a wonderful speech when thanking the Ambassadors.

A special mention must go to Stuart Town’s very own Marcus Hanney for his organisation of Monday’s Stuart Town/Mumbil/Euchareena celebration.

Over 100 people attended the event in Moxon Park where very tasty bacon and egg rolls were cooked up by on the barbecue by Ossie More, Jan Pulbrook, Ted McGomerery, Anthony and Joanna.

The Wellington Town Band provided the music, and a great time was had by all.

Another special mention to publisher of this newspaper, Mark Griggs, for his award of Wellington Citizen of the Year.

University of Sydney – School of Rural Health

This week saw the intake of 26 First year students into the University of Sydney’s School of Rural Health in Dubbo.

There were five students from our local LGA who will train to be doctors over the next four years.

One student was from the Northern Territory, but roughly a third were from the wider western NSW region.

This bodes well for the future of doctors, GPs and specialists in our region, as all the stats show that if we can train local people, they are more likely to practice medicine locally once they complete their training.

This course is a post grad course with many students having previously worked in the health areas of nursing, pharmacy, radiography and the like.

However, some students are having a career change from accountancy to medicine.

This opportunity simply wouldn’t be available without the uni being in our own LGA.

Extreme heat predictions

Council is closely monitoring the changing conditions over the coming weeks and remains committed to prioritising community safety and wellbeing.

Here’s what you need to know during the very hot weather:

Changes to Services

- Bin collection services will be starting earlier in the morning.
 - Please put your bins out the night before your collection date next week.
 - Tree clean-up works are continuing across the region however there may be delays due to adjusted operational activities in response to forecast temperatures.

Stay cool options

To support the community during the extreme heat, there are several cool and safe spaces available:

- Macquarie Regional Library Wellington and Dubbo branches are open and provide a place of relief from the heat.
- Wellington Caves. Did you know the caves stay at a constant temperature of around 18 degrees all year round?
- Local residents receive 50 per cent off the ticket prices to Wellington Caves, you just need to provide your proof of residency.
- Splash Pad, Elston Park Dubbo – Re-member to Slip, Slop, Slap, Seek, Slide before you head to the park.
- Dubbo Region Aquatic Leisure Centres in Dubbo, Wellington, Geurie will be open daily.
- Western Plains Cultural Centre is a great place to escape the heat with free entry to galleries and museums, all in the airconditioned comfort. Creo Café will also be open. Stay up to date with latest emergency information and health advice by visiting the NSW Health and Western NSW Local Health District, and Bureau of Meteorology sites.

Opinion

THE THREE-YEAR experiment hasn’t worked.

For all intents and purposes, the changing of Wellington’s Australia Day event in Cameron Park to the evening before January 26 to encompass all from within the town and surrounding districts hasn’t really worked.

Yes, the crowds attended, but not as many as there were when the ceremony was held on the morning of Australia Day.

The afternoon heat is definitely not an enticement to venture outside, especially moving away from the air-conditioner.

Discussion for the change initiated by Dubbo Regional Council who put up good and reasonable arguments.

But instead of uniting those who acknowledge Australia Day on the day, the evening before decision actually split them.

The amalgamation of Dubbo and Wellington has not helped.

Dubbo councillors and bureaucrats have not helped.

Wellington had a very active and busy Australia Day committee made up of two councillors and several long-term volunteers plus each year the Citizen and Senior Citizen of the Year were invited to join.

Wellington Show Young Person in an effort to encourage locals – and of course our special guest/s our Australia Day Ambassadors.

Awardees were not forewarned of their award, but enticed to attend the ceremony unawares of being one of the special awardees.

The surprise was immaculate.

There was little interference by Council.

The ceremony last Sunday night was rushed and over before you knew it.

Very basic, and, one questioned why would you venture out in the heat expecting to be entertained, but witnessing a program quickly pushed through in a seemingly ‘get it over and done with’ attitude.

However, the MC, Adam Ryan, was exceptional, but obviously under instructions to follow a very tight ceremony agenda.

An excuse of getting it over quick because of the heat just does not pass the pub test.

Interestingly, Dubbo Council’s change to the morning of January 25 also did not appeal to Dubbo locals.

The Wellington crowd was three-times as large as Dubbo’s, as one person who had attended both commented.

Tax shock for farm trailblazers

FARMERS WITH cellar doors and fruit stands should beware of huge new bills being slapped on them by the state government, according to NSW Farmers.

Reports have spiked of family farmers being forced to pay up to $300,000 in land taxes to the NSW Government for diversifying their businesses with small farmgate sales and agritourism experiences.

Typically, farmland has been exempted from these taxes as it has been used to produce food and fibre for the nation – but NSW Farmers’ business economics and trade committee’s John Lowe said it was clear farmers were now being penalised for selling what they grew.

“Between drought, flood and every other challenge we face on farm, it’s become harder and harder to make a living on the land – and that means farmers have had to adapt and diversify to simply survive,” Mr Lowe said.

“Governments have encouraged this activity as a means to spread risk and deal with drought, natural disaster and other challenges – and we’ve loved seeing people from all over enjoy our cellar doors or cherry-picking adventures on farm.

“But now, we’ve been punished for innovating, diversifying, and opening our doors to our friends in the cities – and it could spell the end for many of our family farms.”

On Tuesday NSW Farmers launched a ‘statement of expectations’ to outline the series of practical changes to primary production land taxes needed to ensure a future for farming.

With farm input costs expected to rise by a further five per cent in 2026, Mr Lowe said sensible changes to land tax laws were needed to ensure farmers were not crippled with six-figure bills for small-scale value-adding within their operations.

“The costs to run a farm are already outstripping inflation, and families cannot realistically afford to pay this huge extra tax on top of this,” Mr Lowe said.

“Our government is saying they’re happy for us to grow our own apples, but don’t even think about trying to sell the juice.

“It makes no sense, and meanwhile, our major supermarkets are making a killing off our produce – and both farmers and families are paying the price.”

... See NSW Farmers statement of expectations on Page 12.

Australia Day 2026 - Wellington recognises outstanding contributions and achievements for our to community

Councillor Richard Ivey presents the Senior Citizen of the Year award with Australia Day Ambassador Katie Quach to Teresa Johnson.

Australia Day Ambassadors Maggie and Katie Quach present the Young Sportsperson of the Year award to Evie Whiteley.

Achievements announced during Australia Day ceremony

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR – Mark Griggs

Mark has been a part of the Wellington community for 37 years and has been involved in many committees, including a founding member and chairman of Wellington Business Enterprise Centre and a founding member of Wellington Police and Citizens Youth Club (PCYC).

In 1994, on behalf of PCYC, Mark organised the Wellington Christmas Boot Bed Race in conjunction with the annual Apex Club’s Venetian Carnival.

He was a president of the Wellington Business Association after reforming from the Wellington Business Chamber.

Mark is one of the founding members and present Chairperson of Binjang Community Radio Inc. and has been very hands-on in bringing the Breakfast Radio morning shift to listeners and presenting outside broadcasts supporting Wellington Rotary Club’s monthly markets, the Vintage Fair, Wellington Show and Lions Geurie Markets to name a few.

He is also an active member and co-vice-president of Wellington Race Club and Board member of Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club.

He also contributed to the community by being an elected councillor for 21 years, serving as deputy mayor and one full term as Mayor.

Citizen of the Year - Mark Griggs

SENIOR CITIZEN OF THE YEAR – Teresa Johnson

Teresa has been actively involved in many aspects of the Wellington community.

She played a vital role in junior sport throughout her children’s sporting years, taking on executive and management roles and supporting other young athletes and their families.

She has supported Senior Citizens for the past nine years and organised and led the weekly Senior Citizens exercise class, ensuring continuity, connection and wellbeing for older community members.

Her involvement in the Wellington Show spans many years as well as her involvement in the Wellington Amateur Theatrical Society (WATS) which spans over 20 years.

She has worked tirelessly for all productions, from front of house to props to stage management.

Everything Teresa Johnson does is without fanfare. She embodies the essence of a quiet achiever, someone who contributes tirelessly, without seeking recognition and whose efforts have strengthened the social, cultural and recreational fabric of Wellington.

YOUNG SPORTSPERSON OF THE YEAR – Evie Whiteley

Evie gives her best for all sports that she plays.

She has been nominated for captain of many of her teams.

She plays hard but fair and is a great teammate to have.

Her highlight for the year was being able to represent NSW in touch football against all other states and territories in Ballarat, Victoria, last October.

She has achieved various levels and accolades in her chosen sports of Netball and Touch football, including best and fairest and coaches awards.

COMMUNITY EVENT OF THE YEAR – Maranatha Gunyah Fete

Wellington Rotary Club, Maranatha House Aged Care Facility and Maranatha Gunyah Childcare combined to put on a market day and fete on October 25, 2025. This day highlighted the connection Maranatha and Rotary have with the Wellington Community and it was a great day seeing aged care residents being able to participate in the markets and the children providing and sample bags attracting several hundreds of people on the day.

This event was a combined effort of different organisations and gave real community benefit to all.

Australia Day awards ceremony still popular

Australia Day Ambassador Katie Quach presents the Community Event of the Year to Jennifer Wykes of Rotary and Dixie Robinson of Maranatha Gunyah representing the Maranatha Gunyah Fete, with State MLC Stephen Lawrence.

Federal member for Calare Andrew Gee and state member for Dubbo Dugald Saunders present a Community Achievement award to Father MacKander.

Emmalee Holmes is present her Community Achievement award from Councillor Jen Cowley.

Former Wellington Councillor Roger Everett with 2023 Senior Citizen Shirley Drysdale presents Ruth Haynes her Community Achievement award.

COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARDS

Ruth Haynes
Ruth arrived in Wellington 16 years ago and started contributing to the community with her volunteering. She is involved in Wellington Arts and Crafts club, however her major contribution has been with Maranatha House. Here she makes a difference to the lives of the residents giving support with individual shopping for residents, craft activities, assists taking residents to the Wellington Show, gardening and assisting with organising social and fundraising events.

James Pratt
Jim has provided support to the community over many years. More recently, he has formed a men's coffee club for retired businessmen so that they can meet once a week and keep connected.

Emmalee Holmes
Emmalee has shown exceptional dedication to the Wellington and Dubbo communities. She supports vital community organisations such as Riding for the Disabled, Pink Angels Inc, and Camp Quality. Emmalee also contributed to the Wellington Community Progress and Action Group, several Council initiatives including public spaces, and she has played an important role in environmental and emergency efforts through the annual Clean Up Australia Day event, NSW State Emergency Services, Mt Arthur Trust activities and Wellington platypus surveys with Western Paddlers. Most recently, she has been the founder and Event Director for the newly started Wellington parkrun event. She spent 10 years working toward getting this event up and running for Wellington and surrounds.

Fr Carl MacKander
Father Carl has spent the past 10 years devoted to the Wellington and surrounding communities as parish priest of St Peters Catholic Church. He has been available to be called upon, above and beyond his role, has spent many hours of his own time visiting people at home, in the hospital and at Maranatha house. Over this time, he has gained much love and respect by the community.

Stuart Town enthusiasts revive their local preservation and historical society

ESTABLISHED IN 1973, the Stuart Town Preservation and History Society has had a revival after some 50 years in hiatus.

Several local history enthusiasts led by Mel Howard have collected a vast range of historical memorabilia and officially relaunched the society located in their new premises, the former communication annex adjoining the local School of Arts Hall last Saturday.

As well, in celebration, the old Railway Hotel and Boehme's Hall was open to the public.

Shirely Hanney, representing CWA played host at Boehme's Hall and shows deputy mayor Phil Toynton the Boehme family tree on display.

There's plenty of historical reading at the new Preservation and History Society headquarters in Stuart Town. Deputy mayor Phillip Toynton sits with Mel Howard and Marcus Hanney.

New electricity player developing compressed air energy

THE WELLINGTON region is set to play a key role in New South Wales' transition to a cleaner, more reliable energy future, with early scoping underway for the Wellington Energy Storage Centre.

The project, being proposed and developed by Hydrostor, would be the first facility using Advanced Compressed Air Energy Storage (A²CAES) in the area, and the second in NSW.

Proposed for a site some 10 kilometres north-east of Wellington, the 500 MW A-CAES facility would be capable of storing up to 8000 MWh of electricity, or as much as 16 hours of energy on a full charge.

The project would complement the region's increasing renewable generation by capturing excess solar and wind energy when its plentiful, and releasing it when demand is high or generation is low, helping to ensure reliability.

Although not part of the Central West Orana Renewable Energy Zone (REZ), the project is positioned to benefit from the REZ's growing renewable output while connecting into existing transmission infrastructure.

Hydrostor, founded in 2010, is a global leader in compressed air energy storage and is advancing several large A²CAES projects across Australia, the United States, and Canada.

Its Silver City Energy Storage Centre Project in Broken Hill will deliver more than eight hours of reliable, emissions-free storage, and has already had its development application approved, and has also signed key network agreements with Transgrid and AEMO.

A²CAES technology is an innovation on traditional compressed air energy storage technology, which has been safely used for decades but was not economical.

The technology uses only air, rock, and water, alongside proven industrial components like compressors and turbines – meaning the safety and performance of the system is well-proven and well-understood.

The Wellington project is currently in the Scoping Phase, which will include preliminary technical studies and community consultation.

As a part of this phase, Hydrostor is actively seeking input from local residents, First Nations communities, and regional stakeholders.

Hydrostor will be hosting community drop-in sessions in Wellington and Dubbo in February (next month), providing opportunities to meet the project team, ask questions and share feedback.

Wellington Sessions: Thursday, February 12, 2026, 11:30am to 1:30 pm and 6pm to 8pm at Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club, 75 Arthur Street, Wellington.

Dubbo Session: Saturday, February 14, 2026, 11am to 1pm at Dubbo Cultural Center, 76 Wingewarra Street, Dubbo.

Enthusiasts at the launch last Saturday.

HYDROSTOR

Hydrostor Invites You to a Community Information Session

Hydrostor is proposing an advanced compressed air energy storage (A-CAES) project in Wellington, NSW. The Project will be able to power millions of homes for 16 hours, providing key reliability to the grid as it continues to incorporate renewables to meet Australia's decarbonization goals. Hydrostor is hosting its first community drop-in sessions so community members can learn about the proposed Project and provide feedback.

Australia Day Celebrations

I was honoured to celebrate Australia Day in both Dubbo and Wellington this year.

Even through the blistering heat, Wellington’s Sunday evening celebrations were fantastic, with plenty of community members out to celebrate.

A huge congratulations to the Leader’s Mark Griggs on being named Wellington’s 2026 Citizen of the Year, and to Teresa Johnson – Senior Citizen of the Year and Evie Whiteley – Young Sportsperson of the Year.

The Maranatha Gunyah Fete was recognised as the Community Event of the Year, while Ruth Haynes, James Pratt, Emalee Holmes and Fr Carl Mackander all received Community Service Awards.

Congratulations to all in the electorate who were honoured with awards this year!

Local Senior of the Year Awards

People in the Dubbo electorate are encouraged to nominate an outstanding older person in their community for the 2026 Local Senior of the Year Awards.

If you know a senior who helps make our community a better place through volunteering, innovation or supporting friends and family, now is the time to nominate them for recognition.

Winners of the local awards will be announced during the annual NSW Seniors Festival, which this year runs from March 2 to 15.

To nominate a senior, visit my office to collect a printed form, send an email to request a digital form or download it from my website.

Nominations close at 5pm, Friday, February 20.

Summer Safety: Water

Summertime is the best time to get out on the water. Stay safe at the dam and on the river this season by following these easy steps:

* Pay attention to signs and warnings

* Know your swimming ability and never swim alone

* Keep an eye on friends, family and children

* Ensure alcohol consumption is kept to below the legal limit

* Remember underwater logs and rocks are always present

* Carry a first aid kit with you

* If you’re heading out on the boat, make sure your safety equipment is up to date

And most importantly, HAVE FUN without putting others at risk

Tertiary Health Study subsidy

The NSW Government is encouraging NSW students commencing study and eligible graduates to apply for up to $12,000 in financial support through the Tertiary Health Study Subsidies Program.

This program is designed to create a future pipeline of health workers by supporting students with fees, technology, travel, or other costs related to their degree.

To be eligible, recipients must commit to being part of the NSW Health workforce for at least five years in a profession resulting from their study.

For more information, visit:

STUAR TOWN RE-LAUNCHES THEIR PRESERVATION AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY

On Saturday I was delighted to attend the official re-launch of the Stuart Town Preservation and History Society.

Formed in 1973, the group aims to record and preserve Stuart Town's unique history for future generations. While I was in Stuart Town, I also stopped by Boehme's Hall, which is a historic timber home built in 1860 that is still going strong today! Shirley Hanney gave us a wonderful tour and told us about the community's work in preserving it. A heartfelt thank you and congratulations to Mel Howard, Marcus Hanney and the whole team from the Preservation and History Society for their wonderful hospitality and work in showcasing and saving local history and also digitising it to make it available to everyone! Stuart Town (home of the Man from Ironbark) is on the Burrendong Way, 45 minutes from Orange. Visit soon!

This week continues to be very hot and dry with top temperatures of 38 degrees to 43 degrees c and lows of 20 to 24 and no rain. In fact, NSW is just a tad under 50% in drought right now.

Prime Lamb

Market research shows that consumers want lean and tender meat which is safe to eat and from a trusted source. Above all, they are looking for a consistent product that gives them the same satisfying experience every time they buy, cook and eat it. Research shows that while consumers perceive lamb as being tasty, they also believe it can be expensive and fatty. The industry must work hard to provide consumers with a product that meets their needs. The sheep farmer's direct customer is the lamb buyer, based either at a livestock marketer at a abattoir (if selling dead weight).

Each buyer will have different specifications for the lambs they want in terms of weight, conformation and fat class. The prices offered by different abattoirs may vary for the same animals and will depend on the requirements of their customers further down the supply chain.

Abattoirs are looking for animals that

1. Are quick and easy to process,
2. Arrive at the right time, on the right day,
3. Are clean,
4. With the correct weight specification,
5. Meet the correct carcase and fat specification.

Sorting lambs does pay - AHDB trials at markets showed sorting lambs into groups of equal merit can attract a significant premium per lamb. Always place them into even lots to sell.

Did you remember to put your lamb on the barbecue for Australia Day?

NSW Farmers' Statement of Expectations

- The definition of primary production land in land tax legislation has not been updated in over 25 years and is at risk of no longer reflecting modern farm businesses.
- This should be updated to include income generated from: Converting produce grown or cultivated from that land into a value-added product;— Products or services directly reliant on the cultivation or maintenance of that land for primary production, such as agritourism;
- Participation in environmental markets such as, nature repair and carbon credits where it complements legitimate primary production activities.
- Alternative approaches exist, for example, Victoria's definition of primary production land recognises produce "whether in a natural, processed, or converted state," which provides some flexibility for diversified agricultural enterprises.
- NSW Farmers Budget submission FY 2026-27 details additional information.
- A survey conducted by NSW Farmers indicate that 12 per cent of respondents had avoided expanding or diversifying their businesses due to the risk of losing the PPL exemption.
- NSW Farmers Budget submission FY 2026-27 details additional information.

- Problems to be solved
- Modern farming enterprises are increasingly integrating value-adding activities, and diversifying farm operations to manage risk, respond to market opportunities and government policy.
- The current definition and interpretation of the primary production exemption fails to recognise these developments, resulting in exemptions being revoked where farms undertake complementary on-farm value-add such as agrifood manufacturing, agritourism operations and other activities encouraged by the NSW Government economic strategies.
 - This is creating disincentives and barriers for farm businesses to diversify activities and vertically integrate farm activities to manage risk, maintain profitability and achieve NSW Government priorities for agrifood, trade and agritourism.

Big offering no problem

The MOMENTUM continued last week with further increases to sales. The 43,497 bales was the largest offering since the same sale 12 months ago, and previously might have been cause for concern, price level wise. Buyer sentiment however was buoyant, and from the opening day the market rises were between 20 and 40 cents in the Merino fleece, and even stronger gains seen in the crossbreds. Wednesday's sale was one of consolidation, with only small movements to round out the selling days. Skirtings were the star performers, with wools over 5% VM gaining the best support, and cardings maintained their large gains of the prior week. Buyers that we have spoken to are reflecting the positive sentiment that is now evident throughout the whole pipeline. Exporters, top makers and spinners have all had good sales over the past four to five weeks, even with types that have been hard to move over the last year or so. The world economy hasn't changed during this time, but demand signals seem like they are filtering down from retailers and garment makers, reflecting in the enthusiastic purchasing seen in the sale rooms. Where might it end up if the economy shows improvement? - is now a question that is being pondered. The stumbling block with the improving market is the season that is unfolding around us all at the moment. Feeding sheep is a challenge, particularly when the cost associated with it doesn't work out at break even. At this stage, the current wool and grain market is seeing a ewe in containment feeding on a maintenance ration of barley, straw and lick costing around $1.50 a week. This sort of investment is shown to make long term gains, rather than selling and replacing when the dry breaks. There is a lot of information available on containment yards, and they don't need to be only for drought times. 44,000 bales were listed for this week, with Macwool and Carmichael wool offering over 2000 bales today, Thursday.

Vale Peter Milling OAM

22 December 1930 – 18 January 2026

LIVESTOCK, THOROUGHBRED and property industries joined family in mourning the peaceful death of leader stock and station agent Peter Oliver Milling OAM, on Sunday, January 18, aged 95.

A fourth-generation stock and station agent, Mr Milling dedicated more than 70 years to the advancement of livestock marketing, thoroughbred sales and racing, and rural and residential property sales and management across Central Western NSW.

His leadership helped grow the Milling agencies into a business now operating for more than 110 years.

Mr Milling was a tireless advocate for producers and agents, serving as President of the Dubbo and NSW Stock & Agents (Dubbo Stock & Station Agents Pty Ltd) and Inaugural Chairman of the Australian Council of Livestock NSW (Australian Livestock and Property Agents Association Ltd)

He played a pivotal role in the development of the Dubbo Sale Yards and was a respected leader in thoroughbred breeding and racing, including 37 years as Head of the Blood Horse Breeders Association.

Beyond livestock and property, Mr Milling showed remarkable foresight through diversification, establishing an international travel agency Peter Milling Travel alongside his wife, Toni, which became one of the first American Express International representative agencies in Australia.

As Inaugural Chairman of the Dubbo Development Corporation (Dubbo Regional Council), Mr Milling helped shape the growth and future of the City of Dubbo, which continues to benefit from his vision and leadership.

For 74 years, Mr Milling was also a trusted rural voice through his weekly radio 2DU broadcast, connecting and informing regional communities.

In recognition of his lifetime of service, Mr Milling was awarded the Order of Australia Medal (OAM) (The Order of Australia Association).

Mr Milling is survived by his daughters Danielle, Gabrielle and Felicity, and their families.

A minute's silence will be observed at the @Dubbo Regional Livestock Markets today (Thursday, January 22) at 8am before the prime cattle sale.

Mr Milling's legacy of integrity, leadership and service will be long remembered.

Family statement

"Dad's life was one of service - to his family, to the livestock industry and to the Dubbo community.

"We are deeply grateful for the many friendships and the kindness shown to Dad over the years. He will be greatly missed."

Michael Quach wants Australians to share their stories - ‘each of us have our own story to share’

Central West sends condolences for Bondi terrorist attack

AUSTRALIA DAY is a time for Australians to reflect, respect and celebrate, said Australia Day Ambassador Michael Quach in his address

What today means to each of us depends on who we are, where we come from and how we came to be Australian.

From the first nations whose ancestors lived on these lands for tens of thousands of years, to the descendants of settlers, children of migrants and those recently arrived.

Our national day is the time for us to come together to reflect, respect and celebrate being part of our nation’s story.

Today we come together to celebrate and share stories about what makes us unique and consider the Australia we aspire to be.

So, I’d like to share a little story of my own.

My mum came to Australia in 1980 as a Vietnamese refugee from a rural town south of present-day Ho Chi Minh city.

Like many migrants, she arrived seeking safety, stability and a chance to build a better future for her family.

My sisters and I grew up in the 1990s in a small suburban street in West Melbourne.

Our neighbours reflected the diversity of Australia even then.

A Greek family, a Maltese couple who loved fishing, and an elderly German woman named Melissa.

In many ways Melissa became my adopted |German grandmother and we became her adopted grandchildren.

As the only kids on the street in those days I have very fond memories of spending time in her beloved garden full of flowers and fruits. There were always apples, and every so often she’d transform those honey-crisp apples into the most magnificent apple pies, baked to perfection I’d say.

So, over a slice of warm apple pie Melissa would bring out her photo albums and share memories of where she came from.

Her past, the moments when she and her late husband built the very first house on our street – her roots in Australia.

She was sharing her story.

I didn’t speak a lick of German, nor do I remember the exact words she used, but I remember the feeling.

I remember understanding in a way that didn’t need language, just how lucky we are to be here, in this country that we call home.

That experience stayed with me.

It showed me how food has a way of bringing people together, of opening spaces for stories to be shared. And for connections to form across cultures, generations and experiences.

That sense of connection is something that continues to resonate with me today, particularly through the social enterprise my siblings and I founded – the On Best Before based in the heart of Newtown.

Our work focusses on recuing food from landfill, but at its heart it’s really about the people, about the community that we work for and making sure no one is left behind.

What connects us in Australia is our shared desire for unity, safety and prosperity that Australia represents.

While our experiences may be different, we are shaped by the same quote – that in this country where everyone belongs, everyone’s views, beliefs and contributions are valued.

As we reflect, respect and celebrate we come together to honour what makes us unique, and to consider the Australia we aspire to be – a nation that is indeed connected, compassionate and inclusive.

Today, I encourage everyone to share a piece of your story, and listen to the stories of others, whether it’s over a slice of cake, a coffee or a VB, because one thing remains true, and that is, we are all an important part in this nation’s on-going story.

WE STOOD united as a community and honoured the victims and those impacted in the Bondi terrorist attack during last week’s National Day of Mourning.

Members of the Jewish community in our area are extremely appreciative of the outpouring of support, compassion and solidarity shown across our region.

Last week, Parliament was recalled for an emergency two-day session to respond to the atrocity.

On Monday, the House of Representatives moved a condolence motion to the Australian Jewish community and the loved ones and friends of those whose lives were taken in such a horrific way. On behalf of the Calare electorate, I offered our sincere and heartfelt condolences, and the sympathy, support, solidarity and love of our region to all those still recovering.

While the perpetrators of this atrocity represent the worst in humanity, those brave first responders and bystanders who risked their lives to help the wounded, save others, or disarm the gunman surely represent the best.

These terrorists wanted us to give in to hatred, to live in fear, and to divide.

But we are Australians, and we are doing what we always have done when our country has faced tragedy, trauma, and challenge: we unite.

Standing up for law-abiding gun owners

On Tuesday 20 January, I voted against the Federal Government’s rushed gun laws legislation.

The Combatting Antisemitism, Hate and Extremism (Firearms and Customs Laws) Bill 2026 was a political response to the evil crime committed at Bondi.

Many people in the Central West were alarmed that the Government’s first reaction to this atrocity was to call for tighter gun controls rather than a Royal Commission that will shine a light on exactly what happened on 14 December.

This caused widespread anger amongst law-abiding gun owners in our region who believe that the Government has unfairly targeted and penalised them.

In Calare, we have more than 17,000 firearm license holders. The Government rushed the gun reforms through without giving our regional Australians the chance to have their say.

Everyone in our region supports genuine measures to make our communities safer, but we need a response that is based on evidence and facts, and not politics.

This should be the Government’s priority, not targeting law-abiding citizens.

I will continue to stand up for law-abiding gun owners in the Central West, and I will continue to hold the Government to account on this issue.

Deporting and banning radical Islamists and Neo-Nazis

In the emergency session in Parliament, I voted in favour of deporting and banning radical Islamists and their supporters and also Neo-Nazis.

One of these groups is Hizb ut-Tahrir. ASIO has identified it as a security threat.

One of their leaders has advocated for raising a Muslim army in Australia and imposing Sharia law. The Lindt Café terrorist attended a number of their events before committing that atrocity in 2014.

We often hear calls for people and groups who do not share our free and democratic values to be turfed out of the country.

There’s no use in just talking about it. After the Bondi terrorist attack it can’t be just words. We have to give the Federal Government the tools to actually do it. Punt them out.

It’s the same with the Neo-Nazis.

In the Second World War, what were Australians doing at places such as Tobruk, El Alamein, Greece, Crete, and the Battle of Britain?

Fighting against Nazis.

To my way of thinking, if the radical and militant Islamists and Neo-Nazis oppose theses new laws, that’s pretty good reason to vote in favour of them.

And so I did.

Congratulations to all Wellington and Stuart Town/Mumbil/Euchareena Australia Day awardees with Mathew Dickerson, Axxis Comworld

DURING THE Christmas break I was near a service station and noticed a semi-trailer stop to refuel.

The driver barely had time to stretch his legs before the tanks were full and he was back on the road.

It struck me that this ritual - fill up fast, keep moving, make money - is completely at odds with how most electric vehicles work today.

Waiting 20 minutes to recharge is fine when you’re ducking down to the shops. It’s a very different story when your livelihood depends on covering a thousand kilometres before dinner.

I’ve been saying for some time now that electric vehicles are a great solution to a problem we genuinely have, but they aren’t necessarily the only solution.

The idea of using electrons to push ions into a battery’s structure, locking energy in place and then releasing it again as you drive, is wonderfully simple and highly efficient.

For everyday driving, school runs and commuting, it makes perfect sense.

But long-distance transport lives in the opposite world. Trucks, trains and ships travel huge distances, carry enormous weight, and treat downtime as dead money.

For them, stopping for long recharging sessions is not just inconvenient, it’s expensive. And that’s where hydrogen starts to look less like a fringe idea and more like a missing piece of the puzzle.

What often gets overlooked is that battery vehicles and hydrogen vehicles are more alike than different. Both are electric.

Both use electric motors.

The key difference is how the electricity is stored and produced on board. Batteries store energy directly. Hydrogen vehicles carry hydrogen and generate electricity as they go.

One of the most persistent champions of this idea has been Toyota.

It’s fair to say the company has been late to the battery-electric party, and the official line from Toyota is that it’s been quietly investing in hydrogen for decades.

The unofficial line is “whoops!”

While newcomers and other manufacturers followed the EV path, Toyota focused on hybrid technology and now hydrogen.

In testing environments in the US desert, Toyota has had hydrogen-powered semi-trailers racing against their diesel equivalents. The hydrogen trucks are quicker off the line, vastly cleaner, and instead of pumping out exhaust fumes, they literally drip water from the tailpipe.

Refuelling is another part of the appeal.

Filling a hydrogen tank takes minutes and feels much like filling a petrol or diesel vehicle.

Compare that to a long-distance battery-electric road trip with charging stops and you start to see why hydrogen is so attractive for freight operators.

Of course, hydrogen has its own very real hurdle: the classic chicken-and-egg problem.

Consumers and businesses won’t buy hydrogen vehicles without refuelling stations, and companies won’t build refuelling stations without vehicles to use them.

Battery vehicles neatly sidestep this issue because every home is already an EV charging station. Plug in overnight and off you go.

This lack of infrastructure, rather than the technology itself, is the biggest reason hydrogen hasn’t taken off.

There are encouraging signs. Hydrogen can be produced using renewable electricity.

In some systems, hydrogen production is paired with electricity generation and even water recycling, creating closed-loop setups that dramatically cut emissions and resource use.

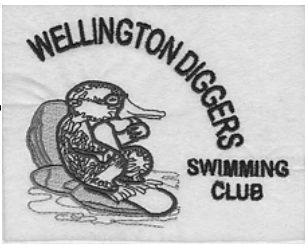

It’s clever, efficient and exactly the sort of thinking needed for heavy industry.

Hydrogen won’t replace battery vehicles, and it shouldn’t.

The future of transport won’t be one technology, but a mix of solutions doing what each does best.

Batteries for homes, cities and short trips. Hydrogen for the long haul, where range and refuelling speed matter most.

The future is often about choosing the right tool for the job.

Happy New Year from Wellington Arts

Wellington Arts (WACI) is stepping confidently into 2026, with exciting plans already underway.

While our "New" Gallery continues with renovations ,we're pleased to be rolling out a great range of creative and welcoming events to stay importantly connected with our community.

One of the first events on our calendar is our "Sip and Paint" Sunday afternoon in March. More on this to come.

February 28 Wellington Rotary Markets is back for the once-a-month-great-day in Cameron Park, where you shall also find Wellington Arts' latest info stall, so please drop by and say Hi.

Meet some of our local artists, browse creative work, hear our progress of our new gallery renovations, and maybe wanting to join our friendly group of volunteers and creative team.

Moving onto the month of May. Just in time for Mothers Day. We have added an event with a 'Twist' !! - details to be announced soon.

September 11th - Fong Lees Lane is back! Planning is already underway for this iconic biannual local event organised by Wellington Arts.

December shall see the return of our, now annual arts raffle.

Our 'Visual Arts' window display is an important reminder of how great it is to have local Art in our town of Wellington, details for sales are displayed on windows.

Then turning the corner and sighting the adjoining wall beautifully displaying our town 'Eagle'. Thankyou again to Artist Jack Randell and Artists team. We love our Community Mural. Shout out and huge thankyou to Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club allowing Wellington Arts to have a private Monthly Meeting space. Another stepping stone of community support, helping us all get closer to opening our 'New Gallery' for our Wellington.
