New artwork unveiled

The entrance to the Western Plains Cultural Centre has been transformed with the unveiling of the new Scoreboard artwork that will take pride of place for the next 12 months.

The artwork titled ‘Yindamarra Darrambal Binjang Program! Three paths, One Purpose’ is by artist Asher Milgate in collaboration with the Jeff Amatto “More Cultural Rehabs Less Jails” organisation and the young people involved in the Darrambal and Binjang programs.

The artwork is about presence, identity, resilience and connection to place. It brings together portraits made through the workshops and a focused photoshoot, with particular attention to the eyes as a powerful point of presence.

Next time you are at the Western Plains Cultural Centre be sure to stop and check it out.

The project is funded by Create NSW.

Letter to the Editor

Editor,

IT IS an interesting fact that Australia’s per capita GDP in early 2026 placed us in the top 10 countries in the world and the status of our economy indicated we are wealthy with a very good standard of living by world standards.

International Travellers would recognise this and there is a very good case for more Aussies to travel to gain this awareness.

However, with an emerging trend to redistribute the wealth that was created in the past through Government Incentive, initiative, enterprise, risk, hard work, resourcefulness, austerity and investment is a trend away from that which created today’s economy and enviable lifestyle.

The so called “Baby Boomers” who at one time were confronted with between 18 and 22 per cent mortgage interest to house their family and worked, saved and invested despite the Depression we didn’t have to have, a Global Financial Crisis and a prolonged Covid Pandemic etc are today being seen as contributing to an Intergenerational Wealth problem to be rectified.

When the Keating Government legislated mandatory Superannuation in the 1990’s this was a tremendous benefit to the future Government cost of Aged Pensions and today only 2.6pc of GDP goes to Aged Pensions, the lowest in the developed world and this is projected to go to 2.1pc very soon.

Many highly developed countries are today between 10pc and 14pc of GDP and we have a very high proportion of self-funded Retirees comparatively.

The accumulation in this “Keating Superannuation” continues to provide Investment funds to a wide range of activity and the Howard/Costello Government supercharged this Keating initiative with individual investment incentives and tax benefits and this grew the individual generational wealth of the smartest of the “Boomer” generation today.

Going back is not the way to go forward and we need more serious non idealistic rewarding technology, manufacturing and productivity development from the present and future generations to maintain our lifestyle.

Government continues to pursue ‘good character’ reforms

THE MINNS Labor Government is continuing to pursue reforms to ‘good character’ evidence at sentencing, after the Greens and Coalition voted to water down changes which would reduce trauma for victim-survivors.

Attorney General Michael Daley said the Government was urging the Greens and Coalition to back this reform, which seeks to remove ‘good character’ as a mitigating factor for all offences including sexual assault, murder, domestic and family violence and road crime.

The Greens and Coalition voted in the Legislative Council last week to gut the Government’s nation-leading reforms by removing ‘good character’ as a mitigating factor only for sexual offences.

Their amendments retained ‘good character’ for all other offences, with the court allowed discretion about whether to give it weight.

Mr Daley said the removal of good character references for sexual offences was a step in the right direction, and the Government would not stand in the way of this change.

“But it does not go far enough, and the Government will introduce legislation to abolish ‘good character’ as a mitigating factor for all other offences,” he said. “This will ensure that no victim of crime, or family victim of a person murdered or killed by a dangerous driver, will be forced to sit in court and listen to a convicted offender be described as someone of otherwise ‘good character.’”

He said the Government’s legislation was in line with recommendations from the independent NSW Sentencing Council, which engaged in extensive public consultation and recommended ‘good character’ be removed as a mitigating factor on sentencing for all offences.

“The Sentencing Council found the use of ‘good character’ evidence was vague, subjective and perpetuated inequality within the criminal justice system because it was not equally available to all offenders,” he said.

He said the Greens and Coalition have another chance to protect all victim-survivors of crime, and he urged them not to squib it again.

Farmers Face Permanent Flooding Under Controversial Inundation Bill

The NSW Liberals and Nationals have condemned the Minns Labor Government for pushing ahead with legislation that will erode the property rights of NSW landholders, causing further breakdown in trust with regional communities.

The Water Management Amendment (Easements for Inundation) Bill 2025 is proposed NSW legislation that will create a framework for permanent easements, enabling government water authorities to legally inundate private land for environmental water delivery purposes.

The Opposition has also raised alarm over a late-stage Government amendment, not properly consulted on with landholders or peak bodies, which would remove compensation rights for damage caused by government-directed inundation.

Shadow Minister for Water Steph Cooke said the Bill entrenched a rigid and unfair approach to environmental water delivery that locks landholders into permanent impacts without genuine choice.

“This Bill locks in permanent inundation easements as the only pathway to delivering water to the environment, stripping landholders of flexibility and removing the ability to tailor agreements to individual circumstances,” Ms Cooke said.

“What is most alarming is the Government’s refusal to genuinely consider deed-of-release arrangements, despite repeatedly acknowledging landholder concerns.

“Instead, they have doubled down on permanent easements and now, at the eleventh hour, introduced a change to remove compensation rights entirely.

“That is a major escalation with zero consultation.”

Ms Cooke said the late amendment removing compensation for inundation damage was ‘particularly egregious’ and demonstrated a disregard for basic fairness.

“The idea that landholders could suffer damage caused by government-managed inundation with no right to compensation is extraordinary,” Ms Cooke said.

“It removes long-standing legal protections and replaces them with a ‘trust us’ approach from a government that has already lost the confidence of many regional communities, and has a long legacy of water mismanagement.”

Shadow Minister for Agriculture Brendan Moylan said the Bill and the Government’s handling of it would have serious consequences for landholders across the Murray-Darling Basin.

“This legislation is Labor’s latest effort to erode property rights in regional NSW,” Mr Moylan said.

“Farmers are being asked to accept permanent easements that affect land value, borrowing capacity, and long-term succession planning, all while being told they have no real alternative.”

Mr Moylan said the lack of consultation on the compensation amendment was “completely unacceptable”.

“There has been no engagement with affected landholders or representative organisations before this change was introduced.

“It reinforces a pattern of decision-making where regional communities are expected to accept outcomes after the fact, rather than being genuinely involved from the start. Labor continues to show a disturbing disregard for landholders’ property rights in NSW.”

The Opposition moved an amendment to establish a legislated deed-of-release pathway as a genuine alternative to permanent easements, which was voted down by the Government and the Greens in the Legislative Council.

The debate now moves to the Legislative Assembly, where the Opposition will again oppose the legislation.

Inmate charged following alleged fatal stabbing at Wellington gaol

ABC reports

AN INMATE of Wellington Correctional Centre NSW died last Thursday after allegedly being stabbed by another inmate on Wednesday.

Officers were called to the centre at 3:30pm Wednesday following reports of a stabbing.

Police said a 26-year-old inmate at the mixed-security centre allegedly stabbed a 23-year-old fellow inmate, who was taken to Orange Hospital in a critical condition.

Police said they were informed the following morning that the man had died.

The 26-year-old man has been charged with murder and wounding a person with intent to cause grievous bodily harm.

He was been refused bail and will appear before Dubbo Local Court in July.

Police said a crime scene had been established and a report would be prepared for the coroner.

“Any death in custody is immediately reported to the NSW Coroner and subject to a compulsory, rigorous public inquiry,” the spokesperson said.

“Corrective Services NSW and the NSW Police are investigating the incident.”

Scientific credibility and the Gospel relevance of the Genesis

WELLINGTON BAPTIST Church is hosting Doctor Mark Harwood as a speaker on Saturday evening May 23 at 6pm.

Mark will be speaking on the evidence from the Bible and the evidence from Scientific observation on the Age of the Earth and the evidence of a designer in the creation of the world and the universe around us.

“We appreciate, that these topics are controversial and can be the cause of much debate and disagreement,” a church spokesperson said.

“However, the Scientific method, at the heart of scientific advancement, challenges our thinking and is designed to present hypotheses that challenge current frontiers.

“Evolution and Billions of years are the common modern narrative on how all that we see has come into being.

“Dr Harwood, will challenge those ideas from scientific evidence and the Bible.

“We realise that these topics have the potential to be viewed with great scepticism from many of the readers.

“However, please feel free to come along and be challenged.”

There will be opportunities to talk with Dr Harwood, over a light supper after the talk.

Biography – Dr Mark Harwood

Mark Harwood completed his tertiary education at the University of Sydney where he received B.Sc., B.E. (Hons) and Ph.D. degrees.

His postgraduate studies were focused on radio telescopes and computer techniques for antenna design and measurement.

Mark played a key role in the development of Australia’s national satellite system.

He has now retired from the aerospace industry where he was General Manager, Strategy and Planning for the Optus satellite business.

During his university years, Mark was something of a ‘closet Christian’ because he could not understand the basis of his faith.

Though each is a legally and financially autonomous body, we have formally unified our efforts as a federation of ministries under the banner ‘CMI-Worldwide’ that helps to ensure unity, harmony, and efficiency of outreach.

We provide real-world answers to the most-asked questions in the vital area of creation/evolution, where the Bible is most under attack today - Genesis.

We are apolitical and non-denominational (as an organisation, not as individuals within it).

Funding fix needed
for rural councils

Aboriginal site disrespected during Merotherie road destruction

RURAL RESIDENTS are crying out for reliable roads, the state’s peak farming body has told an Inquiry into Local Government Funding.

NSW Farmers Business, Economics and Trade Committee chair John Lowe appeared before the House of Representatives Standing Committee on Regional Development, Infrastructure and Transport as part of its Inquiry into Local Government Funding and Fiscal Sustainability urging urgent reform to secure reliable funding for rural councils and critical local infrastructure.

“Councils in rural, regional and remote areas have an enormous network of roads and they need greater certainty to maintain them, which supports farm businesses and community safety,” Mr Lowe said.

“Roads are the sole connection for many rural communities and farms, but too many councils are being forced to ‘patch and pray’ with unreliable, project-based funding.”

NSW Farmers called on the Australian Government to restore Financial Assistance Grants to a minimum of 1 per cent of total Commonwealth tax revenue, providing a stable funding base for local government and a stronger foundation for local road maintenance.

At the same time, Mr Lowe said, there needed to be a pause on special variation rates (SVR) and greater scrutiny on these applications.

“Farm businesses cannot keep absorbing sudden, steep and cumulative rate rises as councils scramble to fill funding gaps due to cost shifting from state and federal governments,” Mr Lowe said.

“They need a fairer, more sustainable model that enables councils to have funding sustainability and effectively deliver for communities in the regions, especially roads.

“It’s also critical that all landholders contribute equitably and fairly – increasing property acquisitions and land use changes from National Parks, State Forestry, biodiversity offsets by mining companies and electricity generation companies are reducing rateable land which can leave the burden to fall on others, including farmers.”

Labor caught red handed on regional roads fund

SHADOW MINISTER for Regional Transport and Roads Paul Toole has slammed the state government following a damning audit report into the administration of a $334 million Regional Roads Fund, saying it exposes a government more interested in politics than fixing roads across regional NSW.

The audit found Transport for NSW failed to administer the grants in line with mandatory requirements and did not establish guidelines or processes for prioritising and allocating funding correctly.

Mr Toole said the findings confirm what regional communities and councils have been saying; The Minns Labor Government has no plan, no transparency and no respect for country NSW.

“This audit removes any credibility the Minns government had left when it comes to regional roads funding,” Mr Toole said. “Labor has been caught red-handed, stealing out of the pockets of regional residents and handing the funds to their friends.”

The Audit found there was no clear framework guiding which projects should be prioritised or where the funding was being spent.

Four projects previously funded from the Urban Roads Fund were changed to the Regional Roads Fund without documentation of the rationale for the change of funding source.

“This audit should alarm every single taxpayer in NSW.” Mr Toole said the audit paints a picture of a government failing basic accountability tests. Country motorists travel longer distances at higher speeds and share roads with heavy vehicles, yet regional communities continue to get short-changed.”

I WAS out at Merotherie Road recently just north of Gulgong, invited to the farm of Nick Seis to see the damage wrought by EngeryCo and ACERERZ as they destroy hundreds of thousands of trees in the area to build power lines for the Central West Orana Renewable Energy Zone. The Seis family has been farming and protecting this area for five generations.

They had identified this specific site on the property as containing Aboriginal heritage, including grinding grooves, to be respected and undisturbed.

The NSW Government, EnergyCo and ACERERZ marked and flagged the site as “No Entry - Environmental Protection Zone”.

Despite being fully aware of the significance, they’ve deliberately ignored their own warning signs - cutting through the flagged borders to chop down massive trees on the area, doing untold damage to the site.

How many cultural artefacts and sites like this have been damaged or bulldozed across the region?

The NSW Government, EnergyCo and ACERERZ must be held accountable for this blatant disregard for our land, our history and the commitments they made to the community.

The federal government said it would investigate ...and nothing happened.

Out at the Durrigere State Conservation Area, north of Mudgee, they’ve bulldozed and wood-chipped an estimated 100,000 trees to put in these power lines.

If anyone else did it, they’d be up before the courts.

But because it’s the NSW Government there are no consequences.

I’d say we’ve lost one million trees across the region so far. ***

BACK IN the formative years of mobile phone connections and the internet, I felt some frustration with the world’s biggest technology companies.

Most of the innovation was bubbling away in Silicon Valley, built for densely populated cities with brilliant connectivity.

I would travel to the US, attend conferences, even speak at some of them, and walk away genuinely excited about the future.

Then I would return home to regional Australia and realise many of those futuristic ideas depended on something we simply didn’t have at the time - fast, reliable internet everywhere.

The demonstrations looked incredible on stage, but they often assumed a level of connectivity that disappeared the moment you drove a few hours inland.

To be fair, things have improved enormously since those days.

Mobile coverage is broader and speeds that once seemed impossible are now commonplace in suburban homes.

But Australia is a very big country. Some farming properties are larger than entire nations. In parts of the outback, stocking rates can approach one beast per 100 hectares. Installing towers across huge areas is neither simple nor cheap.

I suspect many graziers felt exactly the same frustration when they first saw demonstrations of virtual fencing technology.

The concept sounded almost magical.

Cattle wearing smart collars could be guided by invisible digital boundaries instead of physical fences.

Farmers could move herds using an app rather than spending days mustering livestock.

The catch, however, was connectivity.

Early systems relied on mobile coverage or proprietary radio towers. That worked in some areas, but for massive cattle stations spread across varied terrain, the infrastructure costs quickly became enormous.

Now, though, the equation may finally be changing. Smart cattle collars are now available that can connect directly to low-earth orbit satellites.

In simple terms, the collars no longer need nearby towers or strong mobile reception.

If the animal can see the sky, it can potentially stay connected. That single shift could dramatically reshape farming across remote Australia. The collars themselves are a fascinating blend of behavioural science and modern technology.

Using GPS, sound cues and gentle vibrations, cattle can be trained to recognise virtual boundaries.

Instead of barbed wire fences stretching for kilometres, a farmer can redraw paddocks with a few taps on a smartphone.

Fences are expensive to build, expensive to maintain, and often vulnerable to floods, storms and wildlife damage. Virtual fencing replaces steel and timber with software.

What interests me most is not simply the gadgetry, but the broader shift it represents.

I have often said that regional areas, and farmers in particular, are innovative in their solutions because they have to be - but technology infrastructure held back many developments.

More densely populated areas often received technology upgrades before regional locations.

Streaming services and cloud computing all flourished where population density justified the investment.

Low-earth orbit satellites are changing that balance. Instead of relying solely on towers planted across the landscape, thousands of satellites overhead can beam connectivity into places previously considered too expensive.

In this case, the technology is not only about saving labour. Better herd monitoring can improve animal welfare. Smarter grazing management can reduce land degradation. Farmers can rotate stock more precisely, giving pasture time to recover and potentially improving productivity.

There is also the social angle to consider. Technology that reduces repetitive labour while improving profitability could help attract a new generation back to agriculture.

I am sure Banjo Paterson would have had a poem in him about the surreal image of cows in outback Queensland communicating with satellites orbiting Earth at thousands of kilometres an hour while farmers controlled fences with smartphones.

Grant recipients call in to say thanks

TWO LOCAL recipients of the Wellington – Stop the Brain Drain university grant scholarships were back home recently and called into the Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club to thank the club for backing the grant program conducted by Wellington Lions Club.

Bonnie Sheridan is in the middle of her Batchelor of Nursing studies at Wollongong University, have completed her HSC in 2024.

Interest in this three-year course started around the time her Nan, Beryl Sheridan was ill.

“I wasn’t sure what I wanted to do until Nan got sick and I saw how lovely the nurses were towards her when she was in palliative care,” Bonnie said.

“From this experience I felt I wanted to give back and follow that in the way those nurses did.”

She was she was thinking of doing theatre nursing, when she finishes her bachelor-ship.

“It’s a bit higher pay and also more interesting, but then later, I want to go into age care.”

Her $3000 grant will go towards accom-odation.

“Mum and dad are paying for it at the mo-ment; this will help a lot.”

Bonnie said she wanted to return to Well-ington sometime in the future.

Another grant recipient, Georgia Miller, caught up over the phone and said she had just finished a bridging course in her first semester at the University of Newcastle and moves on to a Batchelor of Social Work next term.

“I feel it is important for me to carry out social work back in my community,” she said.

“I’d like to come back, as I see a need both in the younger and older members of our community and would like to help them in my home town.”

Georgia said the grant would go towards payment of her accommodation.

Talking of her recent exams she said she thought she did well.

“I haven’t received all my official grades, but I passed all from my assessments, so that’s looking good.”

Both girls said they appreciated the grant program provided by the Soldiers Club and Lions and agreed that while the grants were of financial benefit in the short term, they are a great incentive for recipients to think closely at returning to their home town or a region to support communities like their own.

Wellington Soldiers Memorial Club general manager, Stephen Hodge said he was impressed by two local grant recipients calling in to say thanks for the step up.

Bonnie Sheridan and her father Wok are pictured with Stephen and Stella-May Miller, whose daughter Georgia had just phoned from Wollongong.

JUNIOR CRICKET in Wellington delivered a successful season for all of its young players with Squadron Energy playing a key role in that success.

Ungula Wind Farm sponsored the junior club from the Wellington District Cricket Association for the 2025/2026 season, which led to the purchase of brand-new playing shirts and caps for players.

It also played a vital role in providing awards for the club’s end-of-season presentation last month, ensuring players were recognised and celebrated for their efforts.

Wellington Junior Cricket recorded strong participation across the season, fielding teams in Grades 12A, 14B and 14A, with players demonstrating resilience, teamwork and sportsmanship throughout the competition.

Squadron Energy Regional Economic Development Manager Bart Sykes said supporting grass-roots sport was a great way to back local communities.

“Squadron Energy is pleased to support Wellington Junior Cricket Club and the important role it plays in bringing young people together and building the community,” he said.

“Local clubs like Wellington rely on local volunteers, families and sponsors to thrive, and we’re proud to contribute to an environment where young players can develop their skills, build confidence and enjoy being part of a team.”

A dedicated group of committee members, along with coaches, scorers, and parents, all played vital roles in ensuring a smooth and enjoyable season for players.

THE ENTRANCE to the Western Plains Cultural Centre has been transformed with the unveiling of the new Scoreboard artwork that will take pride of place for the next 12 months.

The artwork titled ‘Yindamarra Darrambal Binjang Program! Three paths, One Purpos’e is by artist Asher Milgate in collaboration with the Jeff Amatto: More Cultural Rehabs Less Jails organisation and the young people involved in the Darrambal and Binjang programs.

Artist Asher Milgate said it was significant to have the work positioned at the front of the Western Plains Cultural Centre, where it can be seen by the wider community.

“It creates visibility not just for the artwork, but for More Cultural Rehabs Less Jails, the young people involved and the positive work happening through the programs,” Mr Milgate said.

“I hope it encourages dialogue around the importance of these programs and becomes another step toward recognition, support and coming together in a positive way.

“The artwork was created through collaborative workshops with the More Cultural Rehabs Less Jails programs, where we talked, listened, explored light and looked at how it shapes perception,” Mr Milgate said.

The artwork is about presence, identity, resilience and connection to place. It brings together portraits made through the workshops and a focused photoshoot, with particular attention to the eyes as a powerful point of presence.

Community Recognition
HAVE YOU ever seen my social media posts or read the section in my fortnightly newsletter about presenting a Community Recognition Statement to someone and wondered what that's all about?
Community Recognition Statements are an opportunity for Members of the NSW Parliament to acknowledge outstanding constituent achievements or express words of thanks or condolence in Hansard - the official parliamentary record.
Recognition can be given to individuals or groups, and may highlight contributions to community, a special milestone or receipt of an award or honour.
The Leader's very own Mark Griggs has been acknowledged with a Community Recognition Statement on several occasions, as have many other Wellington and District locals.
In fact, just last week I recognised seven-year-old Audrey Burfitt for her incredible efforts to raise over $1500 for the Darrambal Program through a cupcake sale at Jespresso over the Easter weekend.
Well done, Audrey!

I do my best to keep across what's happening in the Dubbo electorate, but I would love your help to make sure credit is given where it's due.
If you know of someone who deserves recognition, contact my office with the details of who they are and why they should be recognised.

BROKEN HIGHWAYS AND BROKEN PROMISES

„Yet here they are breaking that promise just 12 months since the election.

I was bitterly disappointed that there was nothing in the budget to help our businesses being smashed to pieces by the closure of the Great Western Highway.

The Prime Minister has already conceded that the failure of the Convict Bridge was the fault of successive governments, so that being the case, it's the responsibility of his government to put some serious money down to help our businesses going broke because of government negligence.

Unbelievably, the budget contained no support for our businesses and no funding for long-term high-speed road access in and out of the Central West.

What a disgrace.

Election Lies and a Breakdown of Trust

One thing that has really turned people off the major parties is that they never keep their election promises and seem all too happy to mislead the public if they think it will help them politically. The Government's plans to change the tax laws around negative gearing and capital gains tax are the latest examples of this.

Before the election the Prime Minister and Government repeatedly said that there would be no changes. Yet here they are breaking that promise just 12 months since the election.

Regardless of what you think about these tax changes, if the government had wanted to bring them in, it should have had the integrity to go to the electorate and ask for a mandate for them. It deliberately didn't do that.

Instead, we have more broken promises, more spin and a collapse of public trust in political parties and governments.

Given the latest round of election promises that turned out to be lies, it's not hard to see why. You can't build public trust on broken promises and you can't run a regional economy on broken roads.

QUESTION

QUESTION TIME NOT ANSWER TIME ON THE GREAT WESTERN HIGHWAY!

Earlier this week in Question Time I asked the Prime Minister:

"The Great Western Highway at Victoria Pass has now been closed for two months. Our businesses are desperate. They're going broke because of negligence of successive governments. It's a debacle and the response by state and federal governments has not been good enough. You announced plans for a tunnel under Victoria Pass in 2010. Will you now put some serious money down for a business support package and high-speed road access to the central west?"

Sadly, the PM did not respond and flicked the question to the Minister for Infrastructure, to answer on his behalf. Infuriatingly, all we got from the Minister was a read out of the latest press releases from Transport for NSW! As the Minister was not answering the question I raised a point of order on relevance, but sadly got the same talking points. There was no sympathy for our businesses at all.

Businesses in the Hartley area and across our region are on the brink of going broke. I will not give up on advocating for these businesses, and the livelihoods of their employees and owners who do so much for our communities. They deserve nothing less than the support of the state and federal governments who caused this whole fiasco in the first place.

Central West Land Services. April rainfall has been well below average across the region, continuing to impact drought affected areas. Producers are closely monitoring conditions, particularly surface water and feed availability as they adjust autumn planning and management decisions for their livestock, winter fodder or crop programs. Winter sowing programs are mixed with dry conditions influencing variety decisions and whether to plant oilseeds or pulses or not sow at all.

Drought conditions are likely to intensify in parts of the North East, Hunter, Central Tablelands and Central West with some areas transitioning to the more severe Drought category according to the DPI drought forecast for 31st July. ***

Strengthening dollar cheapens wool market

A STRONGER Australian dollar had the greatest influence on the wool market last week, breaking through the 72-cent level for the first time since 2022. The EMI in US terms was 15 cents stronger, however 11 cents softer in AUD. Tuesday opened at all three selling centres, with a range of prices in the Merino fleece from 30c dearer to 29c cheaper nationally. Day two of selling saw prices firm up for better Merino fleece types while poorer styles suffered, reinforcing the selective nature of the competition at the moment. Skirtings continue to be well sought after and slightly dearer, cardings strengthened in all centres, and crossbreds had another positive week, the finer of them gaining the most support. Exporters are telling us that the strength shown in the knitwear sector, which takes the majority of the Merino pieces and some of the tender fleece wool, is the key driver of the market currently. Fleece sales have become more challenging after the substantial lift in the market two weeks ago, whereas knitwear demand has seen prices strengthen in that time. This means that the difference between fleece and skirting values is quite narrow, with processors at present seeking lower cost blends which allows them to produce product as manufacturing margins remain tight. Finer crossbreds are finding their way into some of these blends, which is showing in the gains in value that we have seen lately. In saying that, the bullish tone is still intact, with the opportunity for top makers to buy at levels that will help long term averages, particularly given that offering size will continue to diminish heading forward. Seasonal conditions nationally and breeding objectives has seen the average Merino micron come back to 18.7 this current year. Next to skin wear is generally around 18.5 micron, meaning that the availability of wool is far greater at present. Changes in purchasing habits in China are such that this next to skin garment is being sought after more than the traditional woollen outerwear, such as suits, jackets, skirts and coats, which tend to be bought as infrequently as two or three times in a lifetime. Lighter garments such as T-shirts are not typically seen as one-off pieces, are priced to be more accessible to a broader range of consumers, and don’t have the lifespan in terms of durability or fashion.

Bale numbers continue to shrink this week, with just over 31,000 bales on offer, with Macwool and Carmichael wool cataloguing 1080 bales for yesterday’s sale.

Buddy Breakfast brings community spirit to life during Catholic Schools Week

ST MARY'S School recently came together in a heartwarming celebration of community spirit through a special "Buddy Breakfast" held as part of Catholic Schools Week and as part of the school's ongoing wellbeing initiatives.

The event saw students from across all year levels gather to share breakfast, strengthen friendships, and enjoy time together in a relaxed and welcoming setting.

The morning was filled with conversation, laughter, and a strong sense of belonging as students connected with their buddies and others in the school community.

More than just a shared meal, the Buddy Breakfast highlighted the importance of connection, belonging, and student wellbeing, providing an opportunity for students to experience the strength of a community that actively supports the wellbeing of every child.

The event also reflected this year's Catholic Schools Week theme, "Guided by Faith, Inspired by Hope, Committed to Learning," as it showcased the kindness, generosity, and shared commitment that exist across the school. A true highlight of the morning was the way the entire school community came together to make the event possible.

Families generously donated eggs, parents volunteered their time to assist with cooking and preparation, staff supported the coordination and running of the breakfast, and students contributed in a range of ways to help the morning run smoothly.

This shared effort reflected a strong and united community working together in support of student wellbeing.

SRC students are to be commended for their leadership in bringing the event to life, creating an opportunity that strengthened connections and celebrated the spirit of togetherness within the school.

The success of the Buddy Breakfast highlighted what makes the St Mary's community so special - families, staff, and students working together to create a welcoming and supportive environment for all.

Big turn-out for sponsors day

ROUND 5 – Sponsors Day at home v Narromine Gorillas

A MASSIVE day at Rygate Park, the home of the Redbacks, with a huge thank you to every sponsor, member, family and fan who came out to back the boys.

Women had a bye this week.

Second Grade were nothing short of brilliant. A 27–0 shoutout of the Narromine Gorillas, outstanding stuff in every part of the field.

The Redbacks are now the only undefeated side left in Second Grade and have officially claimed ‘top spot’ on the ladder.

Four from four, no losses, on a roll. What a side.

First Grade missed the mark this week, going down 14–38 to a quality Narromine outfit who were on song from the opening whistle.

To the boys’ credit, they never took a backward step and kept fighting until the final whistle.

There’s plenty to build on, and the squad is fired up for a big block of training before our next home game.

All grades bye this week.

Back into it on Saturday May 23 at home in Wellington against CSU Mitchell Rugby, all three grades. Up the Redbacks!
